

Gas on Sundays? Nixon may have to man the pumps

A Herald staff report
Few gasoline dealers in the Northwest suburbs plan to return to a seven-day-a-week operation, as indicated in a spot check of local dealers. This, despite President Nixon's announcement Tuesday that he's withdrawing the request for voluntary Sunday closings by dealers. The request for Sunday closings had been effective since last Nov. 25.

A sampling of 37 dealers turned up the following results: 21 do not plan to open their stations on Sunday; 13 said "maybe" they will do so, and 3 said they will open their station Sundays.

The American Automobile Assn., said 17 per cent of the nation's service stations were open last Sunday, compared with 11 per cent in January and 12 per cent in February.

A resounding "no" to questions about Sunday sales is indicated in these comments from Northwest suburban dealers:

• John Molick of Molick's Standard Service in Des Plaines: "No. I found out what it's like to be home with my wife and family after 12 years in this business, and I like it."

• At Frank's Gas for Less in Des Plaines, a spokesman said "Ask Nixon, where do I get the gas? If I could get more gas, I would be glad to stay open on Sunday to accommodate my customers."

• "The hell with what the President says. What does he know? He flies," said an attendant at John's Super Shell in Palatine.

• "I'm taking advantage of a good thing," said an attendant at Al's Enco in Rolling Meadows. Taking Sunday off is like getting away from "a big headache," he said.

• Jim Weber, day manager at Walden Mobil station in Schaumburg said "No we're not. Sunday is a bad day and we feel we have a day off coming, too."

• At the Arlington Heights Citgo station, 1001 S. Arlington Heights Rd., a spokesman said he doesn't have enough gas to open Sundays.

• "Hell no, I won't open," said Jack Parker, operator of Arlington Park Arco in Arlington Heights. "People who need gas for Sundays can get it Saturday night or during the day."

• "When the banks are open Sundays, then I'll open on Sundays," said Jack Berndt at Jack's Marathon station in Prospect Heights. He's been closed for a year on Sundays.

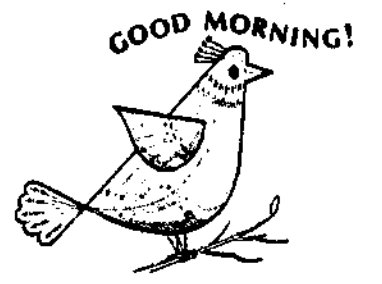

AMONG THE "maybe" responses are the following comments:

• "We still don't know yet, because the allocation isn't high enough," said Harry Howland, owner of the South Point Shell station in Wheeling.

• "I don't know anything about it. The company informs me what to do and I do it," said Elmer Waskosky of Pay Less Stations in Wheeling.

• At the Montgomery Ward station in Mount Prospect, assistant manager Joe Urbansus said, "I don't know yet. We haven't gotten anything from our corporate office yet."

Passolt expects tax hike when new budget is OK'd

by LYNN ASINOF

Wheeling Village Mgr. George Passolt predicted an increase in residents' 1975 village taxes as a result of sizable increases expected in the 1974-75 budget currently being prepared.

Passolt said Wednesday he could not predict the size of the budget or the tax increase since the budget is still in preliminary working stages. He said he is now finishing the tabulation of personnel costs for the coming year, and will then turn to other areas of village operation.

Passolt said he hopes to have the budget to the village board by mid-April for a first review. The 1974-75 fiscal year begins May 1.

"In all honesty, I don't see how we can avoid a tax increase this year," Passolt said. "With the inflation cycle, I feel it is imperative or else cut village services."

IN PREDICTING a tax increase, Passolt said he did not think new development in the village will increase the assessed valuation enough to cover the hike in the village budget. He said that in past years the village has tried to prevent tax hikes by adjusting the budget to the anticipated rise in village property values.

Last year, the village portion of the property tax bill decreased 21 per cent from 72.2 cents per $100 assessed valuation to 57 cents per $100 assessed valuation. Passolt said this decrease was caused by a jump in the village's assessed valuation due to new developments and the township-wide reassessment of property values.

Passolt has been unable to predict this year's increase in village property values because of the recent township-wide adjustment. Passolt also said that hikes in property values become less significant as the village's total assessed valuation increases. The village's latest assessment is at $96 million.

PASSOLT DECLINED to outline the areas that will cause the budget hike, saying he has not presented the financial program to the village board. In the past, however, the largest increases have come under personnel, which accounted for about 42 per cent of last year's budget.

Employees have traditionally asked for cost-of-living adjustments in their salaries. Negotiations have not been scheduled this year between the village board and the Employee Wage and Salary Committee.

Despite the anticipated increase in village taxes, the village accounts for only a small portion of residents' total tax bill. Therefore, the village tax hike does

Wheeling woman, 24, raped

A Wheeling woman, 24, was abducted from the lobby of her apartment building and taken to a deserted construction site where she was raped early Wednesday, Wheeling police said.

Police are looking for a man about six feet tall, 170 pounds, white and between age 22 and 25. He was driving a red or maroon older model Chevrolet or Ford, Police Lt. Ronald Nelson said.

The man, wearing a red ski-type mask, grabbed the woman as she entered the lobby of her apartment building, about 12:05 a.m. police said. He reportedly held a six-inch knife to her throat and told her to cooperate.

Police said the attacker put a stocking hat over his victim's face and then led her outside to his automobile. The attacker then drove the woman to a construction site which police believe was at Tahoe Village, Buffalo Grove Road north of Hintz road.

Police said the woman was raped there and then returned to her own street. She ran to a neighbor's apartment and called police. This was about 12:35 a.m., police said.

Nelson said the name of the apartment complex was being withheld so as not to panic the residents. He said he would want the residents to form any kind of vigilante group to try and find the attacker.

1-week wait on adopting procedures

Wheeling trustees are allowing one final week of review before directing the village attorney to draw up ordinances revising board procedure.

The revisions were suggested by Trustee John Koeppen to encourage greater citizen participation in village government. The trustee said that while he has thought about the revisions for some time, the ideas took form as a result of recent board accountability sessions.

One of the proposed changes would allow residents to address the village board on any topic during a half-hour period set aside for verbal communications. In the past, residents have complained that it is difficult to talk with the board since they are required to request verbal communications by noon of the Friday before the board meeting.

A SECOND PROPOSAL would require the board wait at least one week before passing any ordinance. The ordinance would be placed on public display following its first reading, with final board action scheduled after a minimum of one week's wait.

Trustee Al Lang has suggested that a bulletin board be posted in the village hall entrance way to allow residents 24-hour access to any proposed ordinance. The trustees said residents will be able to make more intelligent contributions to ordinances after such a review.

The board is also considering a proposal to expand the board committees to include all six village trustees. Currently the committees consist of three members, with two meetings often being scheduled at the same time.

THE TRUSTEES SAID they will get a better feel for the village by participating in all committee meetings, including the finance committee's monthly review of bills.

"I think all six board members should have a look at the bills," Lang said. "It gives you an idea of what's going on."

If the board directs the village attorney to prepare the ordinances at the coming board meeting, all three revisions could be in effect by mid-April.

School committee meeting canceled

A meeting of the finance committee of the Dist. 23 School Board scheduled for March 27 has been canceled. The meeting had been scheduled to begin work on the 1974-75 school budget.

The meeting will be rescheduled after the board reorganizes following the April 13 election.

Believe it—it's spring!

Today is the first full day of spring.

It officially began Wednesday at 7:07 p.m., when the sun made its yearly appearance over the equator, which is known as the vernal equinox.

In California Tuesday, specifically at San Juan Capistrano, the swallows returned, as they have for at least 175 years. They made the 3,000-mile flight from Argentina to the cheers of thousands of townspeople.

Local residents call it "Swallows Homecoming Day" ever since the birds began coming back to the same spot every year on the date since March 19, 1798.

Locally, area park districts and golf courses are preparing their grounds for the increase in outdoor sports and other activities.

Gardeners are preparing for better days ahead, culminated in the warm summer months when plants and flowers take full bloom.

But some people are wondering why anyone would even talk about spring.

"It's 35 degrees outside! What do you mean, spring?"

Mugalian faces fight in November

Mugalian

State Rep. Richard Mugalian, incumbent 2nd District Democrat, may be fighting hard to retain his legislative seat in November. David Carey of Elgin apparently outpolled Mugalian in Tuesday's primary and will be listed above him on the November ballot. Because the 2nd District is predominantly Republican it usually sends only one Democratic representative to Springfield. Mugalian, who retained his Palatine Township committeeman post in another race Tuesday, said of Carey "I'm surprised he did so well. I didn't know how much he was spending on media campaigning. I was running pretty much just on my record. We were more concerned with the committeeman race."

Palatine downtown plan fears

Some downtown Palatine merchants are concerned that redevelopment plans may eliminate some of the parking spaces they depend on for business. The plans, reviewed yesterday by representatives of 13 firms, call for an end to on-street parking. A bakery and grocery store would be forced to relocate if parking is eliminated. A hardware store and bicycle shop could also be affected by the end of street parking spaces, merchants said.

Hoffman payoff 2nd on site

Ex-officials in Hoffman Estates may have been paid off twice for rezoning the same property for consecutive owners, according to Edward B. Stulberg, testifying under an immunity grant in the U.S. District Court zoning bribery trial of Bernard Peskin, former attorney for Kaufman and Broad Homes Inc. Stulberg, K&B's former vice president in land acquisition and zoning, said yesterday Peskin told him the former owner of the land had paid bribes to obtain zoning for a retirement community. The prior owner was Ross Cortese, owner of Rossmore Corp., builder of Leisure World on the west coast. K&B pleaded no contest to bribery charges in connection with a later rezoning of the same property. Six former village officials have also pleaded guilty in the case.

Wheeling woman raped

A Wheeling woman, 24, was abducted and raped early Wednesday by a man who accosted her in the lobby of her apartment building. The man, wearing a red ski-type mask, threatened the woman with a knife, put a stocking hat over her head and then drove her to a construction site where he attacked her, police said.

Two-cent stamps running out

Two-cent stamps, much in demand since first class mail rates went from 8 cents to a dime March 2, have all but disappeared from post offices in Schaumburg and Hoffman Estates. One-and-three-cent stamps are also in demand. Postmaster E. A. Budzyn said 20,000 two-cent and 50,000 one-cent stamps were ordered in anticipation of the rush. Other areas post offices report sharp increases in demand for the small denomination stamps but have not run out as yet.

Indictments due today

Indictments are expected today against about 25 officials of at least 10 suburban communities in a Cook County Grand Jury investigation of kickbacks paid for chemical purchases. Among those who may be named by the grand jury are two Schaumburg village employees and a park district worker. One of the village officials could face up to 11 charges of bribery, official misconduct and conflict of interest.

Ban subscription fire protection?

State's Atty. General Carey plans to propose legislation outlawing subscription-type fire and ambulance service. Carey's office recently investigated the Jan. 6 death of Mrs. Jean Pettie of Elk Grove Township, who died after being refused ambulance service by Elk Grove Village. The village has been one of many departments that provide emergency service to nearby unincorporated areas for a fee.

Fulle to play key role in selection

5 already in running for RTA post

according to the state's RTA law approved in Tuesday's referendum.

A fifth commissioner, as yet unnamed replacement for William Erickson, who died recently, also may be included in the decision-making. There is speculation that Carl Hansen, Elk Grove Township committeeman and GOP candidate for the county board, will be appointed to fill that vacancy.

None of the men mentioned Wednesday admitted to being actively interested in a seat on the RTA board. Commissioners will be paid $200 a day, up to $25,000 a year, plus expenses.

Walsh termed any suggestion that he would accept an RTA board position "highly speculative. I can't be considered an aggressive person in this at all."

WALSH, WHO opposed ratification of the RTA bill, said the narrow margin by which the bill was approved suggests that an appointee who is part of a "loyal minority" would be appropriate.

RTA proponent and former Arlington Heights Village Pres. John Woods said yesterday he would strongly urge Walsh's appointment.

Yesterday Woods drafted a telegram to the suburban county commissioners urging them to consider and appoint Walsh to the board, citing Walsh's "constructive criticism" of RTA as a plus. Woods, whose telegram also went to former Gov. Richard Ogilvie and numerous public officials, termed Walsh an appropriate watchdog for the board.

Teichert, who appeared several times on television urging defeat of the RTA, said "no one's ever talked to me. I'm just someone who got backed into this by default."

Asked whether he would accept an appointment to the RTA board, he said, "I can't believe that for two representatives from the county, anyone would seek me out."

Pahl said he was not sure whether he would want to be a candidate for the RTA board.

"I would give it close consideration if asked. But I haven't made any pro or con decisions yet."

IN SCHAUMBURG, Atcher said he would accept a position on the RTA board if it were offered.

"Naturally since it has been my feeling that mass transportation in some form of regional transportation agency is a must for the future, I am not unhappy that the proposition passed."

"However, I will also hope that our legislators who have brought out the weak points of the current bill are successful in getting some of the amendments through before RTA is a fact," he said.

Tecson was not available for comment Wednesday.

FULLE SAID HE wants to put together er a solid coalition of suburban representatives on the RTA board to balance the four members who will be appointed by Chicago Mayor Richard Daley.

"Aside from the fact that we want top-drawer people, there's only one prerequisite — an unyielding commitment to be a team. A team is the only way to force some give and take and force compromise in programs, planning and selection of an executive director," Fulle said.

Once named, the RTA board must call its first public meeting within 42 days.

AROUND THE STATE: It will be partly cloudy in the northwest and mostly cloudy in the extreme east and central region with a chance of snow flurries and a chance of rain or snow in the extreme south. Highs will be in the low 30s in the extreme north to the upper 30s or low 40s in the extreme south.

AROUND THE NATION: North-

westerly winds associated with a low pressure center and a cold front will bring snow and subfreezing temperatures to the Central Rockies and Central Plains from the Northern Plains. Snow is expected from Massachusetts into Maine. A low in the Carolinas brought widespread shower activity to the mid-Atlantic states.

Nixon vows space program backing

President Nixon yesterday toured the Lyndon B. Johnson space center in Houston and pledged to back the national space program in its drive for more money to finance new projects. Nixon also awarded the last three Skylab astronauts — Gerald Carr, William Pogue, Dr. Edward Gibson — with the NASA distinguished service medal. The space program has been languished as Congress has cut back space exploration appropriations.

FDA recalls mushrooms, blood plasma

The Food and Drug Administration has ordered the recall of mushrooms canned by a French firm, and of two plasma products manufactured by an Illinois firm and used in hospitals. The mushrooms are sold mainly to volume users. The labels are: "Champignons de Paris" "Sexton French Mushrooms" and "Roland Imported French Mushrooms." The plasmas recalled were Albumin 5 and Plasma Plex by Armour Pharmaceutical Co.

Woman cut in foiling extortionist

With a knife at her throat and an extortionist telling her to telephone his demands to an airline, Rebecca Dotlich instead calmly dialed the security police at Weir Cook Airport in Indianapolis. An officer shot the assailant, Dennis Tillman, as he started to cut her throat. Miss Dotlich was not seriously injured. The assailant is in the hospital with a bullet in the neck.

Auto-train service to Green Bay?

Rep. Los Aspin, D-Wis., said yesterday he has been told that Amtrak will consider expanding its auto-train service to Wisconsin if an experimental line between Indiana and Florida is successful. Auto-train enables persons to ride trains for long distances and take cars with them. Aspin had proposed the auto-train service be provided as far north as Green Bay.

Fire rages in Florida swampland

A deliberately set forest fire that an official said could "burn right to Miami" blazed across thousands of acres of southwest Florida swampland yesterday. The fire was seen as most threatening in the Big Cypress Swamp area, which lost thousands of trees in a fire last year.

House passes minimum wage bill

The House yesterday passed legislation to raise the nation's minimum wage by stages to $2.30 an hour. The Senate has approved a similar bill. Rep. Albert Quie, R-Minn., hopes the bill will get to the President's desk for signing by the end of March, and a new minimum wage by May 1.

Suspend tuition hike at U. of I.

The Board of Trustees of the University of Illinois yesterday voted to suspend until further notice any tuition increase plans for the 1974-75 academic year. In a meeting at which Earl Hughes of Woodstock was reelected president, the board said financial planning for the year should be on the basis of resources recommended in Gov. Daniel Walker's budget message, plus a $1.5 million appropriation.

$74,000 for 2 Board of Trade seats

Warren Lebeck, president of the Chicago Board of Trade said yesterday two memberships on the CBT were sold for $74,000 this week, surpassing the previous high of $65,000 on March 21, 1973. Approximately 13 million contracts were traded during 1973.

Prosecution rests in narcotics trial

The prosecution rested yesterday in the trial of 10 narcotics agents charged with violating the constitutional rights of 11 persons during a series of drug raids. U. S. District Judge Omer Poos recessed the trial until Monday, when the defense will begin presenting witnesses.

W. Germany to meet Nixon's strength call

West German Foreign Minister Walter Scheel said yesterday his country would do its part to meet President Nixon's call for a strengthened Atlantic Alliance. Britain and France were reported pleased by Nixon's remarks in Houston Tuesday night. Scheel told the Bonn parliament "The Federal government will do everything in its power to contribute to the strengthening of the alliance."

French move to halt inflation

Against a background of strikes and industrial unrest, the French government yesterday announced a program aimed at halting the nation's runaway inflation. The program called for: a further squeeze on credit; reduction of the "value added" tax on some goods; earlier payment of income tax; refusal of price increases in subway fares or postage stamps; but granting a 7½ per cent hike in rail ticket prices; and abolition of the two-tier money market.

S. Viets refuse to attend JMC meeting

South Vietnam refused to attend a special meeting of the two-party Joint Military Commission, requested by the Communists, saying it was unnecessary and part of a Viet Cong plot to embarrass the government. The Saigon command also said 117 Communists and 63 government soldiers were killed between dawn Tuesday and dawn Wednesday in scattered battles.

Stocks stage slight increase

Encouraging economic developments in Washington helped give stocks a slightly upward boost in slow trading on the New York Exchange. The Dow Jones industrial average closed at 872.34, up 4.77. Declines slightly outnumbered advances, 674 to 668, among 1,763 issues traded. Volume reached 12,960,000 shares, compared to 12,000,000 in Tuesday's trading. The New York Stock Exchange index was up a fraction at 52.22, reflecting a gain of 11 cents a share.

Princess, Capt. Phillips uninjured

Royal limousine ambushed

LONDON (UPI) — A gunman with a kidnap note to Queen Elizabeth in his pocket, ambushed a royal limousine in which Princess Anne and her husband Capt. Mark Phillips were riding to Buckingham Palace Wednesday. He fired six shots through its windows with an automatic pistol.

The royal couple escaped injury, but four other persons were wounded before a policeman captured the gunman.

"It was an attempt to kidnap the princess," British Home Secretary Roy Jenkins told Parliament. He added, "The attempt did not succeed and neither the princess or Capt. Phillips hurt."

Police said the suspect was an Englishman from north London but did not give his name. They said he would be formally charged today. The contents of the kidnap note were not divulged.

The ambush occurred on the broad Mall about 200 yards from Buckingham Palace.

The princess and her 28-year-old husband were driving back from the showing of a documentary film on horsemanship, police said, when a white car suddenly overtook the limousine and forced it to the curb.

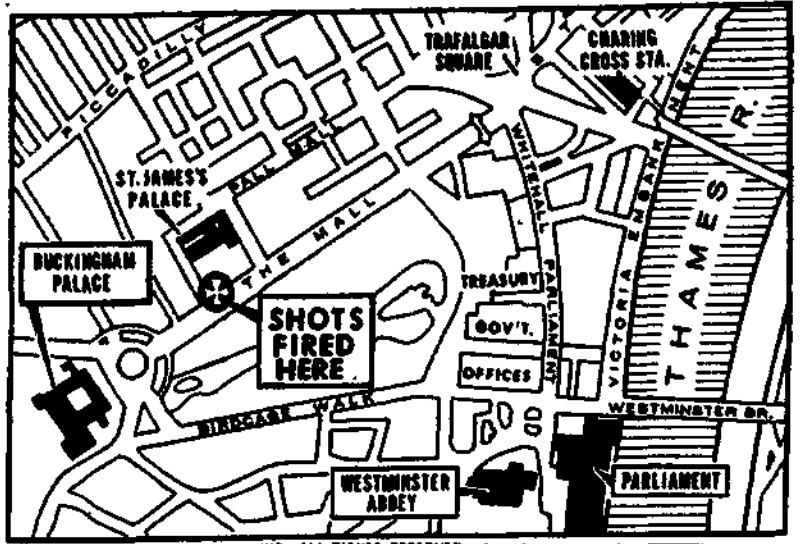

A man jumped out and sprayed the limousine with at least six shots, apparently from an automatic pistol, police said.

The wounded were the chauffeur, identified as Mr. Callender; Anne's personal bodyguard, Inspector James Beaton; Policeman Michael Hills, and Brian McConnell, a reporter for the Sun newspaper who was struck in the chest by a bullet which crashed through the window of a taxi as he was standing on the other side. Beaton was in Westminster Hospital in critical condition with three bullet wounds, and the chauffeur also was in serious condition.

Police said Beaton got off three shots at the gunman before his gun jammed and he was shot down.

A palace spokesman said the royal couple "are shaken up — anyone would be after a thing like that — but otherwise they are fine, thank God."

The attack was the first assassination attempt on Britain's royal family since June 5, 1939, when a shot was fired at the Duchess of Kent was leaving her home in central London's Belgrave Square. The duchess was unhurt.

NEWSMAP INDICATES the spot along the Mall leading to Buckingham Palace where a gunman fired shots into a car carrying Princess Anne and her husband, Capt. Mark Phillips.

Princess Anne had been threatened in June, 1971, by callers who said they planned to blow up Durham Cathedral.

No immediate member of the royal family has been actually assassinated for centuries.

Court asked to block secret report

From Herald news services

Lawyers for President Nixon's two former closest aides moved Wednesday to prevent The House Judiciary Committee from getting a secret grand jury report on Nixon's handling of the Watergate scandal.

John J. Wilson, attorney for H. R. Haldeman and John D. Ehrlichman, petitioned the U. S. Appeals Court to stop the committee from getting the report, as ordered Monday by District Judge John Sirica, who said it was "incredible" to argue that the report shouldn't be available to the House in a proceeding of so great import as an impeachment investigation.

Wilson argued that giving the committee the report would lead to news leaks that would "trigger publicity which in turn will deprive them (Haldeman and Ehrlichman) of a fair trial."

The two were among seven close associates or campaign aides of Nixon indicted March 1 for conspiracy in the Watergate cover-up. All have pleaded innocent.

At the time of the indictments, the grand jury turned over its secret report on Nixon's involvement, and asked Sirica to pass it on to the committee for its impeachment probe.

Wilson asked the appeals court to reverse Sirica's decision, and the district court to hold up giving the committee the report until the appeals court rules.

In related developments:

• House Republican Leader John Rhodes of Arizona urged the judiciary committee to narrow its inquiry, suggesting the committee "define the specific areas of presidential activity of interest" and seek to get presidential tapes and documents as evidence in those areas.

• Nixon friend Charles G. "Bebe" Rebozo met privately with the Senate Watergate committee, still investigating a $100,000 Nixon campaign contribution from billionaire Howard Hughes. Rebozo who has admitted holding the money, refused to answer any questions outside the committee room.

Charge trucker hiring bias

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Justice Department Wednesday filed its first civil rights suit against an entire industry, accusing the nation's trucking firms and two major unions of discrimination in hiring blacks and persons with Spanish surnames.

A consent decree was filed moments later in U. S. District court in which the seven major defendants, without admitting discrimination, agreed to substantially increase hiring of minorities.

Attorney General William B. Saxbe named 342 other freight carriers as "members of the defendant class," and a department spokesman said he expected the consent decree with the major firms to set a pattern.

Assistant Attorney General J. Stanley Pottinger said he expects a similar consent decree to be worked out shortly with the Teamsters Union and other unions named as defendants with regard to transfer and seniority practices.

Pottinger said this was the first such suit challenging employment practices of an entire industry, but indicated it would not be the last. He said his department was now in negotiations with the steel industry in a case to follow the same pattern.

The principal defendants in the suit were: Arkansas-Best Freight System Inc., Fort Smith, Ark.; Branch Motor Express Co., New York City; Consolidated Freightways Inc., Menlo Park, Calif.; I.M.L. Freight Inc., Salt Lake City, Utah; The Mason and Dixon Lines, Inc., Kingsport, Tenn.; Pacific Intermountain Express Co., Oakland, Calif.; and Smith's Transfer Corp., Staunton, Va.

Others named in the suit included the Teamsters Union, Teamsters' National Over-the-Road and City Cartage Policy and Negotiating Committee, and the Washington-based Trucking Employers Inc., which represents 53 trucking associations in union negotiations.

Golan Heights battling goes into its ninth day

From United Press International

The Golan Heights front between Syria and Israel exploded into its ninth day of shooting Wednesday. Syria said a two-and-a-half hour battle raged while Israel reported only sporadic shellings and said its forces did not fire back.

The latest incidents came as one Tel

Aviv newspaper said that Defense Minister Moshe Dayan may not go to Washington on March 29 as scheduled to negotiate troop disengagement with Syria unless Damascus softens its bargaining position.

Diplomatic sources in Cairo said President Anwar Sadat would visit Yugoslavia later this month to discuss Middle East peace moves and other developments with President Tito. An Egyptian parliament member told the house that the four wars against Israel since 1948 had cost Egypt 100,000 lives and $37.5 billion.

A communique from Damascus said the fighting Wednesday flared along the northern and central sectors of the front and that Syrian artillerymen and tankers scored direct hits on Israeli units, on a tank command area and on armored vehicles.

Syria said Israeli armored units provoked the fighting by trying to move forward out of their positions on the rain-swept heights. It said there were no Syrian casualties.

Israel's version said its troops at five points along the front weathered 18-round Syrian barrages during 90 minutes of shelling but held their fire in comparison to the past three days when, according to one soldier there, "it was a real war." The Tel Aviv command said there were no losses.

Government says it reduced energy use 19.9 per cent

From Herald news services

The federal government has reported doing better than planned in energy-saving, and said there may be even more far-reaching reductions.

According to figures released Wednesday by the General Services Administration, conservation measures within the federal bureaucracy during the last three months of 1973 showed a 19.9 per cent reduction, or the equivalent of 609,000 barrels of crude oil.

President Nixon, in announcing a series of energy-saving goals last year, ordered the government to cut its consumption by 7 per cent.

In other energy developments:

• Despite Nixon's announcement that gasoline rationing will not be necessary, the Federal Energy Office said it did not plan to dispose of some five billion ration coupons — printed at a cost of $12 million — because of uncertainty over whether the Arab nations will resume the oil embargo.

• The FEO said the U.S. was importing some 1.6 billion barrels of oil a day before the embargo, and there was no way to know what the level would be with the embargo off.

• Gulf Oil Co. reduced prices for jet fuel, kerosene, diesel fuel and residual fuel oils.

"Good night, Chet" — ex-TV newsmen Huntley dead

• In 1970, at age 58, he gave up a $300,000-a-year job and stature as a national institution to return to his native Montana, proclaiming, "I'm not running away from things, I'm running away to think." Wednesday, at age 62, just two months after surgery for abdominal cancer, Chet Huntley died, at his home in Big Sky. He left unfinished the $15 million resort to which he dedicated his retirement, and left behind a 31-year news broadcasting career illuminated by the legendary teaming with David Brinkley. Together they pioneered the co-anchor concept on NBC-TV, and for 14 years ruled as television's most famous news team, broadcasting nightly from New York and Washington and always signing off with the familiar trademark, "Good night, David; Good night, Chet."

Stevenson High wrapup

Guidance program review slated

Citizens' groups and educational consultants will be used to conduct an in-depth review of math, freshman studies and guidance and counseling practices at Stevenson High School.

The evaluation was directed this week by the Stevenson High School Dist. 125 school board.

The in depth studies were recommended by Dist. 125 Supt. Harold Baner and school board Pres. Robert Anderson following a meeting last week with a citizen's group from Lincolnshire. The group raised questions about the three areas to be considered.

Action will be taken immediately to find consultants and select a citizens' group to review the freshman studies program. The school board agreed to name 15 persons to the citizens committee and asked other school board members and local citizens to submit names as soon as possible.

"WE NEED PEOPLE who are capable and willing to serve and who represent the entire community," Anderson said.

At the suggestion of school board member Justin Fishbein, Baner will contact the National Council of Teachers of Mathematics and the American Personnel and Guidance Association for help in reviewing and evaluating those areas.

Citizens' committees of seven persons each will be named later to work on the evaluation.

In discussion which accompanied the action Monday night, Baner briefly discussed the freshman studies program and answered questions that had been raised by the Lincolnshire group.

Earlier in the meeting, a parent expressed concern about the freshman studies program through a letter to the board. A letter praising the program, signed by 50 present freshmen, was also presented to the board.

Board to study bi-lingual ed

The Stevenson school board will investigate the possibility of establishing a bilingual education program for Spanish-speaking students in response to a parent request.

Mr. and Mrs. James Bade of Sylvan Lake presented a petition to the school board Monday night. The couple told the board they thought there were at least 15 high school students in the district who could take advantage of a bilingual program. The petition was signed by 50 persons.

All school districts in Illinois will be required to implement a bilingual program by 1976, Bade told the board. He said state funds are available to finance a program.

Baner and Anderson agreed to begin immediately examining the need and possibility of establishing bilingual instruction.

1972 truck stolen from parking lot

A 1972 Chevrolet pickup truck was stolen between March 14 and Tuesday from the parking lot at 70 S. Buffalo Grove Rd., Buffalo Grove police said. The owner of the truck, Leigh Carter, was in Baltimore at the time, police said.

A $40 radio was stolen from a school bus Tuesday morning in Buffalo Grove.

The bus was in front of the Crawford home, 831 Indian Spring Ln. The radio belongs to Nancy A. Kensli was stolen during the last three weeks from a storage locker at 879 Trace Dr., Buffalo Grove. The theft was reported Tuesday.

Schools, teachers' unit reach accord

Negotiators for the Dist. 23 school board and the Prospect Heights Education Assn. have reached agreement on several non-salaried items for a 1974-75 teacher contract.

Announcement of the consensus on several proposed items came following Tuesday's negotiating session, described by both sides as a "very good meeting."

AMONG ITEMS agreed to are a PHEA proposal that the following clauses be added to the Professional Negotiating Agreement:

- All materials placed in the teacher's files with the exception of university credentials shall be available to the teacher at his request for inspection.
- Material shall not be placed in a teacher's file unless the teacher has had an opportunity to read it. The teacher shall acknowledge reading the material by signing it although this will not necessarily indicate agreement with content of the material.
- The teacher shall have the right to answer any material filed and the answer shall be submitted to the principal and attached to the file copy.

Buffalo Grove, Lake County feud over Vernon?

by JOE FRANZ
A news analysis

Buffalo Grove and Lake County officials may be headed for a feud over new developments planned for unincorporated areas of Vernon Township.

Village officials told the Herald they are opposed to the active role of Lake County in encouraging developers to build projects under its zoning. Officials also said municipalities, like Buffalo Grove, are in a better position to control growth in the township area.

Said Village Mgr. Daniel Larson: "I personally feel the county is not adequately staffed and has not passed the proper ordinances to control growth."

RONALD COLES, chairman of the Lake County Board, however, told The Herald he disagrees with Larson. "I think Lake County is well staffed with people who are doing a good job. I think the county board is cognizant of the fact there is development going on and is facing the issues of development."

The county, Coles said, is better equipped to handle developments than most municipalities in the area. "I consider it a personal challenge to the manager of Buffalo Grove to point out to us specifically where he thinks Lake County is not getting the job done," Coles said.

Principal Larry Weaver hawks his wares, and school gets profits

by JILL BETTNER

"Step right up! Get'cher tasty ice cream bars, delicious chocolate milkshakes or wet yer whistle with a can of pop!"

The Barker could be Larry Weaver and the scene the cafeteria of Cooper Junior High School any day at noontime. Actually, the principal doesn't hawk the wares in the lunchroom, the students do. But Weaver is the brains behind a money-making scheme that is benefiting everybody at the Dist. 21 Buffalo Grove school.

Ice cream and other goodies are sold in most Dist. 21 lunchrooms to obtain extra revenue for activities and projects not covered by district funds. But at Cooper, the enterprising Weaver has expanded on the idea to offer students a variety of items and raise funds for many school improvements at the same time.

Cooper students are required to stay at school for the noon hour, either eating a hot lunch sold each day or bringing a bag lunch. Weaver said he felt the students should have a greater choice of menu and decided shortly after the school opened four years ago to check into selling items in the cafeteria.

MILK IS SOLD at all Dist. 21 schools, but to that Weaver added first ice cream bars, then fruit punch, and when the kids told him they'd like to have music in the lunchroom, a jukebox was installed.

When it became legal last December to sell "pop" in school cafeterias, a pop machine went in at Cooper. With revenue from the sale of the other items, the school purchased a $2,200 milkshake machine in January.

The pop and milkshake machines put the fruit punch stand out of business, Weaver said. The competition from the sale of the extra items also forced the company that supplies hot lunches recently to begin offering two entrees instead of one, he added.

Selling ice cream bars at 15 cents each, cans of pop at 15 cents, milkshakes at 30 cents and operating the jukebox at a cost of 10 cents per record, the school takes in about $500 per week. About 40 per cent is clear profit, according to Weaver.

IN THE PAST four years, "ice cream money," as Weaver calls it, has paid for carpeting the school's learning center ($3,000), the large sign in front of the school ($1,000), and landscaping ($800).

Goody revenue also provided the funds two years ago that allowed Cooper to offer vocational education way ahead of the other two junior high schools in the district. Home arts will not be offered at London and Holmes junior high schools until next fall when a district-wide program is to be implemented.

Cooper purchased almost $500 in shop materials and $400 in home economics equipment to set up vocational education classes as part of an elective program at the school.

In addition, the fund has paid for trophies and plaques, is used for entrance fees for cheerleaders and the drill teams when they enter contests and to partially defray the cost of uniforms.

The fund also paid the cost of providing athletic officials at sports events and transporting Cooper teams to other schools for two years, which Weaver estimated at about $3,000.

THE "ICE CREAM ACCOUNT" also functions as a sort of emergency fund, the principal said. If, for example, a student is unable to afford the cost of participating in a field trip, his way is paid out of the fund.

Weaver said parents have not objected to selling goodies in the lunchroom and don't appear worried that their children will blow their lunch money everyday.

"It just offers kids a greater variety of things they can purchase and the profits go back into things they would normally not have," he said. "I think junior high kids are pretty well able to make decisions about what they should eat, too. It gets old to have a milkshake and a Coke everyday. I think the parents like it that they have the variety more than they fear their kids aren't eating right."

Ice cream sandwiches are big money-makers at Cooper.

• A PHEA clause calling for teachers selected for jury duty to continue receiving full salary with the amount received for jury duty to be deducted from the salary.

A PHEA item calling for tenure teachers to obtain one-year leaves of absence for the purpose of extending their education, with the teacher losing no seniority, years of experience credit or tenure.

THE LAST TWO items were dropped because they are already part of board policy.

Salary items have not yet been discussed. Tuesday's meeting, the first formal negotiating session, was described by Kessler as an exchange of ideas regarding each sides' proposed package. Proposed contracts were exchanged last week.

Kessler said PHEA was "very satisfied" with the meeting and pleased with the agreements that were reached. "There was no change in our money positions," Kessler said. "I think it will be another few meetings before any movement comes on money items."

The teachers are seeking an 8.5 per cent salary increase and a merit pot of $50,000. The PHEA proposal also calls for a teacher to receive $18 per class for classes he is asked to cover other than his normal duties.

The board has proposed increasing the beginning salary for a teacher with a bachelor's degree and no experience to $8,100. The current starting salary is $7,856.

The board has also offered a total monetary package of $76,500, to be apportioned between the merit pot and fringe benefits.

THE BOARD contends the teacher package amounts to more than a 20 per cent increase in salaries and fringe benefits. The board said its package amounts to more than an 8 per cent salary and fringe benefit hike.

The next negotiating session is scheduled for 7:30 p.m. Tuesday at the administration office. Negotiations are closed to the public.

The village also charges developers a considerably higher fee than the county to tap into the water and sewer systems. The fees, he said, are necessary to cover the capital improvements that must be made in order to handle the additional homes. "Our fee structure is designed so the builders are paying their own way," Larson said.

Coles, said the county has been responsible and has not allowed zoning of property until developers have met its requirements, as well as the needs of other local agencies such as schools.

"There are certain laws that limit us," Coles said. "After all we can't hold a gun to a developer's back and say do it. But we have been holding them back somewhat until they satisfy our needs."

THE HANK FARM development, north of Chevy Chase Country Club, is one case where a builder has gone to the county after being turned down by Buffalo Grove. The developer, Centex Homes Corp., originally planned to build the project under county zoning, but then was asked by village officials to seek annexation to Buffalo Grove.

After the project was rejected, the developer went back to its original plan for Lake County. The village turned it down because the project did not comply with ordinances and the developer refused to increase its donation to the school district.

Two other developments now in the planning stages threaten to cause additional friction between Buffalo Grove and Lake County. The Chesterfield Development Corp. plans to build its Indian Head townhouse project under county zoning, on the Bugner Farm.

The project is on Weiland Rd., south of Busch Road and currently not contiguous with the village, a requirement if the village is to annex it. However, village officials have expressed interest in the project. They have said they want to make sure it complies with village ordinances and standards because it is in its planning area and probably will be ultimately annexed.

LARSON SAID he thinks Lake County should cooperate with the village and allow it to inspect plans for all projects being built near Buffalo Grove's borders.

Another development planned for the Sophie Link Farm, northeast of Ill. Rte. 83 and Arlington Heights Rd. also may go to the county. The developer, The DeBruler Co. originally proposed annexation to Buffalo Grove, but the firm is now reportedly planning to build the project in the county.

The developer has refused to say what its plans are for the 86-acre tract.

Prosecution requests delay

Stavros trial set back to April 24

The first in a series of trials resulting from the indictment of six former and present Wheeling and Cook County officials has been set back one month until April 24.

James Stavros, indicted former Wheeling Township Democratic committeeman, was originally scheduled to begin his trial Monday before U.S. District Judge Hubert Will. Stavros is charged with several counts of extortion.

The U.S. Attorney's Office, however, asked that the case be rescheduled because one of the prosecuting attorneys will be out of town until mid-April.

Stavros' attorney, Joel Murray, said he would have been ready to go to trial Monday if the government had provided him with needed information on the case. He said the U.S. Attorney's Office has not given him that information as ordered by Judge Will earlier this month.

OTHER TRIALS stemming from the indictments returned Jan. 31 are being scheduled at two-week intervals. Ira Colitz, former Cook County Zoning Board member, and Nicholas Phillips, a county zoning board employee, will stand trial beginning May 6.

Phillips is charged with extorting $50,000 from Wickes Inc., and Colitz is charged with aiding in the extortion.

Wheeling Building Director William Bleber will begin the first of four trials May 20 for charges of extortion, conspiracy to commit extortion and perjury.

The other three trials have not been scheduled. Indictments followed a year-long federal grand jury investigation into alleged shakedowns of Wheeling developers and businesses. One of the six indicted officials, former Wheeling trustee Michael Valenza, has pleaded guilty to conspiracy to commit extortion.

Village makes check of street problems

Broken street signs and chuckholes are getting more attention from Wheeling village employees these days.

The village board has asked the employees to take note of any such problems in their normal rounds through the village. The program is designed to make it less necessary for residents to make complaints about day-to-day problems.

Village Manager George Passolt has asked the various department heads to have their employees keep an eye out for any problems. He said that several problems have already been reported to the proper department.

None of the problems, however, have been serious, according to Passolt. "It's things like street signs down, chuckholes, that kind of thing," he said. "I think the idea is to avoid the necessity of the citizen calling in."

$800 in tools among items taken in five car lootings

About $800 worth of tools were stolen in one of five thefts from vehicles Tuesday in Wheeling.

Police said the tools were stolen from Roger Moen's truck. The truck was behind Moen's apartment, 576 Fairway View Dr.

A second vehicle in that parking lot also was broken into during the early morning hours, police said. From that car, owned by William N. Nelson, 834 Old Willow Rd., Wheeling, the thieves took a sleeping bag, other camping equipment, a tape player and 35 tapes. The items were valued at $320.

A tape player and 25 tapes, valued at $454, were stolen early Tuesday from the car of Kevin M. Koopman, 169 Wildwood Ave., while the car was at that address. Another tape player was stolen between 12:15 and 1:50 p.m. from a car at Kristoff's restaurant, 144 N. Milwaukee Ave. The owner is Robert A. Holthaus, 107 E. Center Ave., Wheeling.

The final theft from a car occurred either at 111 Chestnut Ln., Wheeling or Courtesy Manufacturing in Elk Grove Village. The owner, John W. North, 111 Chestnut Ln., told police $141 worth of items, including clothes and a hunting knife, were stolen.

Village tax hike expected

not mean that property taxes necessarily will increase in 1975.

Passolt noted that the village's proposed building program, which includes additions to the village hall and fire station, will not be part of next year's budget. He said these expansions were part of this year's budget, and thus were included in the 1974 tax bills.

NO HEARING will be scheduled on the budget unless the village board requests them. "If it is a real biggy that will have something that will run it too high, then hearings may be necessary," he said.

Although the village board is scheduled to begin budget reviews in April, public information on the budget may not be available until sometime this summer. The village technically begins using the budget May 1, but is not required to approve a financial program until the appropriations ordinance is due at the end of July.

Parks to discuss garage plans

The Wheeling Park Board Thursday again will review plans to build a garage south of the Heritage Park recreation building, 222 S. Wolf Rd.

Board members are awaiting flood control information from the village engineer before making a final decision on the site. They are also expected to review the building design and construction. The garage is one of numerous projects to be financed with referendum funds approved in December 1972.

Prior to the regular board meeting, the park commissioners will discuss preliminary work on the 1974-75 budget. Budget discussion will begin at 7 p.m.

The board meeting will begin at 8 p.m. at the Heritage Park recreation building, 222 S. Wolf Rd.

St. Alphonsus School sign-up deadline

Friday will be the final day for registration of new students at St. Alphonsus School, 411 Wheeling Rd., Prospect Heights. The private school has been registering students this week for the school year starting in September.

Registration blanks are available in the school office today and Friday between noon and 2:30 p.m.

Double payoff in bribery scandal?

Former Hoffman Estates officials may have been paid off twice for rezoning the same parcels of land, Edward B. Stulberg revealed yesterday, testifying in the federal trial of Bernard M. Peskin in the Kaufman and Broad Homes Inc., zoning bribery scandal.

Stulberg, K&B's former vice president for land acquisition and zoning, said yesterday Peskin told him the village officials had already collected bribes to zone the land for a retirement community.

Peskin, former attorney for K&B, is on trial before U.S. District Court Judge Frank J. McGarr on bribery, conspiracy and tax evasion charges. He was indicted Oct. 26 along with six past village officials and K&B. The village personnel pleaded guilty and McGarr sentenced them to federal prisons. K&B pleaded no contest to paying $100,000 in bribes, and was fined $50,000.

PESKIN ALLEGEDLY told Stulberg in April 1968 that Ross Cortese, owner of Rossmore Corp., paid a bribe to obtain zoning for a Leisure World, similar to Rossmore's west coast developments. Cortese held more than 3,000 acres, most of which was condemned for Cook County forest preserve. K&B bought the rest. While Stulberg testified he thought at the time Peskin had handled Cortese's zoning petition, he said he later learned Peskin had not. He then attributed Peskin's statement to rumor, he said.

Peskin's alleged the Cortese bribe when he told Stulberg the village officials wanted $25,000 to grant K&B high-density multiple-family zoning for 320 acres of Barrington Square, said Stulberg. The K&B bribe request was hiked to $100,000 by fall of 1968 because of public opposition to K&B's plan, Stulberg has said. Another $25,000 was sought later for a second part of Barrington Square, a 90-acre tract.

When Stulberg balked at the last request, former Mayor Roy Jenkins agreed to accept a gas station site instead, Stulberg has testified.

Stulberg also revealed yesterday he had considered buying hardware at Jenkins' hardware store in Hoffman Plaza as one means of passing the bribes.

The idea of buying hardware from Jenkins and insurance from former trustee James Sloan, both of whom were among those pleading guilty, was rejected because the amounts of bribe money were too large for that strategy, said Stulberg.

IN OTHER TESTIMONY, Stulberg told of two meetings he held with Jenkins outside the public forum of village board meetings. The first was in March or

April, 1968, before bribes first were discussed, said Stulberg, and took place in a back room of Jenkins' hardware store. Stulberg said he told Jenkins general plans for the project and information on K&B's background, including financial statements. The second was a lunch date at which Peskin's former law partner, Earl Deutsch, joined Stulberg and Peskin. The meeting was in about August, 1968, in a Hinsdale restaurant. Stulberg said bribes were not discussed in his presence then, but Deutsch and Peskin asked him to leave them alone for about 15 minutes and then called him back.

Stulberg also clarified the procedure chosen to pay the bribes. First, he said, $50,000 was given to Peskin, disguised as attorney fees, with half to go to the trustees and half to pay Peskin's income tax on the total. Then, said Stulberg, the remaining $75,000 due on the 320-acre parcel was to be paid as occupancy permits were issued for the project, at the rate of $100 per permit. Peskin would receive the money as attorney fees, and distribute half to the village officials, again using the other half to pay his taxes.

Stulberg said only $100,000 ever was paid to Peskin, and $50,000 of that was justifiable legal fees. Only $25,000 ever reached village officials, said Stulberg.

Plan commission meet

The Wheeling Plan Commission Thursday will resume hearings on amendments to the village planned development ordinance.

The present ordinance is under study because numerous problems have developed since it was enacted in 1967. The ordinance was not designed for the condominium concept, which allows private ownership of the individual apartment or townhouse units.

The plan commission is expected to review density requirements in such projects. The present ordinance limits density of 16 units per acre.

The hearing will begin at 7:30 p.m. at the village hall, 255 W. Dundee Rd.

'Never on Sunday,' gas dealers cry despite Nixon vow

ed at these stations, which will be open Sunday. Harper Mobile Service in Palatine; Scarsdale Arco Arlington Heights; and Village Pump on Central Road, Arlington Heights.

IN THE CHICAGO area, the cautious attitude of suburban dealers is reflected in the opinions of several dealer groups.

"As long as dealers are on less than 100 per cent allocation (of supplies) it is ridiculous and impossible for a dealer to operate on Sundays," said Robert Jacobs, executive of the Illinois Gasoline Dealers Assn. He predicts a continuing gas shortage, and a price level of 75 cents a gallon for regular gasoline by June.

A small percentage of Chicago area dealers will open their stations Sunday, predicts Ralph Porcelli of the Gasoline Retailers Assn. of Metropolitan Chicago. "A dealer was able to reduce his cost of operation by closing on Sunday, and for the first time in many years, the dealers were able to lead a normal life on Sunday," Porcelli said. He predicts that regular gasoline prices now in the low 50's to 68.9 cents a gallon range will level off at 70 cents a gallon as Arab oil supplies make their way to the U. S. later in the spring.

"I don't think the dealers are going to do it. They could go broke if there's not enough traffic," said James Brawar, executive of the Illinois Service Station Operators and the North Suburban Gasoline Dealers Assn. He suggests that a surcharge be levied by dealers for Sunday sales.

"I think there will be a lot of companies starting to open on Sunday, starting this weekend," counters Donald Woodruff of the Midwest Petroleum Marketers Assn. in Rosemont. He said the Federal Energy Office boost in gasoline allocations to the Chicago area, and eventual Mideast oil supplies, may improve the supply outlook.

SUNDAY SALES of gasoline may be coming back. President Nixon rescinded his request for voluntary Sunday closings by dealers this week. However, a Herald survey of 37 dealers indicates many have no plans to return to seven-day-a-week operation, due to short supplies of gasoline and inconvenience.

3 more file for Harper board election

Three more candidates, including two incumbents, filed Wednesday for election to the Harper College Board of Trustees.

Incumbent Ross Miller, 13 W. Hiawatha, Mount Prospect, and Judith Troehler, 1138-A Boxwood, Mount Prospect, filed for three-year terms on the board. In addition, Ray Blakeman, of 1107 S. Mercury Dr., Schaumburg, filed for the two-year term he was appointed to fill in January.

Miller, an attorney with offices in Palatine, has served on the board since 1971. He said Wednesday he had delayed deciding whether to seek reelection because "I wanted to get my business affairs in order so I will be able to devote the time required."

Miller said he is seeking reelection because, "I feel in the first three years a trustee is in a learning process. During the next three years I feel I will be able to contribute much more."

Miller said in the next three years he believes the Harper board will have to be concerned with the possibility of a second site for the college and "how to keep Harper a leader while coping with increased costs."

MRS. TROEHLER, 30, is a student in business administration at the college and has lived in the area for a year and a half. She is the mother of two children.

She said she decided to run because she was concerned with the "apathy" surrounding the board election. She said, "I'm not opposed to anything the board has done, but I was concerned there was so little interest."

Three other candidates filed earlier for the Harper board. They are incumbent William Kelly of Arlington Heights, Robert Bromley and Stanley Carrier, both of Hoffman Estates. All three have also filed for the three three-year terms on the board.

Blakeman, president of Spotnails Inc., in Rolling Meadows, was unavailable for comment. He was appointed to the board in January after Annalee Fjellberg resigned and will run for the two years remaining on her term.

The board election is April 13. Filing for board candidates ends Friday at 4 p.m. at the college.

Opponents concede measure won by thin margin

Test of constitutionality next hurdle for new RTA

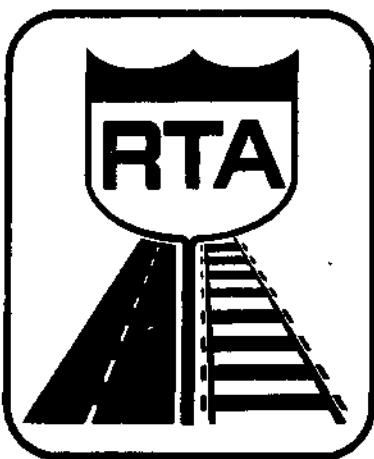

by STEVE FORSYTH

The new Regional Transportation Authority will have to back up a slim referendum victory with a successful defense of its constitutionality before it will have complete powers granted by the RTA bill.

Spokesmen for organizations supporting and opposing Tuesday's referendum agree a court test on the six-county authority is necessary before the RTA can sell bonds. State legislators who fought the referendum plan to meet today to decide their course of action.

State Rep. Eugene Schlickman, R-Arlington Heights, told the Herald he hopes there will be an "unfriendly" suit, or one that will take an antagonistic position. Schlickman said the RTA opponents will consider a recount, lawsuits and amendments in today's discussion of future action.

Unofficial returns late Wednesday showed the RTA proposal passing by a razor-thin margin, with 674,656 "yes" votes and 658,354 "no" votes. These figures do not include 50 precincts in Cook County, where results are unavailable.

Total turnout was estimated to be 35 million, according to George Ranney Jr., executive director of the RTA Citizens Committee for Better Transportation. Neither Ranney nor Schlickman could give accurate vote totals, but Ranney said at a press conference Wednesday that the RTA would pass with something over 50 per cent of the vote.

RANNEY ATTRIBUTED part of the "no" vote to a current period of cynicism and mistrust of almost all government. "RTA was involved in possible new taxes, and there have been taxpayer revolts in other elections in other cities this year," he said.

The RTA board members are to be chosen within 28 days of official announcement of the results of the referendum. The selection may be delayed an additional 10 days because state law allows a county clerk that long to canvass the votes before the announcement is made.

Opponents of the referendum agree the proposal has passed, but believe their campaign was worthwhile. "We knew it was an uphill battle — a David and Goliath kind of fight," said Schlickman. "We're disappointed, but satisfied we fought the good fight and contributed to a more knowledgeable electorate. I never thought we would win."

"Gene Schlickman deserves some real credit for taking this campaign on, on the issues," Ranney said. He indicated that issues raised in the campaign will give the RTA board some idea of the people's wants, such as lower CTA fares and bus service in the suburbs.

"THE 'NO' VOTE is a challenge to the board," Ranney said. "It will give them the opportunity to show the people who are suspicious of a new innovation like this what it can do for them." He emphasized that he still thinks the RTA bill provides adequate protection for the suburbs, offering a chance for new and improved public transportation services.

Campaign contributors for the pro-RTA effort will be revealed later, Ranney said, but he did estimate the total cost of his program at $400,000.

Ranney and Schlickman said Wednesday that foul play in the election has not been indicated, but State Rep. Donald Totten, R-Hoffman Estates, believes there may be some discrepancies.

Totten, representing the KNOX RTA Committee, said figures he gathered for Kane County don't match what is being reported in Chicago, and he thinks the recorded "no" vote in the city is not as high as it should be.

TOTTEN SAID that regardless of the margin, the RTA has apparently passed. The close vote will have an effect on the General Assembly when amendments are suggested, he said. "I think some of the opposition that we will voice will certainly have more sympathy than it did last December."

Legislators may be asked almost immediately to clear up some apparently vague provisions. Arlington Heights Mayor Jack Walsh said Wednesday that he would ask the Northwest Municipal Conference to draft a resolution Wednesday night calling for local legislators to seek amendments to the RTA bill.

As presently drawn up, the RTA board will be able to collect a five per cent motor fuel tax in Cook, Kane, McHenry, Lake, DuPage and Will counties and institute a parking tax with as-yet-undefined limits.

MOST OF THE money for the RTA will come from the state, through motor fuel tax and sales tax funds. The RTA is expected to raise $171 million for its first year's budget, and there will be an additional $75 million in bonds that can be sold by the state to provide public transportation equipment in the suburbs.

Four RTA board members will represent Chicago and will be chosen by Mayor Daley. Of the remaining four members, two will be selected by the suburban commissioners of the Cook County Board, and two will be selected by the board chairman of the remaining five counties. The eight will then select a ninth member who will serve as chairman.

The fight over RTA began last December when a compromise plan put together by legislative leaders, the governor and Daley was approved by the General Assembly.

GOP candidates looking forward to November race

by STEVE BROWN

Cook County Republican candidates will now look toward November and lay the groundwork for what they believe will be a serious effort to upset some of their Democratic opponents.

County GOP Chairman Floyd Fulle of Des Plaines said he plans to hold talks Friday with officials of the United Republican Fund about financing the campaign.

"No matter how good our program might be, you have to have the means to support it," Fulle said.

About the only candidate who learned anything in Tuesday's primary, was Alice Ihrig of Oak Lawn, the party's hopeful for assessor. She was unopposed in the primary.

"At least I know who my opponent will be now," she said, after Thomas Tully smashed Edward Vrdolyak in the Democratic primary for the assessor's office. Though she was watching the same political muscles the Daley machine will use against her in November, Mrs. Ihrig saw some good signs in the other party's primary fight.

"I think some of Tully's weak points were opened up and we may be able to use some of this."

OTHER CANDIDATES were confident they could unseat the powerful Democratic incumbents.

"I don't think the Watergate had any effect at all now," Fulle said. Other party officials said they believe the voters were not blaming GOP candidates for the problems of the Nixon Administration.

Fulle said he was encouraged by the primary results despite the low turnout and the lack of contested races.

"We saw many Republican voters go over the Democratic primary in 1972, but many of them came back," he noted.

FULLE ALSO credited the GOP for the heavy interest in the Regional Transportation Authority referendum.

"It was Republicans both pro and con that brought out the issues in the election," Fulle said.

Party officials believe they have a real chance of beating the Democrats in November in spite of the fact their candidates, except for Peter Bensinger, lack name recognition and are dramatically outmanned in 50 vote-rich wards in Chicago.

"We have extremely competent candidates, truly a superb group of people, running in the county race," Fulle said.

MANY OF THE Republican candidates were eager Tuesday night to start the big push toward November. Mrs. Ihrig and her campaign aides sent a telegram to Tully offering congratulations and a challenge to debate only minutes after Vrdolyak's concession was announced.

Fulle received a "concession call" from Evanston Ald. John Kneafsey early Wednesday morning. Kneafsey had waged an unsuccessful campaign for one of six GOP suburban county board nominations.

"He indicated that he would support the party in November. We also agreed to get together for lunch sometime in the next week," Fulle said.

"It's obvious the Fulle organization worked hard everywhere," Kneafsey said late Tuesday. "In fact, that may have been our mistake. We came on strong too early, hoping that they would think we were a sleeper."

"Politics is a hard game," Kneafsey said. "You learn that early. Whatever breaks you get you have to make for yourself."

THE GOP COUNTY board ticket was led by incumbent County Commissioner Joseph Woods. Unofficial returns from throughout the county indicated that the six party-slated candidates had outpolled Kneafsey by a 2 to 1 or 3 to 1 margin.

Party officials noted that although Harold Tyrell was first on the ballot, he was not the top vote getter among the board candidates. Several officials said Tyrell had told voters in his home Precinct Township to vote for him for committeeman first and work their way up the ballot on the county board candidates.

The result was that voters exhausted their six choices for the county board before they came to Tyrell's name reportedly resulting in a lower vote total.

Not many phone calls this year

Sixth draft lottery held; Feb. 28 first date drawn

Only a few short years ago news of the government-sponsored draft lottery to determine the order of eligible men threw frenzied 19-year-olds into a state of depression.

Vietnam was still raging, military conflict throughout all of Southeast Asia was at its peak and more than 50,000 men had died in combat.

Yesterday, the sixth annual Selective Service System draft lottery was held at a time of relative peace in the world and the news of the procedure and results drew little response from those affected.

Should the draft be reinstated, according to officials, men born on Feb. 28, 1955, would be the first to be called.

"IN YEARS PAST the telephone started ringing off the hook around 9:30 or 10 a.m. (on the day of the lottery)," said Mrs. Marcella Salvage of the Selective Service System's Glenview office, which serves the Northwest suburbs. "But today we've had very few calls."

In contrast to the first lottery in 1969, for instance, when hundreds of young men roared with delight or despair when their birthdates or priority numbers were drawn, Wednesday's ceremony in Washington, D.C., drew fewer than two dozen spectators, all well over draft age.

Before the drawing, Selective Service officials described the prospects for a 1974-75 callup as almost nonexistent. "There is no intention on the part of the President or on the leaders of Congress . . . to seek the restoration of induction authority," added John D. Dewhurst of Selective Service.

Presidential authority to issue draft calls expired last July 1. It has not been extended or reauthorized by Congress.

Under the lottery procedure, pairs of numbers are drawn one at a time from plastic cylinders. The first cylinder contains dates of the year corresponding to the birthdates of potential draftees. The second cylinder contains "random selection sequence number" which determines vulnerability.

The lower the number, the greater the chance those with birthdays paired to it would have of being called in 1975.

Following the drawing of the Feb. 28 date were the dates of Jan. 5, Feb. 16 and Sept. 24.

Here are the numbers...

Senate panel members to probe Underflow Plan

Members of a U.S. Senate subcommittee will question local governmental officials at a public hearing next week about the proposed Chicago Underflow Plan system of underground sanitary and storm sewage collection tunnels.

The March 28 hearing, chaired by U.S. Sen. Mike Gravel, D-Alaska, is aimed at evaluating possible federal participation in paying for the $3.3 billion tunnel system.

Metropolitan Sanitary District officials will testify at the hearing as will officials of the City of Chicago, Cook County, the U.S. Corps of Engineers and of Region 5 of the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency.

Mayors of suburban communities located in the combined sanitary and storm sewer areas to be served by the underflow tunnels are being asked to submit written comments to the Senate committee.

MSD Assistant Chief Engineer Hugh McMillan said the Senate public works and water resources subcommittee is considering special funding for the project because of its unique double function of abating water pollution while controlling urban flooding.

The 9:15 a.m. hearing will be held in the MSD board room at 100 E. Erie St., Chicago.

Grand prizes will be presented on March 30 at the Chicago show.

Runnersup were Peter Wodarz, 11, of Mount Prospect, and Dean Stathakis, 12, of Des Plaines. Each of them received tickets to the McCormick Place show.

The environment

Strip mining bill has state concerned

by LEA TONKIN

Illinois has a big stake in the strip mining legislation now pending in Congress, and a number of other proposals to alter environmental standards for coal mining and utilization. The state can claim the nation's largest reserves of bituminous coal, a possible bonanza for coal operators interested in boosting production to meet energy demands.

According to the National Coal Assn., the provisions for land reclamation in legislation now pending in Congress would be "disastrous" for the industry. Denouncing a bill that would control strip mining that was passed in the Senate, and a version considered by the House Interior Committee, the association said, "Prohibitory legislation is not even remotely necessary now, for sound reclamation can be carried out within normal mining processes."

IN KNOX COUNTY, Ill., a confrontation between farmers and coal mining interests is an indicator of a conflict that is already developing. Farmer Richard Seibold is a member of the Institute for Effective Land Reclamation, an angry group of Knox County farmers who demand that land be restored to its former condition after it has been "stripped" by coal mining operations. "This is the most beautiful farm country in the world, the land we live off. How in the hell can we sacrifice this in the name of energy?" asks Seibold.

The institute's goal — to prevent what they consider to be wasteful techniques of coal operators — is hampered by the presence of tremendous coal reserves. The Midwest regional office of the Federal Environmental Protection Agency says coal lies at stripping depth beneath nearly 80 per cent of the surface of the state. Meanwhile, Knox County's rules requiring that stripped land be leveled and that topsoil be returned, is challenged in the courts by the Midland Coal Co.

In his recent state of the state message, Gov. Dan Walker pushed for a $100 million coal development plan in the state. Walker also hopes to attract a billion dollar coal research center to Illinois.

Otis Gibson, president of the Illinois Coal Operators Assn., applauds the effort to focus attention on Illinois coal development. He's among the participants in Walker's Illinois Coal Conference March 26-27 in Chicago.

THE TREMENDOUS amount of water needed for coal gasification and other processes is available in Illinois, Gibson said. He adds that gas or oil from coal will not be a practical reality before 1980 to 1985. "In the interim period," Gibson said, "a temporary modification of Illinois air pollution regulations is necessary to permit the use of Illinois coal during the energy shortage, or until practical equipment becomes available to remove sulphur oxides from coal burning facilities in order to meet current air regulations."

Gibson contends that restrictive EPA regulations and a shortage of low sulphur oil and gas force some industries to use low-sulphur, higher cost coal imported from Montana or Wyoming. He's hoping for a delay in enforcement of EPA sulphur control regulations, as provided in the bill (H.B. 763) recently vetoed by Walker.

STRIP MINING LEGISLATION pending in Congress would require land reclamation programs by coal operators. Spoil piles from strip mining operations 2 years ago are shown near Colstrip, Mont.

Locations of 3 proposed junior colleges a problem

Public two-year community colleges are still relatively young in the state of Illinois. The law creating them has only been in existence since the mid-1960s.

It's important to keep that fact in mind as discussion centers around the choice of sites for the two colleges which serve this area, Harper and Oakton.

Harper College has gone to the state to ask for permission to buy a second campus so they will be able to accommodate more students than they have room for on its site in Palatine. They have received approval to plan for one, but will have to get further state permission before they can buy a site.

Oakton, meanwhile, is going to the state to get approval for its first campus. The college has been operating out of rented industrial buildings in Morton Grove and officials have now chosen a 170-acre site on the Des Plaines River as the place they would like to put the permanent college.

IT WOULD SEEM at first glance as though those two issues are totally separate. Voters in the Harper district will have to approve funds to buy the second campus and money for the first Oakton campus will come from the taxpayers of that district (which covers Maine and Niles townships) and from the state.

It is only when you look at the map that you see how the two sites relate to each other. Harper has been talking for some time about locating the second campus at Palatine and Schoenbeck roads in Arlington Heights.

On a map, the corner of Palatine and Schoenbeck roads is embarrassingly close to the Oakton site, which is between Central and Golf roads on the Des Plaines River.

That has the state officials in charge of community colleges worried. Added to that problem, is the fact that the high school districts on the North Shore are talking about forming a community college district there — and the site most commonly talked about for a North Shore college is on land owned by the Techny Fathers on Willow and Waukegan roads in Northfield township.

If you find that site on the map, you'll discover it's very close to the first two.

WHAT WORRIES the state is the proximity of those three sites. It is true, of course, that the boundaries between college districts are, under law, almost as impenetrable as high school or elementary school boundaries, but state officials don't have to take the responsibility if those schools are built closer together than reason would otherwise allow, simply because they are in separate districts.

That's why I said at the beginning that it is important to remember that the community college system is new. State officials have not yet come to terms with the fact that the colleges operate in separate districts and yet, in some other ways, serve the whole state. Individual colleges haven't really solved the problem either — they are simultaneously local colleges and subject to the regulation of the state.

by Wandalyne Rice

Now that there is the possibility that three college campuses will be built so close together, the state will have to come to terms with that problem fairly quickly. If, for example, it turns down Harper's request, even though the college could show it needs more room, could it require the Oakton campus to take on excess Harper students?

THE COLLEGE that is really in danger of getting hurt while the state worries about the problem is Oakton. Oakton has been looking for a site for several years, while the North Shore high school districts have been trying to avoid forming a college. Harper has one campus, but Oakton has none. And if the state turns anyone down because the sites are so close together, it would seem unfair to turn Oakton down.

However, state officials apparently aren't sure yet how to treat the problem. Oakton's site comes before the Illinois Community College board for approval tomorrow, and officials on the board's staff have recommended that the college officials be allowed to negotiate for purchase of their chosen piece of land.

But they have thrown in a proviso to this approval. They have said the North Shore situation and Harper second site will have to be considered before Oakton gets final approval to buy.

THAT CONSIDERATION would, hopefully, result in a decision that will be fair to Oakton although Oakton officials fear it would mean more delay. The state officials must think carefully about how much college district boundaries mean.

After all, if students in the Oakton district cannot go to Harper, or vice versa, without paying higher tuition (and the tuition is much higher), each college will have to have a campus (or campuses) to accommodate all their students — or some students will not be able to attend a community college at all.

So the state will face several choices. It can approve the sites, regardless of how close together they are, or they can rethink the requirement that divides community college districts rigidly.

'Sexism in education' radio talk show topic

"Sexism in education" is the topic of a panel discussion on the Harper College weekly talk show, "Focus: Northwest."

WWMM(FM), 92.7, will broadcast the program Sunday, Air time is 8 a.m., with a rebroadcast at 9 p.m.

Moderator Molly Waite, assistant professor of political science at Harper, examines the subject with guests Sherry Reynolds-Murphy, state education chairperson of the National Organization for Women and former educator; and Jeffrey McNally, member of the Gay People's Legal Committee.

"Focus: Northwest" originates in the office of community relations at Harper College. Harriet Kandelman is the producer-director.

The drilling rig—power and urgency.

Plenty of pumpers, for sale.

Cost of looking for oil is gushing up these days

by BARRY SIGALE

Second in a series

"Mother Nature is a tease. She's just as capricious as she can be." — a basic tenet that controls the oil game.

The several hundred ton drilling rig stretches 90 feet tall. Erect, it is a mini-skyscraper in the wheatfields of southern Illinois.

It is an impressive sight ... and sound. From up close one senses the power and the urgency of this imposing force sending steel pipe into the ground toward the hidden treasures lying beneath ... tearing through the earth's belly in search of Mother Nature's worst kept secret — that large deposits of oil are concealed within.

By contrast, the crew members of the C. E. Brehm Petroleum Co. appear inconspicuous. Machines are doing the tough part of the job while they make sure the project continues on course: 10 days worth of drilling at one foot every 10 minutes with a goal of 4,200 feet.

On the eighth day the sun came out. It was mighty welcome. They had fought the slime caused by the dreary weather of the past few days. First it rained, then it turned into an ice storm. When it melted, the mud set in. But they pushed forward.

THE SITE was Kollmon No. 1, on a farm three miles outside of Salem, formerly a major supply center for the oil industry for the western portion of Illinois in the boom years of the late 1930s. The site was explored many years ago and the hint of a substantial oil source remaining there prompted further exploration. So Clarence Brehm, with the financial backing of two partner firms who would share in the discovery, returned to the spot.

Throughout the project the people connected with the exploration were cautiously optimistic. "If you are in this business a long time you get seasoned to failure," said Wilton Webb, a geologist for Brehm for 23 years and the man who plotted the undertaking.

By carefully studying the earth's structure and by examining data from the successes and failures of other drilling operations, Webb felt the Kollmon No. 1 might turn out to be a big producer. He was wrong, but prepared for just such a possibility.

"We didn't find a whole lot of oil," he said when the project was completed and the preliminary tests made. "It doesn't look like very much. It'll probably be a small producer, about 10 barrels a day."

THE BREHM company is a prime example of the more than 400 major and large and small independent companies exploring and producing oil in Illinois.

It isn't news, but the cost of exploration and production is high. The oil industry depends on several related industries for materials. Some of these materials, too, are in short supply and, therefore, more expensive. Wages have gone up, as they have in most large industries. Overall, inflation has caught up with the oil business.

Kollmon No. 1 cost the three partner companies about $35,000 to get to the oil, and it will cost them several thousand dollars more, perhaps another $35,000, to confirm it and set up the pump and storage tanks.

The main costs are for equipment, mostly replacement parts; for $3,000 worth of processed mud, which keeps the drilled hole from caving in and lubricates the equipment; for chemicals; for diesel fuel to run the rig which runs the drill; for laboratory tests of the samples brought out of the ground; and for labor.

THAT'S THE WAY it is in the oil game. Failures (dry holes) heavily outnumber successes, which lead to handsome returns on investments. Unlike outside entrepreneurs who zipped into Illinois in the early days to make their fortunes and retreat, Illinois oilmen have traditionally plowed their handsome returns back into the ground ... into more oil wells. These are the men who have kept a steady influence on the Illinois oil business.

But while oil companies make huge profits and consumers pay more money for gasoline, the people of southern Illinois stand on the outside looking in. They are on the edge of prosperity, neither wallowing in it to any great degree, nor improving their lifestyles from any major oil strike.

To be sure, tax monies (estimated at about $6 million in the 20 counties which produce the majority of oil in Illinois) are derived by the counties from companies discovering oil within their boundaries. The economy of these communities is somewhat affected by industry needs and the money spent in its stores and deposited in its banks. Also, jobs are provided in oil-related fields.

But this mostly agriculturally-oriented area has been unaffected by the oil industry, unlike the gold rush days when towns sprung up overnight. In fact, the oil industry was not fully accepted by the townspeople of the area.

By law, the oil company must pay the landowner one-eighth of whatever is produced from a drilling operation plus damages to his property. Some landowners make large profits off these discoveries but because they are paid monthly, as the oil is produced, their income is spread over a longer period of time.

Are voters becoming issue-oriented?

by BOB LAHEY

There are a number of conclusions that might be drawn from primary election Tuesday in the Northwest suburbs, none of which is provable.

But substantial arguments may be made for two points of view:

- Northwest suburban residents are gradually shedding their reluctance to publicly identify themselves as Democrats.
- Voters are becoming more "issue-oriented" and less concerned with party labels.

A third point of view, of course, is that things haven't really changed all that much and that when November comes, the GOP will roll up its usual substantial margins in a true test between the two parties.

Democrats who recall "the old days" in the Northwest suburbs find comfort in the fact that in some areas they are able to match the Republican primary turnout.

AFTER TUESDAY'S vote, Rep. Eugene Chapman, D-Arlington Heights, was recalling the days of the early 1960s, when primary counts in precincts showed totals like Republicans 85, Democrats 6.

A random glance at party totals from four precincts in the Republican stronghold of Elk Grove Village shows these totals: R 49, D 36; R 59, R 98, D 28; R 69, D 61.

A total Elk Grove Township from 67 of 73 precincts shows 4,313 Republican voters and 2,852 Democrats — not a portent of coming Democratic triumphs, but a far cry from 10 to 1 ratios of other days.

Comparisons are difficult because of the dearth of contests on the Republican ticket (there was one maverick candidate running against the party slate for the county board, but as it turned out, it was no contest) and because of a lack of complete election returns.

HOWEVER, IN Palatine Township, there were races in both parties for the post of township committeeman. The Republican race attracted 4,919 voters, and the Democratic contest, 3,152.

Cook County Republican Chairman Floyd Fulle of Des Plaines, discounts the Democratic primary vote, however, and states flatly, "In the fall, the (Republican) party will maintain its advantage."

Fulle argues that since voters discovered they may vote in whichever primary election they wish, "people go for the more exciting races." This year the Tully-Vrdolyak race for Democratic nomination for county assessor was by far the most interesting race, he said.

Fulle's judgment appears sound, but Palatine Township Democratic Committeeman Richard A. Mugalian says Republican dominance in the suburbs is "eroding very slowly."

Mugalian points to demographic changes as the root reason for this. "As the area grows, it reflects more of the general makeup of the metropolitan area."

THE RTA VOTE in Tuesday's election also supports the view that voters are more concerned with issues than parties — and gives evidence of Republican disenchantment over Watergate.

Countywide, according to County Clerk Stanley Kusper, about 9 per cent of those who voted took only ballots on the RTA referendum, shunning both party races. In the Northwest suburbs, however, that figure appears to be closer to 35 per cent.

A sampling of 51 Elk Grove Township precincts showed 8,337 votes on RTA and a combined Republican-Democratic vote of only 5,225. That works out to 37.4 per cent who shunned the party elections.

A number of poll watchers throughout the Northwest suburbs reported that many persons they knew to be traditional Republican voters took only an RTA ballot.

Perhaps the largest unknown is how many of those voters will remain disenchanted by November, and whether their disenchantment will cause them to stay at home, or to make the switch to the Democratic column.

If one thing is certain from Tuesday's vote results, it appears to be that Northwest suburban Democrats have not reached their millennium and their Republican opponents are not facing their Armageddon.

Daley basks in afterglow with old warrior, novice

by BARRY SIGALE

With a twinkle in his eyes, a baby-faced political novice on one side and an old warrior on the other, Mayor Richard J. Daley spoke to his kingdom.

It was election night, and Daley, the head of the Democratic Party in Cook County, had come out from seclusion on the second floor of the LaSalle Hotel with his candidate, Thomas Tully, and the man Tully hopes to replace as Cook County assessor, retiring P. J. Cullerton.

What Daley said was not surprising, nor was the ruckus caused by his aides when the mayor declared to newsmen, as he has for years, that the Democratic Party won a great victory by the people and for the people and that a clean sweep of major political offices was inevitable in November.

BUT TIMES are changing. Though Daley will probably be seeking his last hurrah next year — an unprecedented sixth term as mayor, the faces around him are getting younger and fairer. Tully is one of them.

While Daley privately took in the good wishes of his friends and political cronies, the comfort of his family and the advice of his aides, Tully was out on the street bringing in the vote, smoothing out ballot-counting snarls and getting a reading on his political prospects, which zoomed with the trouncing of Edward Vrdolyak.

The mood at party headquarters early Tuesday night was subdued. Veterans of Cook County politics said the evening resembled a wake, though by 9 p.m. it was certain Tully would win in a landslide. Only the result of the Regional Transit Authority proposal was in doubt.

Four bodyguards blocked the hallway leading to Daley's suite of offices. The notables making headway through the defenders included long-time Daley confidants U. S. District Court Judge Abraham Lincoln Marovitz and State Democratic Party Chairman John Touhy, Sheriff Richard Elrod, Daley's wife, Eleanor, and two of their sons, John and Michael, who all waited patiently for results to come in.

TWO ATTRACTIVE women fresh from a hotel bar enlivened the atmosphere around the rather staid Daley camp by threatening to pose nude or streak for photographers waiting for Tully to arrive to receive counsel from the mayor. The women were escorted away from sight.

On the mezzanine level below, 75 party workers were handling results, relaying them directly to Daley's office for his personal evaluation. Couriers regularly bounded up and down the stairs bringing news of the day the Democratic Party chief.

Early in the evening, reporters were fidgeting because they weren't being informed of how the voting was going and they came to the realization that neither Tully nor Daley would make an appearance until most of their deadlines had passed.

"Nobody wants to get this thing over with sooner than the mayor," said newly appointed Daley press secretary Frank Sullivan, a remark that might have had several meanings.

TULLY FINALLY arrived at Daley's office about 10:15. He hadn't made a victory statement despite knowing he had won. Not many Democrats make statements without first seeing the mayor.

Smiling, Tully alighted from an elevator arm in arm with Cullerton, who has taken up a life of ease in Florida. He looks it, too, sporting a deep tan and seeming refreshed despite his advanced years. The two men went in to see the mayor and didn't come out until almost an hour later when they stepped before television cameras and the press.

Daley, with Tully on his right and the silent Cullerton on his left, began the news conference, as he always does. His opening statement was short and sweet: "Ladies and gentlemen, I want to introduce you to the new assessor of Cook County who will be elected in November." The mayor stepped aside to let Tully bask in the limelight but his presence was felt throughout.

TULLY THANKED just about everybody there is to thank in an election victory speech and then fielded questions. He turned to the stone-faced Daley standing behind him with his arms folded and Daley whispered advice in Tully's ear. Tully answered, but evaded some crucial questions.

Daley showed little emotion while in the background but smiled and joked with reporters when he resumed his place in front of the microphones.

Did you teach Gov. Walker a lesson? he was asked.

"In a primary we have a right to differ," Daley responded diplomatically.

THE QUESTIONS about him and Walker persisted.

"Let's just say that when Walker comes back to town," said Daley, "I'll pay his way into a bongo game."

Then he said the party would win a big victory in November because the primary losers would join in supporting Tully and the other party candidates. With that, he led the two other men off toward his office. The entourage paused momentarily when Cullerton tripped over a television camera wire but soon entered a waiting elevator to be whisked upstairs.

Ogilvie makes an election-night visit

by STEVE BROWN

Richard B. Ogilvie strolled into Cook County Republican headquarters Tuesday night just to see how things were going.

There was no big reception waiting for the former governor, who is now looked on as a party statesman by some. His name wasn't on the ballot for the first time in a long time. His interest in the primary results could be gauged best by the fact he had spent the evening at the National Ballet of Canada performance at the Opera House.

Ogilvie shook a few hands, and joked with one of the party faithful who waved a "We Go for Mr. O" campaign poster left over from earlier political wars.

He accepted a scotch and settled into a comfortable chair to hear about the primary.

HE SAID HE had not heard returns from the Regional Transportation Authority referendum. While he campaigned vigorously for the issue in the week prior to the election, the former governor admitted to forgetting March 19 was primary day, when he accepted the invitation to the ballet several weeks ago.

"What do we know about RTA?" he asked a party worker.

"Maybe we should call over to the 'cockpit' to see what they're saying,"

Richard B. Ogilvie

Ogilvie said, suggesting Mayor Daley's nerve center in city hall across LaSalle Street from the GOP camp could possibly shed some light on the returns.

BUT THE CASUAL conversation with friends and party workers faded as Ogilvie turned his attention to a live television interview with Gov. Daniel Walker, the man who had thrown him out of office 18 months ago.

He listened with interest as a haggard-looking Walker hunched over a microphone and tried to convince himself and the TV audience his "New Faces" candidates had served notice on the Daley machine that there were some significant changes made.

"How did he do?" Ogilvie asked. A worker told the former governor that many of the new faces had been tromped by the machine.

He turned back to the television as Walker was asked by a well-known broadcaster if his current efforts in Illinois weren't really the foundation for a Presidential bid.

Walker looked sincere and said he was working for the good of the people.

Ogilvie, who had been staring at the tips of his patent leather shoes, which went well with his tuxedo and black-and-white checkered vest, just looked up and smiled.

Someone asked Ogilvie the same question that had been put to Walker.

"I have no plans for running for office again," he said. Ogilvie remarked that there are few pension benefits attached to political offices and he was working to build up an estate.

"You have to know there is a lot of work to a state campaign," Ogilvie said.

"Sure there are thoughts that run through my mind at times like these, but I like to leave the analysis to the professional," he said.

Unlike elections of past years, it was a quiet night for Ogilvie. He shook a few more hands and left a little later.

"I just stopped by for a minute, I don't think I could do anything around here tonight anyway," he said.

RTA's narrow passage should prompt amendments

The Regional Transit Authority has been approved, but the work of rebuilding mass transit in the metropolitan Chicago area is just beginning.

State legislators and other officials connected with RTA should read Tuesday's referendum result as a mandate from voters in the six-county area to improve transportation and to amend the RTA law.

Chicago — which benefits from all railroad lines and the CTA system — saved RTA with a lopsided, Democratic machine vote of approval. The suburbs, including non-Chicago Cook County, turned thumbs down on the proposal in a plea to remove Chicago-favored inequities in the law.

The Herald urged "no" votes on the RTA because it fails to provide a practical solution to metro-area transit problems. The law is designed to provide financial aid for existing transit systems, mainly the CTA, and does not look toward long-range expansion of transit service in the suburbs.

When the legislature assembles in Springfield next month, improvements in the current RTA law should include the handful of simple amendments necessary to remove loopholes in the law. Local representation should be modified to increase the voice of the suburbs. A tax ceiling is mandatory. Funding should be clearly defined. Public parking facilities liable for RTA taxes should be named because broad powers in the law could include taxation of shopping center parking lots and municipal parking meters. The law should require public bidding of all bonds issued by the RTA board, a simple money-saving provision normally found in other bond law.

The suburbs, which overwhelmingly voted against the current proposal, deserve a guarantee that most local money collected for the RTA through increased taxes will benefit local transportation. While stabilizing current transit systems, the new RTA board should begin planning for transportation that can connect, for example, Elk Grove Village and Oak Park.

Although politicians will select the RTA board, the appointments should be non-political. The board members should be fair-minded, with the ability to communicate and compromise, and with recognized expertise in fields related to RTA board duties.

State Rep. Donald Totten, R-Hoffman Estates, and Rep. Gene Schlickman, R-Arlington Heights, deserve credit for their battle against the current RTA law.

Their arguments focused on problems in the law and should provide a starting point for improvements in RTA. Their battle is just beginning.

We've got to correct some obvious flaws!

Peace Corps volunteers must 'adapt,' reader says

I am not my brother's keeper — actually, I'm quite sure he doesn't need one. My brother is Robert Horrell of whom brief mention was made in an article March 6 highlighting the disenchantment of an Arlington Heights youth with his brief Peace Corps experience. Speaking through and for my brother I hope to rectify some of the mistaken impressions that apparently many so-called "volunteers" entertain about the "Peace Corps dream" — mistaken impressions which, as evidenced by last week's article, are often passed on to the public.

My brother joined the Peace Corps in 1971 and was sent to Sierra Leone to help the Ministry of Works there design and construct water supply systems. The following are excerpts from his letters received over the past two and a half years which may serve to illustrate the reality of the Peace Corps as an experience rather than as a myth or "tarnished dream."

"Our program has two main objec-

letters to the editor

tives: 1 — to provide an adequate supply of safe, clean water piped into the villages, and 2 — to train a Sierra Leonean to carry on the work after those in our program leave.

"The villages presently take their water from polluted streams and wells, with the women and children spending a good part of their working days carrying the polluted water from the sources in buckets.

"We hope that the program will curb the present high frequency of water-borne diseases such as typhoid, dysentery, and cholera, as well as make life more comfortable for the majority of the village population.

"My house is in Port Loko, one of Sierra Leone's larger towns. I spend most of my time in the bush country to survey the villages and collect data for the water systems. While there, I sleep in the villages, eat the native foods, and am exposed to lifestyles very different from any I have known.

"One of my most satisfying experiences occurred during our training program while we were constructing a water system in a small village. I had shown one man how to make a concrete standpipe and make the necessary connections to the pipeline. We then left the village for another phase of training. I heard later that the same man had gone ahead and successfully constructed the seven remaining standpipes, all in their proper places, and properly connected them to the main pipeline.

"In the villages I speak Krio, which is close to English and easy to learn. I am also trying to learn a tribal language called Temne. I had never learned a language other than English, and I get feelings of fascination and satisfaction at being able to speak and comprehend in a manner I had never known before.

"I think I am helping make a difference for the better in some lives but the people teach me a lot about living in return. This is what it's all about — the people and the sharing.

"Considering this exposure to variations in culture, lifestyle, and languages, and the knowledge that this work will benefit many people needing better living conditions, my stay in the Peace Corps is adding up to an interesting and rewarding experience, and one for which I am very grateful."

If the legacy of John F. Kennedy was for thousands of young Americans to stand up and ask what they could do for their country, then those who joined the Peace Corps to "dream" of this legacy should have remained seated. The Peace Corps, then as now, does establish goodwill between countries, but this relationship is based on the volunteer's individual ability to offer what he knows in a field he has been trained in. What he offers may be useful or it may not. The fact is that the volunteer's usefulness depends not so much on his ability to instruct or enforce "modern technological advances" but rather on his ability to adapt himself to technologies different from his own and then decide for himself if he, as an individual, is able to contribute to — not change — his newly adapted way of life.

The emphasis here is plainly on the individual's adaptation to a different culture. This point is stressed over and over in all Peace Corps orientation seminars. But, needless to say, it does not always strike home. Thus it is that many "volunteers" find themselves "on vacation" for two years due to a frustrated reluctance or inability to sacrifice "home-grown" ideas of living, working, and achievement. First of all, it is obvious that they have not completely adapted themselves to a new way of life because their minimum subsistence pay would not afford such a vacation. Secondly, if the volunteer finds himself with nothing to offer of his own capabilities then indeed he should pack his bags for home for he can render no service to himself or his host country.

Perhaps the training period in language and cultural styles is minimal. Again it is up to the individual to build from this groundwork and develop himself in the selected country before he ambitiously tries to develop even the smallest cultural facet of that country.

As for the volunteer's complaint of frustration and loneliness, this he necessarily did not have to go overseas to excounter. These problems stem from the volunteer's inability to adjust to a new situation. If approached with a completely open-minded attitude the Peace Corps volunteer will first — must first — learn his own shortcomings and abilities in a way of life other than his own before he vainly tries to impose his accustomed way of life on a way of life to which he has failed to adapt.

If the Peace Corps dream seems to be fading, and the increased rate in "terminated" volunteers suggests this, it is only because far too many "volunteers" believe in the "dream" of helping other people, yet find themselves unable, as individuals, to properly adapt themselves as they must to other ways of life in order to make that dream a real experience.

Backs schools' shutdown

As teachers in Arlington Heights Elementary Dist. 25, we felt very concerned about the position taken by A. B. Magnus in the letter published in the Arlington Herald on March 1. A. B. Magnus presupposes that school was called off because it was a Friday and the faculty would react positively towards a three day weekend. He does not seem to regard the high probability of injury to children on their way to school that morning as a sound reason for school dismissal. Was he aware of the power lines that were down? Was he aware of the lack of heat and electricity in some of the community school buildings? Was he aware of the police department's recommendation that the schools be closed? Was he aware that in our building which has a staff of over 50, 10 per cent traveling more than 25 miles to school without benefit of public transportation, that 96 per cent appeared at school. Two teachers had succumbed to the flu.

It appears that A. B. Magnus was more concerned with the babysitting problem on that snowy Friday morning than he was with the safety of his children.

'Deadbeats' blasted

Now that Richard Nixon has things pretty well screwed up down in Washington, it looks as though the pet projects of liberal editorial writers will be trotted out and paraded before the public again. I refer to your editorial of March 8 in which you plead the cause of the deadbeats that fled to Canada, rather than help their country in a time of crisis.

It would be another case entirely if these individuals were true conscientious objectors. Had they refused to take part in the killing of another human being, but instead had offered to serve in the saving of lives in the Medical Corps, I could understand and support your plea. This is not the case at all. These people not only refused to serve, but they continued to "bad mouth" this country and its leaders after they had fled. They still claim this country owes them an apology and the admission we were wrong and they were right.

I oppose your plea for amnesty, and will continue to urge my representatives in Congress to oppose any such legislation.

Senators cut own pay hike

by GEORGE J. MARDER

WASHINGTON — Like the universe, the Senate use of the filibuster keeps expanding.

To some senators, the filibuster has become as popular as a well-stocked service station would be to motorists able to get a fill-up, day or night. But of course, not as unique.

There was a time when the filibuster was supposed to be reserved for matters which could shake the Republic — civil rights, states rights, issues of war and peace. At least that's what the senators insisted when they tried to talk legislation to death rather than permit a vote on the merits. Filibustering senators always argued that they were justified in thwarting majority rule because of the gravity of the issue involved.

When recently, however, the Senate was threatened with a filibuster over the matter of pay raises for members of Congress, it would have been difficult to argue that the fate of the nation was at stake — although the life styles of some lawmakers might have been involved.

The filibuster, threatened by Sen. Ted Stevens, R-Alaska, was designed to kill moves that would block a three-step, 22.5 per cent increase in congressional pay, from the present $42,500 to $52,797 in 1976.

Senators, in a rare invocation of the gag rule on the first vote, choked off Stevens' filibuster before he could even get it going, then went on to block the pay raises from going into effect during this sensitive election year. Stevens is not up for re-election.

Many lawmakers believe they deserve a pay raise. They haven't had one since 1969 when they got a 41 per cent pay boost. But public opinion deters them from openly supporting a pay increase at a time when Congress is held in lower

The present standard is to have Congressional pay compete with levels paid in private enterprise to attract talented individuals who might otherwise pass congressional service by.

However, along with the different standards, Congress has abandoned some other important guidelines. One is "no work, no pay." The law of the land is for members to be docked when they are absent for any reason other than illness.

That particular law hasn't been enforced for three-quarters of a century. Meanwhile, in the House, there is the unorganized, unmentioned T-to-T club of members who go home for long weekends, report in for work on Tuesday, and report out on Thursday.

During election years, absenteeism is so widespread that former Senator Margaret Chase Smith of Maine once seriously proposed that congress fire gold-bricking members with a rule calling for automatic expulsion of lawmakers who fail to vote at least 40 per cent of the time. (UPI) esteem than President Nixon, who is beleaguered by Watergate.

Not only the levels, but the standards for congressional pay have changed over the years. The founding fathers set this standard: the pay shouldn't be so high that people would seek the salary as much as, or more than, the job; but it shouldn't be so low that only rich people could afford to serve. Incidentally, the original Congress found that $6 for every day worked, was just right.

What if they gave the nation a birthday party and nobody came?
...It was a revolutionary idea, but it may fall prey to hucksters

A big Bicentennial bust

by TOM TIEDE

WASHINGTON — When officials first began discussing plans in the mid-1960s, there were grand hopes for America's Bicentennial birthday party. But then one by one they faded:

Philadelphia voted against hosting a focus fair. Congress failed to generate any enthusiasm or much money, the official Bicentennial Commission has flubbed all of its responsibilities except the collection of salaries, and the once fine idea of 50 new parks for 50 old states is now as dead as public interest.

Current prospects for 1976, then, are exceedingly dim, despite President Nixon's latest call for a nation full of mini-celebrations.

Other than some spirited proceedings planned for a few states and cities, it appears American business will undertake the bulk of the hoopla; ITT is considering the marketing of a "revolutionary" new loaf of bread, some auto manufacturers will doubtless produce red, white and blue cars — and the whole patriotic thing may turn into one year-long Washington's Birthday Sale.

BUT THERE is still one small and poverty-stricken chance to rescue the 200th year from commercialism. The People's Bicentennial Commission, an alternative to the official American Revolutionary Bicentennial Commission, is still plugging along with the fundamental dream of celebrating the birth as it should be — not with tacky bread promotions, but with a re-education of, and reaffirmation for, the basic principles that created the land.

At first glance, the PBC does not appear able to pay its light bill much less organize a commemoration among 212 million people. With headquarters in a stuck-away corner of a second-rate Washington office structure, with mildewed boxes piled high and haphazardly along paint-chipped walls, the PBC is not much more than nine young people — including a gas station attendant and a school dropout — who run around in sneakers and Levis and complain about the cash box being empty (again).

Yet along with the roaches that surely inhabit the corners, there is spirit and energy at the PBC office which has never materialized at the cross-town suites of the official ARBC. "We are not civil service employees," says PBC founder Jeremy Rifkin. "We are dedicated people making $85 a week salary and loving it. This is why we are doing what the ARBC can't do — getting citizens interested in 1976. You wait, we're doing some tremendous things."

INDEED, THE PBC already has a program that, at its level, outclasses the official governmental planning. Working with grass-roots Americans on the idea that 1976 should be a rededication to revolutionary philosophies, not a crass lot of corporate flag waving, Rifkin says the PBC has accomplished the following:

Drawn up commemorative programs for a variety of groups, including YMCAs, Camp Fire organizations and the National Council of Churches; begun one-minute radio spot advertisements on 750 of the nation's stations; published several instruction booklets on subjects ranging from the whys of the American Revolution to the hows of celebrating it; and compiled thousands of names and organizations which are to form the core of the 1976 celebration.

No mountains have been moved, yet. The PBC operates on a $200,000 annual budget, mostly contributions (vs. the yearly millions for ARBC), thus extraordinary measures have not been possible. Besides this, despite its energy, few Americans have heard of the PBC. Many of those who have, moreover, consider it a nest of radicals; says one ARBC member: "They're just kids, out to raise a little hell."

KIDS THEY MAY be (well, Rifkin is 29, and some others are in their 30s), but the PBC insists hell raising is not one of their goals. To the contrary, Rifkin considers his group the personification of true patriotism. He says the official Bicentennial group is made up of old fogies who, had they been alive during the Revolution, would have been on the side of the Tories.

"Would Rockefeller have fought the king?" Rifkin asks. "No. These people are phony flag wavers. What we stand for is real Americanism — equal opportunity, government by the consent of the governed — and these are the things we stress for 1976."

Far from wishing the destruction of the American way, Rifkin adds, "the PBC wants to re-enforce it." He sees a proper commemoration of the Revolution as bringing everybody — the VFW and the SDS, President Nixon and Daniel Ellsberg — together in mutual devotion of one just nation. "If we do this right, we're going to have kids reading the Declaration of Independence rather than Mao's Red Book, we're going to have everybody wearing flag lapels not just the conservatives, we're going to have a whole new political thought where there is economic as well as social democracy."

SUCH DREAMS, of course, are the engaging stuff of youth. But PBC spirit to the contrary, it may well be too late to get the Bicentennial off the ground. Even if a herculean, well-financed effort was immediately instituted, there is no guarantee the public would buy it. Watergate has soured at least some spirit for nationalism, the energy crisis has blunted the once fierce belief in American independence — no doubt about it, the 200th year could not have come about at a worst historic juncture.

Yet the PBC is stubbornly confident that Americans want to and will celebrate the First Principles two years hence. For adversity is the glue of a great society. As the PBC thinks Tom Paine would have said it: "These are the times that try men's souls; the summer soldier and the sunshine patriot will, in this crisis, shrink from the service of his country; but he that stands it now, deserves the love and thanks of man and woman."

Supersectional—a whole new ballgame for this area

Elaine and Bob—cancel date so writer can go downstate

(Editor's note: This is an open letter to Bob and Elaine. Their last names will be confidential to spare them possible hate mail from basketball fans everywhere.)

Dear Elaine and Bob,

If at all possible, could you please postpone your wedding?

I realize that you've planned for months on getting married at St. Raymond's Catholic Church this Saturday, Cousin Bob. And I'm also grateful that you have given me the privilege of being one of your groomsmen.

But how about making the marriage sometime next week? Saturday, March 30, would be a perfect day. It would probably be warmer, possibly sunnier and — most importantly — the week after the state high school basketball tournament.

You see, cousin, John Hersey High School's basketball team is in the Elite Eight. The Huskies will be going to Champaign this weekend — a place where no Herald area team has ever played in the 66-year history of this most prestigious of Illinois schoolboy events.

Certainly you can understand the importance of my being there for this two-day extravaganza. I mean, you have to remember the thrills you received in watching your hometown team — the Galesburg Silver Streaks — in the state finals in past years.

If you don't cancel your wedding, Bob and Elaine, I'll have to TRY and watch Hersey on television. I accent the word try because your wedding will not only keep me away from Champaign, but it also might keep me away from the tube during critical games.

Bob, you starred for your high school team in basketball. You love the sport, I know. If you put off the end of your bachelorhood one week, you too can see every exciting play unfold on TV. And I can pack my bags for the trip downstate.

If the wedding goes on, you'll be worrying about taking the big plunge when Hersey takes the court against Bloom Friday at 12:15 p.m.

If the wedding goes on, you'll be marching up and down the aisle with me Friday night at 7 p.m. while the third game of the first round session is underway. Let's face it, Bob. What's more fun — rehearsal practice or the prep basketball tourney? We both know what is.

If the wedding goes on, we'll be at the rehearsal dinner as one of Hersey's potential Saturday opponents is winning. At the same time, my sportswriting cohorts will be out on the town celebrating Her-sey's dramatic upset of No. 1 ranked Bloom.

If the wedding goes on, we'll be at St. Raymond's in Mount Prospect on Saturday as Hersey polishes off its second opponent. You'll be so nervous, Bob, that you won't even know it.

If the wedding goes on, we'll be drinking toasts to you and your lovely bride while my coworkers are pouring down victory drinks in anticipation of the championship for Hersey.

If the wedding goes on, hopefully I'll get back home in time to watch the finals at 8 p.m. Saturday.

If the wedding goes on, I'll have missed quite possibly my greatest thrill in writing — helping cover a team that wins the state title.

The wedding must not go on!

Think about it, cousin. The thrill of a lifetime. How can you deny me this most golden of opportunities?

Elaine, your alma mater — Prospect High School — has the best basketball won-lost record in the area over the last 15 years. Certainly you can understand the meaning of this glorious moment in area history.

Both of you know that my wife and I have just returned from the greatest vacation we've ever had. A dream trip to Florida.

I had planned to have a column today telling of the enjoyable times spent attending several White Sox exhibition games in Sarasota. However, the tremendous importance of Hersey's Supersectional victory over Waukegan Tuesday — the most important sporting event in the history of Paddock Publications — has forced me to postpone my plans.

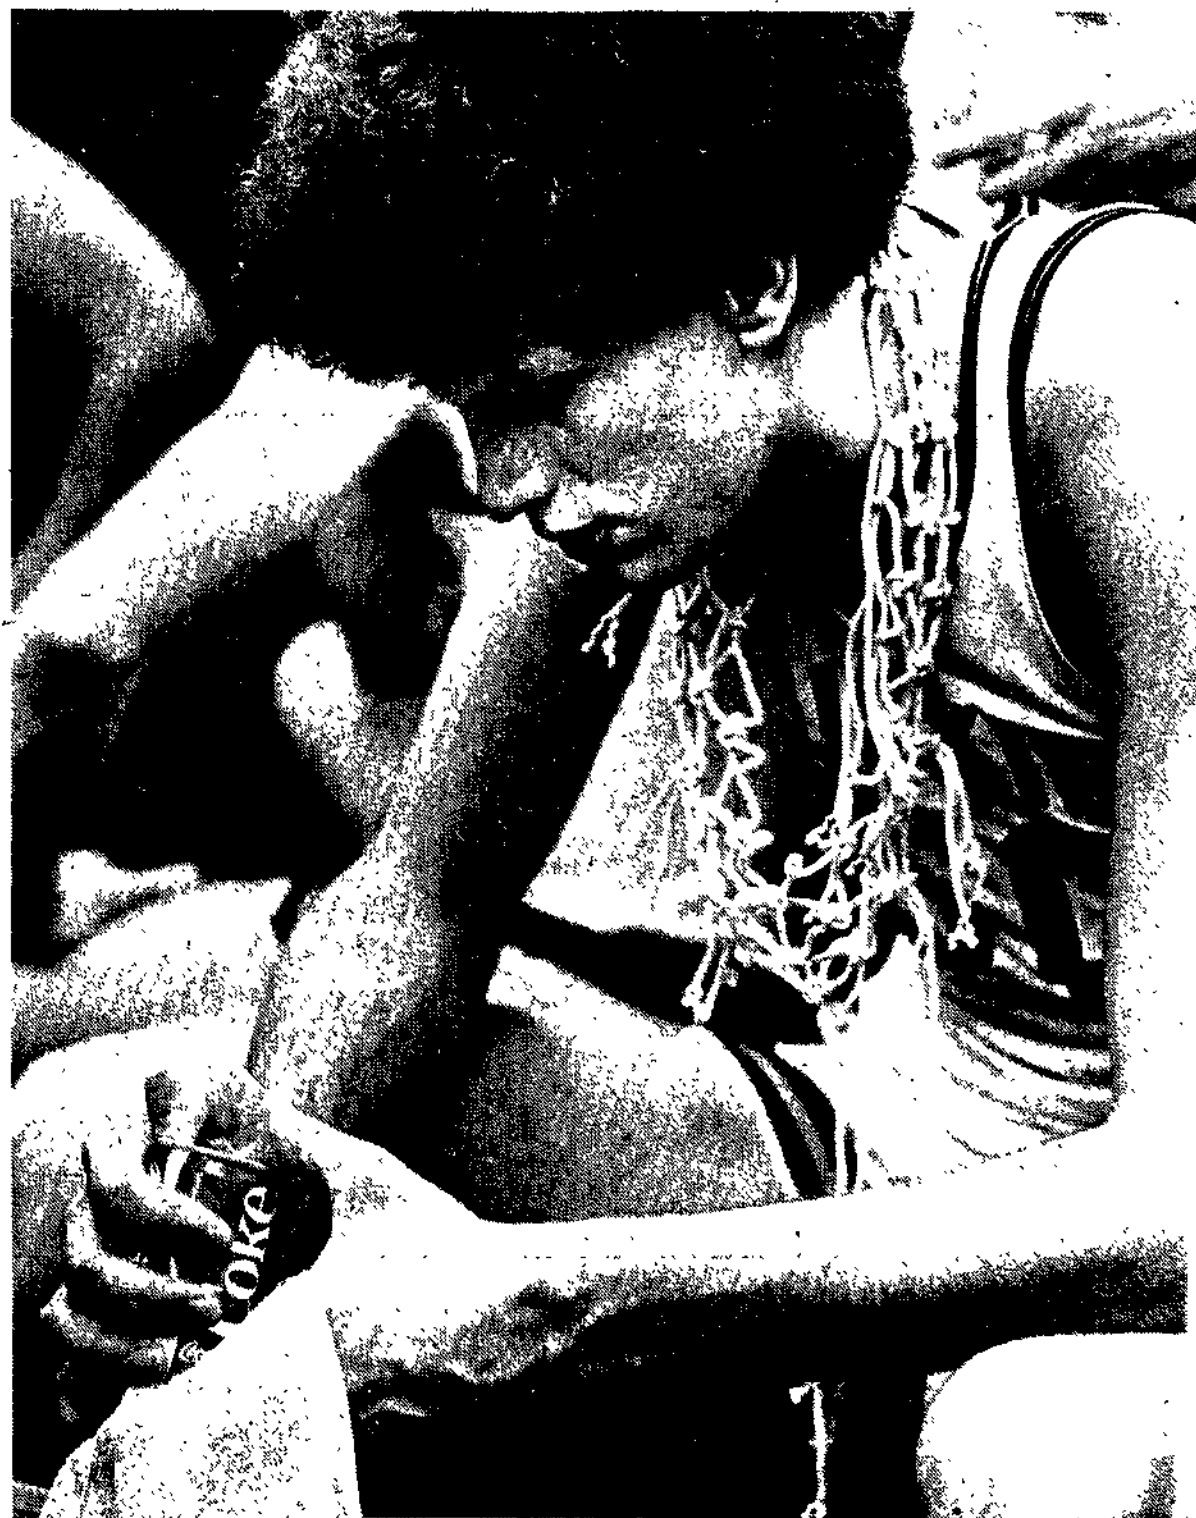

How about postponing yours?

Sincerely,

Your cousin

P.S. Bob, do you have any friends or relation that wear a 15½, 35-inch shirt, 34, 34-inch pants and size 42 long jacket? I've got a rented tuxedo that I'll loan free of charge.

P.P.S. If Hersey beats Bloom Friday afternoon, forget the wedding. I'm heading downstate.

Dave Corzine . . . 20 points, 11 rebounds, six blocked shots, one net.

Hersey fans quickly buying tourney tickets

Tickets were never sold faster in the Herald area.

Hersey basketball fans, eager to see their heroes in person for Friday afternoon's 12:15 first round game with Bloom, were buying tickets in droves yesterday.

If any of the 2,000 allotted to the school are left, area fans interested in going down to Champaign had better be at the school early today. Tickets are $3 each.

The high school, located at 1909 E. Thomas in Arlington Heights, is planning a super sendoff for its Elite Eight team in the form of a pep assembly, beginning at noon today.

There will be no school Friday, allowing all who want to go downstate the pleasure of doing so. Buses are scheduled to leave Friday at 7:30 a.m., returning the same day. Round trip is $4.

A victory by Hersey will have the buses rolling again on Saturday with the same departure time from the high school. Ticket allotment information will be announced immediately after the Bloom game.

Consistency comes at finish for Viking basketball team

by KEITH REINHARD

In another time... a different season... Fremd's basketball fortunes may have been decidedly more abundant.

But it was 1973-74, the year of the strong conference, and for the Vikings that created some problems. It was not exactly the kind of campaign they wanted to rave about afterwards.

More specifically the Vikes wound up 10-16 overall with a 5-9 Mid-Suburban log good for a fourth place tie in the North Division. There was a reasonably good start and a respectable finish but a very long period of frustration right through the middle of the winter.

Fremd coach Leon Kasuboske had some observations and some explanations ready. "We were healthy toward the end of the year and that might have helped us snap out of it," he said.

"We also began to achieve some of the consistency that eluded us most of the season and that helped us come out of it too," he added.

The "it" he was referring to was a slump of sorts that emerged just before Christmas and never quite vanished until the Vike schedule was nearly concluded. Kasuboske felt it was brought on mainly by a faltering of this consistency and regained only because his talking, lecturing and harping on it finally began to seep through.

"We weren't a very big team to begin with and our game was geared toward the press. The press, of course, is designed for team play, and we just never seemed to get that together until it was nearly all over."

Compounding the problem was the ruggedness of the Viking slate. There were not one or two but three very strong foes just within their division and again that many on the other side of the circuit.

Fremd eventually played them all. During the conference season these powerhouse opponents accounted for over half the schedule and the Vikes fared disparagingly poor, winning only one out of eight contests with them.

"The sad thing about it," Kasuboske related, "is that we were in practically every one of them most of the way. It was the same in a number of our non-conference games too, where we'd be up by a few, even or down by just a couple of points going into the last two or three minutes of play and suddenly fell by the wayside."

Even in a number of wins over that span the Vike mentor felt his squad lagged in the waning moments primarily because of this inconsistency. What might have been romps, then, wound up as tight decisions.

This slump, unfortunately, covered a major portion of the season. Fremd had launched it in more pleasing fashion, winning five of their first nine encounters including a non-conference victory over Hersey and a win in their loop lifeline against Prospect.

Over the next 16 contests, however, they won only four more times. It wasn't until league play had been shelved and the regionals were underway that Kasuboske felt the Vikings began to click again.

They stormed past Palatine (a team that had toppled them twice in MSL action) 75-52 and then took towering Conant all the way to the wire before succumbing, 63-61. But that was it. The season was over. And a Fremd team finally on the upswing probably never was able to fulfill their potential.

"Even though it was very late in the season, I was still glad to see them come around. It meant we were able to finish up without a sour taste in our mouths and as a coach I felt I had achieved something by getting some of these points across," Kasuboske summarized.

"In realizing the importance of playing well as a unit at the conclusion of the season, I think the kids learned something too that will stay with them a long while."

As bleak as the final won-loss record looked, there were still some individual moments and individual performances during the year that emerged on the brilliant side. A stunning 102-69 conquest of Downers Grove South was one of these and a 34-point barrage by Randy Weber in their third meeting with Hersey was another.

Weber, possibly the finest ball handler to ever wear a Fremd uniform and one of the circuit standouts, finished up as the fourth leading MSL scorer with a hefty 18.7 average.

Seniors Weber, Doug Mize and Bob Frank teamed up to provide most of the squad's scoring punch all year. Mize, a super competitor, quite likely would have excelled even more at a forward position but was thrust into a center slot and performed admirably against usually much taller opposition.

Frank, also pitted against many bigger foes at a forward slot, still came on as a strong rebounder and able scorer. "He was probably the most steady performer on the team," his coach complimented.

This top notch trio along with a number of other contributors like Jeff Chuck Currier and John Lavin will all be Hanisch, Steve Dwyer, Chris Senesac, gone next year, serving Kasuboske with a monumental building job. Furthermore, a team that was not very rangy this season will be hurting for height even more in 74-75. There is not one candidate at present in the whole Vike program over 6-3.

At least, perhaps the enthusiasm will linger on. "Despite some faults, this was still a good bunch of kids to work with," Kasuboske concluded. "There were 15 of them and they all worked hard the entire season with unfailing eagerness."

Another time and another place for this same group and there might have been another story to tell.

DOWNSTATE! DOWNSTATE! Those might not have been the words, but they were certainly the thoughts of Hersey assistant coach Al Kintzle Tuesday after the Huskies beat Waukegan, 39-31, in Super-sectionals at Northwestern University's McGaw Hall. The Huskies open Elite Eight play in Champaign with a 12:15 p.m. game Friday against Bloom. The clubs have met once before this year and Bloom won, 60-51.

Indoor track outlook

Area ranks with state's best

by ART MUGALIAN
Track and Field Editor

"... and miles to go before I sleep."
— Robert Frost

In track and field, as well as life, the road to fulfillment is a long and arduous one. For the teams in the Mid-Suburban League, the season is advancing rapidly toward the first conference indoor meet at Wheeling on April 5-6.

The indoor portion of the track schedule is about two-thirds finished, but the MSL squads still have many "miles to go" before the season culminates in the state meet in Charleston.

Recent developments indicate that the competition will be keen at Wheeling. Several outstanding performances have been turned in by MSL trackmen, in and outside of league action.

Jim DiLenge of Hersey, one of the top athletes in the area, long jumped 21.4 last week against Forest View, the 10th best mark in the state. He has also reached 40.3 in the triple jump this year, the first time the event has been scheduled in the MSL.

But Schaumburg's Ed Martin, another versatile performer, has chalked up a triple jump high of 40-1 1/2, in addition to ranking far up on the list in the 50-yard high hurdles (:06.8), the 50-yard lows (:06.4), and the 60-yard highs (:07.8).

Another area trackman with top credentials is Fremd's Jeff Brisson, a key member of the Vikings' four-lap and mile relay teams, besides heading up the squad's sprint contingent. Brisson has run the 50-yard dash in :05.6 this season.

Brisson also has the best time for the 440-yard dash among MSL runners, clocking the distance in a neat :52.5. The top time in the state so far this year is a :50.6.

Greg Bowen of Rolling Meadows and Len Olson of Conant have each equaled Brisson's mark in the 50-yard dash. The time of :45.6 ranks the three MSL sprinters only three-tenths of a second off the best time in Illinois.

When it comes to state rankings, however, a pair of Hersey runners and a Meadows shotputter lead the way. Chris Cooney and Ron Stephani of the Huskies got their names on the big board a few weeks ago in an invitational meet at Champaign. Cooney ran the 880 in 1:56.6, the third best time in the state, and Stephani covered the mile at a 4:20.7 pace, sixth in the state.

John Sloan of the Mustangs has the second best shot put mark in Illinois with a heave of 58-1 1/4. Forest View's Craig Brinkman, a basketball player until just a week ago, has already tossed the weighted sphere 51-4 1/2.

Arnold Jackson, Schaumburg's premier distance man of a year ago, has recorded a two mile time of 9:27.6, but the senior state qualifier has gotten off to a slow start this season due to some minor injuries.

The high jumping laurels so far this year belong to John Lortz of Wheeling. The Wildcat leaper has reached 6-3 in breaking the school record. But Palatine's Mike Murphy has attained 6-2 and he is fast-improving. The top mark in the state so far is 6-4.

Among the top hurdlers in the area, in addition to Martin of Schaumburg, are Jeff Ramas of Rolling Meadows, Jeff Brandt of Conant, Jim Vartanian of Forest View, Steve Whited of Fremd, Craig Musser of Hersey, and Dave King of Elk Grove.

Schaumburg's Bruce Mahlig has recorded the best pole vault performance in the MSL with a mark of 13-6, but other promising leaps have been turned in by Grant McNeerney and Mike Vasquez of Fremd, Doug Paape and Scott Clark of Conant, and Mark Harris of Meadows.

Buffalo Grove's team is made up of underclassmen, but several good times have been registered by the young Bison. Distance man Steve Wellbank is undefeated in the mile and two mile runs and John Dickinson has shown promise in the 440 and the hurdles. With the Schuster brothers, in the track lineup following the end of the basketball season, Buffalo Grove can only go up in its first season of MSL varsity track.

There is still some time to go before the outdoor season is at hand, not to mention the state meet. There may even be some more "snowy evenings" on the schedule. But Mid-Suburban League track and field is in full swing.

Maine West's basketball fate frustrating, unpredictable

by MIKE KLEIN

What can you write about a club that tried harder but couldn't finish even second?

Say they were erratic... inconsistent... unpredictable. And don't forget frustrating, their dominant trait.

When they lost in regionals to Notre Dame, Maine West's Warriors closed the book on a 9-15 varsity basketball season.

It began under an aura of higher hopes, a better than .500 record, perhaps 15 to 18 wins. The Warriors had a center who already carried two varsity letters and a guard who could shoot.

But in the end, there was a 6-7 Central Suburban South division record. Four teams failed to break even behind Maine South (13-0) and Niles North (9-4). And Maine West was one, placing third with Deerfield, also 6-7.

Erratic? West's Warriors carried a 4-13 season record before winning five of their last seven contests to make the frustration a little more bearable. But four of the last five wins came against teams with losing records.

Inconsistent? Gaston Freeman's team lost a four-point game at New Trier East, last year's state runner-up behind Chicago Hirsch. NTE's Indians were Glenbrook South regional winners, surviving rather than Glenbrook North (22-2) or New Trier West (17-8).

But only four points, 44-40, was their margin over Maine West, a club that had trouble twice beating Maine North which won four games and lost 18.

Unpredictable? The Warriors defeated Niles North not once, but twice. The Vikings finished with 19 wins and seven losses. But against other good teams, West was marginal competition. Wheeling beat West by one dozen points, Maine South beat West by 14 and 37, Notre Dame beat West by 13.

Which makes you wonder how the Warriors ever stopped Libertyville, a 17-11 club that lost by three points in sectional finals to the host Waukegan Bulldogs.

Maine got its first win, 57-53 in overtime, at Libertyville after four straight losses.

Or how did West ever come within one point of co-Central Suburban champion Glenbrook North, losing 82-81. They did, of course, enjoy a big second half margin in that one before folding.

Six of Maine West's nine wins were recorded against three teams whose composite record was 10-50. The Warriors had two victories apiece over Maine North (4-18), Niles West (6-17) and Niles East (9-15). West also lost one game to each of the three Niles schools.

The Warriors' success against Niles North had to be most gratifying. Maine was 14 and Niles Vikings already 6-1 when they met in December at Niles. In three overtimes, Maine won, 77-71. Steve Goebel had 35 points for Niles that night, the eventual CSL individual high game.

Gaston Freeman

But West countered with four players in double figures. Glen Heiden, the junior guard who could shoot, scored 20 points after getting none the previous week against Maine South. And Bill Makuch, one free throw versus Maine South, scored 18 at Niles.

Doug Myers, the 6-foot-8 center who'd already won two varsity letters, had 14 points. Junior Steve Zuccarini scored 13 as West earned an upset for its second win.

After Christmas, the clubs met again in a Niles Township Holiday Tournament game. The Warriors had taken just one more win, over Niles East, and were a 3-7 club. Niles North was 8-3, having lost a tourney game to Notre Dame. The Vikings beat West, 81-71.

All picks were on Niles North when the clubs staged their third game in February at Maine. The hosts were 6-13 and Niles aimed toward a 20-win season. The Vikings owned eight wins in their previous nine games and a 16-4 record.

But Myers scored 24 points and Zuccarini added 14 as Maine overpowered the Vikings, 63-56. Goebel, who'd scored 35 in their first match-up, got just 16 for Niles North.

Knowing that, it's disappointing that West couldn't do any better than 9-15. But perhaps in the longer view that's an appropriate record.

They opened with losses to Forest View (19-6 season record), Arlington (20-6), Proviso East and Maine South (23-2). Wheeling, a non-conference winner over West, finished 19-7. But you've got to beat those clubs occasionally to be any good yourself.

West returned only one established player, that being Myers, the senior center. He placed fifth in Central Suburban scoring, 234 points for an 18.0 average, and was among top selectees for the All-Conference team.

Season totals for Myers showed 390 points, a 16.3 pace, and 260 rebounds. He finished strong in the conference scoring race with games of 24, 21, 30 and 23 points.

Myers handed out 64 assists, third on the club behind Dan Myszkowski's 128 and Heiden's 76. Myers was a second team Des Plaines Herald All-Central Suburban choice.

Zuccarini, a junior forward, scored 313 points for a 13.0 average. His CSL figures were 12th place with 180 points and 13.8 per game. He was the Warriors' No. 2 rebounder with 165, or 95 behind Myers.

Those two were solid, but not until Makuch began starting in mid-season did West have its second forward. Many were tried, but only Makuch survived. He totaled 157 points and 7.5 per game.

Heiden gave West 11.9 points per outing, mostly from the outside, and will return next year alongside Makuch and Zuccarini. But Heiden is a willowy kid who needs strength and weight.

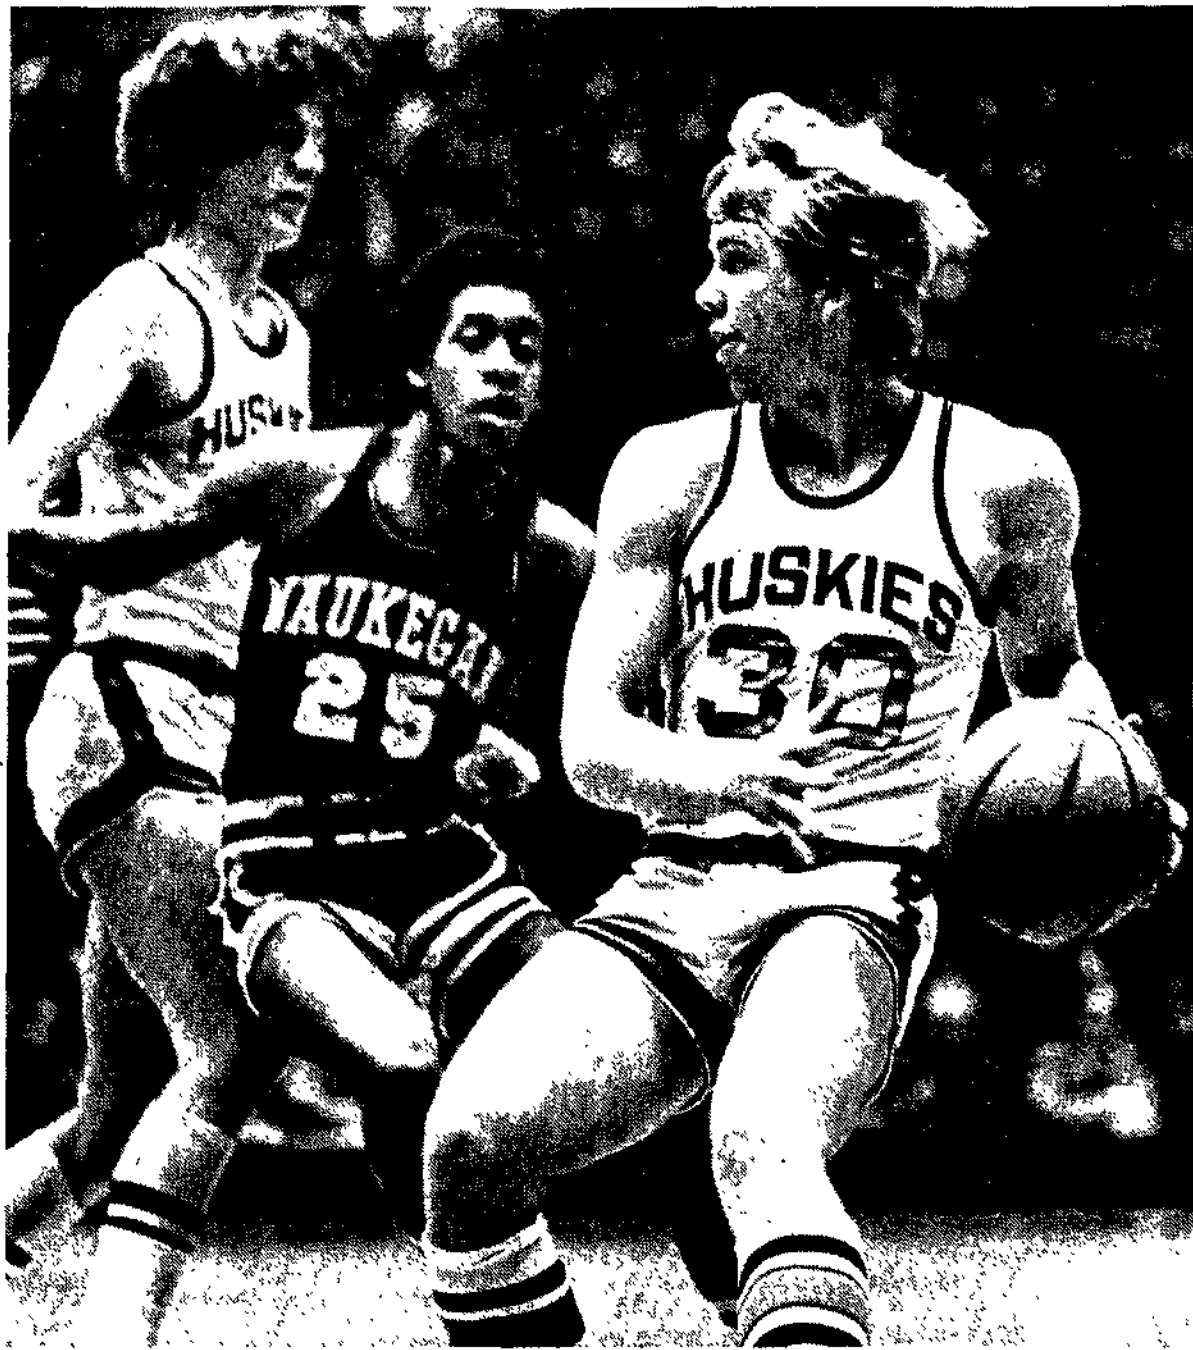

He wears down easily and that's why Heiden didn't play top guard in Freeman's offense. He'd be an ideal choice for that spot next season, pending development of sophomore Dave Kennedy, another who needs weight and strength.

The upfront spot was divided between Myszkowski (82 quarters) and Jim Goetz (49). Goetz has more basketball ability, but Myszkowski is a fierce competitor and that counted for something, in this case, the job.

So what happened to the Warriors? Myszkowski didn't play ball as a junior. That had to hurt. The schedule was tough. That had to hurt. And for much of the season, their lineup was uncertain beyond Myers, Heiden and Zuccarini. That, also, had to hurt.

The Warriors had some good athletes. They just didn't have enough basketball players. Which leaves you still wondering how they ever beat Niles North twice.

Awards will be given to the top four individuals in each bracket plus the two top overall teams. Each match is to be comprised of three one-minute periods and the only uniform necessary is gym or swim trunks with tee shirt and gym shoes.

Weigh-in is scheduled for 8 to 9:30 a.m. that Saturday and the meet will begin at 10 a.m. and conclude no later than 4 p.m. following a one-hour break at noon.

For further information contact Rick Mann at Hersey during school hours.

Sidewinders fall to Indianapolis, 69-56

by ART MUGALIAN

The Chicagoland Sidewinders are: A) a club for rattlesnakes; B) anti-aircraft missiles; C) none of the above.

If you answered C, you are correct. The Chicagoland Sidewinders are none of the above.

The Chicagoland Sidewinders are a wheelchair basketball team competing in the Mid-America Conference of the National Wheelchair Basketball Association. Since the team began operation in 1961, they have compiled a record of 126-66.

The Sidewinders have just returned from Detroit where they lost in the finals of the sectional tournament of the NWBA, 69-56, to Indianapolis. They had defeated Springfield (Ill.) in the semi-finals.

Five area men play for the Sidewinders, including Bruce Karr, the player-coach. His super-sub, Marv Lapicola, is a Schaumburg man who is the director of business services for School District 54.

"You've got to be in good condition to play this game," said Lapicola, a one-time polio patient. "You've got to have lots of strength from the waist up."

Lapicola's reserve performance keyed his team to victory in the semifinals.

"On Saturday night against Springfield," Lapicola beamed, "I had six-for-nine from the field. They came just at the right moment. But in the finals our coach didn't go to the bench and that may have meant the ball game."

The role of the sixth man is a challenge, but it hasn't always been that way for Lapicola, the John Havlicek of the wheelchair set.

"The last few years it's been difficult for me to keep up with the game," he continued. "I've been a substitute. For years I was a regular."

"But I remember the game back in the 1960's when the scores were in the 20's and low 30's. Now the finesse is so good that the scores are in the 60's and 70's."

At 38, Lapicola has been playing wheelchair basketball for 11 years now. He was a member of the 1964 U.S. Olympic Wheelchair team which captured a gold medal in Tokyo. Lapicola is married and has three children.

"It's a really tough game to play," the Schaumburg man said, "because the demand to move the chair is as great as the demand to shoot. And we play two 20 minute halves."

"There are a lot of gunners in this game," Lapicola continued, "and there are some real rabbits on the floor as far as speed is concerned. But the difference in the game is the big men. In the finals, Indianapolis had a couple of big guys — maybe 6-foot-5 or 6-6 — and they sat really tall in their chairs."

"They were just lobbing it in to them, and they were racking up the points," Lapicola went on. "It's a six-second lane — not three — and we couldn't keep the ball away from the big men in the lane."

The playoff season is over for the Sidewinders, but Lapicola will attend the national championships as an official. Indianapolis, now that they've gotten past Chicagoland's Sidewinders, rates the nod as favorite, according to Lapicola.

He ought to know.

Wheeling's standout 167-pound veteran Ken Smith will join with a number of other top-notch suburban area wrestlers in a meet against a visiting prep group from Finland Thursday.

The meet, to be hosted by Glenbrook South, is one of eight arranged for the National Finnish High School Wrestling Team against Illinois and Wisconsin competition by the U.S. Wrestling Federation. The group will be touring the Midwest for 22 days.

Smith will compete at 165 pounds. Others comprising the host team tomorrow are Notre Dame's Vito Vee at 105½ pounds, Mickey Rossetti of New Trier West and Jim Switzer of Glenbrook North at 114½. Jack Cotto of Glenbrook North at 123, Dale Eggert of Libertyville and Paul Frazee of Niles West at 132, Mike Riverios of the host Titans at 143 and teammates Rich Lafnitzegger at 154 and Jim Whitfield at 178.

Vee, Rossetti, Eggert, Cotto, Frazee, Lafnitzegger and Whitfield in addition to Smith all were state qualifiers this past mat season.

The Finnish contingent arrived in the U.S. March 17 and will compete at four schools in Illinois and four in Wisconsin during their stay, with the members to be guests of various local families. An American team selected from the USWF National Junior Championship later this summer is tentatively scheduled to return to visit to Finland.

Thursday's meet will begin at 7:30 p.m. in the GBS gym. Tickets will be on sale at the door at $1 for students and $2 for adults.

Wildcats rout Milwaukee

Whoever said that lightning never strikes twice never saw the league leading Woodfield Wildcats play hockey. Just like at Peoria one week ago, the Wildcats scored on their first shot on goal in Milwaukee.

This time Vi LaCroix set Bob Zimmerman loose on the right wing. Zimmerman let go a hard shot that cleanly beat the Wing goalie.

After the Wings tied it up, Darrell Skramstad went to work. At present he is the hottest scorer in the Continental League with 15 points in his last four games. He took a pass from Mike Hall and fed Don Olynk who made it 2-1, and the 8-5 rout was on. Skramstad scored himself on a pass from Olynk less than one minute later. Before the period was over Olynk scored again with an assist from Skramstad. The first period ended 4-2 Wildcats.

The first goal of the second period was a pure case of hustle as Skramstad broke in on the right and shot. The goalie saved but Darrell skated around the net to put in his own rebound. Hall assisted.

Zimmerman scored his second of the game on a screen shot with LaCroix assisting. Dennis Soboj made the next play as he broke up a Wing rush and fed a perfect pass to LaCroix who went in alone to make it 7-3 Cats.

After the Wings scored again, Don Olynk completed his hat trick on passes from Skramstad and Al Pink.

Once again outstanding goaltending was turned in by Wildcat goalie Warren Munson. The Wildcat record now stands at 16-9-1, which puts them in first place in the Continental League.

TV firm to sell out?

Lackluster profit levels in the Motorola Inc. home television receiver line accounts for the company's proposal to sell the unit to Matsushita Electric Industrial Co., Ltd. of Japan. The joint agreement with Matsushita is subject to final approval by the board of the respective companies, with a proposed closing date in April.

Women's business conference

Business Opportunities for Women, a Midwest regional conference, will be held March 22-23 at the Sheraton-Chicago Hotel, Chicago. Sony still believes in video cassettes

by LeROY POPE

NEW YORK — The collapse of the home video cassette boom before it got off the ground has left at least one industry leader who still believes strongly in the revolutionary machines and tapes.

He is Harvey L. Schein, 46 year-old president of Sony Corp. of America. Sony still is making and selling video cassette recorder-players and is preparing to bring out a handheld camera to enable people to produce instant home movies to show by the video cassette method through their home television receivers.

The equipment is expensive by the standard of home appliances, Sony's U-Matic color recorder-player costs $1,600, and the portable camera is expected to cost $3,000. Sale of the devices for educational and commercial use is only a tiny part of the Japanese Sony group's $1 billion a year global revenues, but Schein believes it has a big future.

SONY IS STICKING to the business in which Columbia Broadcasting System, Avco Corp., Ampex, RCA and other firms experienced so much difficulty. Curiously, Schein came to Sony from CBS, which lost heavily in Dr. Peter Goldmark's EVR system of film video cassettes and recorder-players. Schein left CBS in 1967 after working his way up from the legal department to vice president and general manager of the international group.

The big need in the consumer video cassette business is to create a popular demand, Schein explained. "That's the only way to justify mass production and get the price down to a level that people can pay," he said.

Business today

Aside from the obvious advantages in educational, scientific and some commercial use, video cassettes have tremendous potential in the home, Schein said.

"Since the cassette will hold up to an hour's listening and viewing and the recorder can be set to a timer, it can be used to record programs at night or when the family is away from home. It also can be used to record one broadcast program for playback at leisure while another program is watched on the same television set."

The erasability of the tape so it can be used over and over will cut home recording costs and mass demand can cut rental costs for pre-recorded tapes.

SCHEIN BELIEVES some broadcast TV programs ultimately will be designed with home recording in mind. "Why should one record an ordinary newscast when there are so many ordinary newscasts on the air?" he asked. "But if a news program containing a lot of exclusive material is broadcast with home recording in mind, it could serve the function of a magazine."

For the moment Schein is devoting much more of his attention to getting Sony's second American plant going and planning a third.

Sony was the first Japanese electronics company to establish a manufacturing facility on the U.S. mainland. This plant at San Diego turns out 25,000 color TV sets monthly and employs 600. Schein hopes to build the working force up to 1,000. A second plant will start turning out 30,000 picture tubes this spring and land has been acquired in the same area for a third factory.

In the early postwar years, Schein said, the Japanese learned a great deal about American factory methods. Now, he said, "We have trained American labor to make Sony products just as they are made in Japan."

Prices climbing as home improvement season begins

by LEA TONKIN

Never mind what the Old Farmer's Almanac says about prospects of chilly springtime weather... the annual home fixup bling has already begun.

An average 10 per cent-and-up boost in building materials prices over last year's cost is no deterrent to the suburban homeowner and apartment dweller bent on sprucing up the family home and making it more comfy for the duration of gasoline shortages, say lumber and hardware retailers.

"Without a question, the energy shortage helps us," said manager Michael Berke at the Courtesy Home Center in Mount Prospect. "We feel that instead of taking trips out of state, people are more apt to stay at home and put that money into their house."

THE DO-IT-YOURSELF trend already had a good foothold, Berke said. As the slowdown of new housing construction continues and the gasoline pinch cuts into travel plans, he sees an earlier-than-usual surge in the number of lookers and buyers for building materials and gardening supplies. And for the homeowner who doesn't hanker for experience with a hammer and saw, Courtesy is one of many companies in the area who offer home remodeling services. Prices are generally up 10 per cent over 1972, Berke adds. Yet store traffic is good for this time of year, especially on weekends. Displays invite browsing. As Berke said, "The majority of people come in for specifics, but there are many other projects they get into they never thought of before."

More families than usual for this time of year are tackling home remodeling projects, commented Ron Yelenosky, store manager at Forest City in Mount Prospect. "More people are on a do-it-yourself kick because they want their property to look better, and they want more convenience," Yelenosky said. "I think they're going to make themselves comfortable as long as they're going to stay at home."

ECONOMY IS A BIG factor in the do-it-yourself market. "Everyone is on the economy kick," added Yelenosky. He said everything from redwood to plastic pipe is becoming more costly.

Sidestepping labor costs for a room addition or a basement remodeling job requires a certain amount of skill. "We had 50 people turn out last week for a session on how to panel your walls, and for whole house air conditioning, we have 40 to 50 people signed up," Yelenosky said. Homeowners can save $400 to $600 on whole house air conditioning by doing the work themselves, he said.

A hefty increase in sales of patio furniture and gardening supplies over the usual March business is reported by Yelenosky. An increasing number of women are masterminding and doing the installation on kitchen cabinets and other projects. "It's not always knowing how to do it — but for a lot of women, having gumption or the guts to get it done," he said.

"There is a trend toward more people becoming adventurous, to try home improvement projects," said Roger Daniels, manager of the Republic Lumber store in Arlington Heights. "I'm probably one of the clumsiest people on this earth, and I've installed my own central air conditioning."

TYPICAL SPRING projects include exterior painting, gutters and major landscaping projects. Daniels said an increasing number of apartment dwellers are looking for paint, shelving materials and carpeting.

A do-it-yourselfer could buy all the supplies for a $400 remodeling in one stop, said Daniels but the average purchase is under $20. Price boosts for "virtually everything in the building materials business" have not hampered sales.

At the Nabor Lumber Co. in Palatine, owner Norman Nabor said prices are approximately 10 per cent higher for paneling, brick and stone and other items compared with 1973 levels. "I hope more people will be staying home and getting into projects," he said. "It all depends on the weather."

"I've been in the business 12 years, and I've noticed in the last month an unusual amount of increase in sales," said Richard Discher, manager of the building materials department at the Sears, Roebuck store in the Woodfield shopping center, Schaumburg. "They're definitely buying more and doing more things for themselves. Once they get a hammer in their hands and an electric drill, there's no stopping them."

SALES ARE GOOD for doors, siding, roofing and ceramic tile and other items, Discher reports. Garage door openers, once considered a luxury, are selling as a gas-saving gadget for some homeowners. Discher comments, "It's unbelievable — they're buying everything." Sales generally increase when the weather breaks, said Discher. He adds that shortages of aluminum and other products are appearing.

"We have a feeling from information we have that sales in this field ought to be 10 per cent better than a year ago," said William Ewert, managing director of the Illinois Retail Hardware Assn. in Mount Prospect. Lawn and garden and leisure

Watch sales to cut costs

Do-it-yourselfers can economize on home improvement jobs by watching for special building materials sales. That's the advice of Richard Pelc, manager of the Hill-Behan home improvement center in Arlington Heights.

"People are concerned about the rising cost of living," Pelc said. He adds that price increases of 10 per cent and more are common for many products, compared to 1973 price levels.

Pelc stresses that every home remodeling or repair job requires an individual estimate of costs. For several projects, he listed an approximate price range.

• Paneling. For a wall, 8 by 12 feet, a customer would buy three 4-by-8-foot sheets of paneling. The cost might range from $3.88 to $32 and up for each sheet. Most people buy in the $8 range, Pelc said.

• Storm doors. A do-it-yourselfer can skip an installation charge, and buy a door in the $40 and up range.

• Wood decks. For a 1-by-10-foot wood deck, the cost for white wood and hardware is approximately $110. Railings and benches can be added.

• Gutters. For aluminum gutters, assuming there is no overhand, materials for a 20-foot installation, plus a downspout is $13.77. Hardware is included. Extra materials are required where there are eaves, and the need for added drainage by the foundation.

related merchandise will be among the gainers, he said.

"There's already a 10-12 per cent price increase over last year, and they can go a little higher," Ewert said. Shortages of materials are "not critical now. But manufacturers are passing the word that they are encountering shortages of raw materials."

GETTING OFF to a good start on a home remodeling job, Rickey Nix, left, and Rick Malinowski, an employee at the Courtesy Home Center in Mount Prospect, load a sheet of plywood on Nix's truck.

Listen: You've tried some whiskeys that growl. Now try a new kind of whiskey. Crow Light. It whispers.

Take a sip of Crow Light. We think you'll agree that other whiskeys — even the lightest Scotch, smoothest Canadian or mildest Blend — taste heavier by comparison.

That's fitting. Crow Light is an entirely new and different kind of whiskey created to be the lightest whiskey ever made in America.

Lighter than Scotch, smoother than Canadian

Crow Light is light...lighter than Scotch in color and taste. And if you think Canadian is the smoothest whiskey, try Crow Light. "Crow Light is smoother," say the Canadian whiskey drinkers we've talked to.

Real whiskey down to its toes

Crow Light is real, 4-year-old whiskey, all right. But it's distilled and aged a very special way. Result: Lightness no other kind of whiskey can touch. Some whiskeys growl. But Crow Light Whiskey whispers. And you can get a lot farther with a whisper than a growl.

Crow Light.

Continental official warns against real estate gambles

In today's home market, with inflated prices and tight mortgage money, homeowners who attempt to sell their home without the services of a qualified professional are likened to the old-time riverboat gambler, says Robert Love, assistant vice president in charge of the Hoffman Estates and Mount Prospect offices of Continental Real Estate, Inc. "Some might get a little lucky and save a dollar or two," said Love, "but most are gambling on becoming lucky in what can become a time-consuming costly, and even risky affair."

Robert Love

"The real problems lie in the areas of pricing, having to open your home to strangers at all hours, being able to make a good presentation to prospective buyers, handling of the detailed formal negotiations and finding ways around the tape of financial and other arrangements which are necessary before an actual transfer of ownership can be achieved," he continued.

"We encounter many homeowners who find themselves in this dilemma," Love said, "and fortunately are able to show them they can eliminate the gambling from the complicated job of selling their home by allowing us to turn the job over to one of our trained professionals."

A quick look at the problem and a review of the many services of a reliable Realtor, will reveal some very important factors to the prospective seller.

First of all, market demand, seasonality of sales, location and other variables can often alter a home's value, and a skilled Realtor knows the market, and knows people, therefore is able to establish a realistic asking price.

Furthermore, with the property in the hands of a Realtor, appointments to show the property are set up at times convenient to the owner. And, the Realtor can screen prospects, develop a knowledge of their needs, desires and financial situation. Even more important, his experience tells him who is serious and who is "just looking."

Then, the Realtor is trained in salesmanship, and can close the sale by getting the prospect to make up his mind — by applying his training in salesmanship to getting the decision made.

Next, offers are made, and they must be considered, and often negotiated. Your Realtor representative knows how to handle people and situations, and becomes your go-between with a truly objective view of the whole matter, so he can tell you when the buyer is right, or when you should stick to your guns.

Financing can kill many a sale, and Love advises that an experienced Realtor knows what is available, because he works every day with all kinds of financial institutions and has a first-hand knowledge of their methods and requirements. He can help your buyer find the money he needs to buy your house.

Of course, the red tape and paperwork can be mountainous — and your Realtor, again, has the know-how to guide you through the tangle of details — quickly, safely and painlessly.

"Our people receive special training from our full-time training department," continued Love, "giving them special expertise to aid the buyer and seller in dozens of ways. We like to feel we take the gambling out of selling and buying — that's really our job."

Tiedowns provide safety for mobile home dwellers

Mobile homes provide attractive, comfortable and low-cost housing for nearly six million Americans. But high winds damage or destroy nearly 5,000 mobile homes every year, says Ordle Hogsett, University of Illinois Extension safety specialist.

Tornadoes are common in the Midwest and many of them can generate winds up to 300 mph. These high winds can cause flying debris to penetrate mobile homes, and an explosive drop in pressure as a tornado passes directly over a structure can cause serious structural damage.

Many insurance companies are now refusing to insure mobile homes unless they are adequately anchored with tie-downs, says Hogsett. And many communities have enacted ordinances and regulations requiring that mobile homes be adequately secured with tiedowns.

Tiedowns offer the most consistent and effective means for minimizing mobile home damage from high winds, according to Hogsett. Two types of ties are needed, the "over-the-top" tie and the frame tie. The first keeps the unit from overturning, and the second prevents it from being blown off the supports.

The Defense Civil Preparedness Agency recommends using both over-the-top and frame ties to secure 10-, 12-, and 14-foot-wide mobile homes. Double units, 24 ft in width, are quite stable and do not require use of over-the-top ties — only frame ties.

Tiedown systems are easy to install on existing units and costs generally don't exceed $150 per mobile home. When buying a new mobile home, be sure it has built-in tiedown straps, recommends Hogsett.

The ties are made of wire rope or rust-resistant steel straps which "tie" the mobile home and its steel frame to anchors embedded in the ground. The cable or strap is secured to the anchor with a yoke-type fastener and tension device, or with clamps and turnbuckles.

The number of over-the-top and frame ties required to secure a mobile home depends on variables such as length and shape of the unit, expected wind speed and direction, type of connection between the unit and its steel supporting frame, size and type of tiedown materials used, soil conditions, and holding power of the ground anchor. Tiedown components, including anchor systems, must be able to withstand a pull of at least 4,000 pounds without failure.

In a tiedown system, the greatest chance for weakness lies in use of materials of the wrong design or of poor quality. Straps and cables should be checked periodically to be sure they're tight. Don't make them too tight, advises Hogsett, as this reduces their capability to hold the abruptly changing loadings of heavy, gusting winds.

Placement of your mobile home with the narrow side facing the prevailing winds will also provide added protection against strong winds. A 12-by 60-foot mobile home so positioned presents only 20 per cent as much wall area to the prevailing winds, as it would if the long side faced the prevailing winds, as it would if the long side faced the prevailing winds. Check with your local weather office to find out the direction of the prevailing winds, Hogsett adds.

Remember, even though your mobile home may be well-anchored, you should seek other shelter when warned of an approaching tornado or hurricane.

Architects must reexamine designs

The fuel shortage is forcing architects into some fresh thinking on how to design buildings which use energy more efficiently.

This is reported in an article in the current edition of Petroleum Today, by Architect Richard G. Stein, who says:

"The growing shortage of fossil fuels has forced a reexamination of many attitudes and architectural forms we have formerly accepted unthinkingly."

Stein says many building methods and designs not only waste energy, but also lead to "monotonous standardization."

"Countless buildings of all types," he says, "have the characteristic sealed glass skin on all sides — apartments, colleges, high rise office buildings, for example. Two and four story suburban office buildings are truncated versions of their taller city cousins. Merchandise centers, shops, department stores and supermarkets — the same buildings spring up in New Mexico, Vermont and Florida with little thought given to energy needs and external conditions that vary from one location to another."

"We're looking with renewed interest at the ingenious ways ancient builders used natural forces," Stein writes. "The thick walls of an adobe pueblo soak up the heat from the sun during the day while keeping the interior cool. During the evening when the temperature drops, the walls release the heat, warming the inside. By sunrise, the walls have cooled, and the whole cycle begins again. This is an effective and subtle form of solar heating."

He contrasts this with the design of many modern buildings where there is no difference between the northern, southern, eastern and western exposures.

"The rooms on the south or west sides can be extremely uncomfortable when the sun is on them, summer or winter," Stein points out. Characteristically, there isn't a window that can be opened. Massive use of air conditioning has been the only way out."

Here is what Stein recommends:

"The outer covering or 'skin' of a building should be able to maintain the difference in temperature between inside and outside with a minimum of heating or cooling. It should allow light to enter in the amount and location desired. It should allow outside air in when it is desired and keep it out when it isn't."

"When the sun, wind, rain or snow bear down on the surface, the skin should admit only the desirable elements and convert the others into a form of energy that can be used, possibly as heat."

The search for mental health

Why do we sleep—and just what happens when we do?

(This column is presented by Forest Hospital in Des Plaines, a fully-accredited 150-bed psychiatric hospital widely known for its intensive programs in psychiatric treatment, research, education and community service.)

"... Sleep that knits up the ravell'd sleeve of care, the death of each day's life... chief nourisher in life's feast." Shakespeare may have had some insights into sleeping that scientists are just now learning.

At the sleep laboratory at the Veterans Hospital in Cincinnati, Dr. Milton Kramer, director, has been trying to get some of the answers to why we sleep, what goes on while we sleep and what happens to us as a result.

Kramer, also professor of psychiatry at the University of Cincinnati, believes we dream — at different levels — throughout sleep. There are two kinds of sleep. There's the REM (rapid eye movement) sleep and the non-REM sleep.

KRAMER SAID the REM periods of sleep are observed during 20-25 per cent of a normal eight-hour sleep period. During this time, a person's eyes move together very rapidly back and forth and up and down. "It is during this time," said Kramer, "that people have the most visual, extended-story type dreams. In thousands of observations, upon awakening adult sleepers, no instance occurred that this was not reported to be true."

Dream reports, said Kramer, can only come from a subject's memory during waking life. Many people can't remember dreams and some even insist they have never had a dream. "But everyone dreams. A life-long non-dreamer, observed in the lab and awakened at the proper time during REM sleep, is able to remember his dreams," said Kramer.

"During the non-REM sleep periods, dreaming still occurs. It's a different type of sleep and a different type of dreaming. The nature of a person's brain wave changes during various portions of this sleep and even the tone of body muscles are altered. Dreaming is more thought-like, not visual and there's less fantasy. There are four stages of this type of sleep," said Kramer, "beginning with stage one and becoming deeper until the deepest sleep of all, stage four. Under lab conditions, during stage one our subjects were able to recall their dreams 40 per cent of the time. As sleep became deeper, recall became less until at stage four, there was only 5 per cent recall."

"DREAMING IS AN aspect of human existence that has fascinated man throughout the ages," said Kramer. "In modern times the major influence on our understanding of the dream has come from the historical insights of Sigmund Freud. His view of the dream has predominated in the western world."

"In the lab and in outside surveys as well, we've been involved in determining the content of dreams. We've learned they typically have two people in them, they're concerned about people close to us rather than strangers, and they're usually about family or work rather than strange or fantastic things," said Kramer. "Men we learned dream about their work, with which they're enormously preoccupied, and women dream about their families, their chief preoccupation. Women tend to locate their dreams inside buildings and men in outdoor settings. Recalled dreams, we found, truly mirror the daytime commitments of the individuals."

ACCORDING TO Kramer, though, the major commitment of the lab is to learn the importance of dreams. "Our conviction now is that the dream and perhaps sleep in general serves as a regulating device to deal with how a person is feeling, with a person's moods. Our hypothesis is that the mood one has prior to going to sleep is probably reflective of one's emotional concerns of that particular day. In an automatic way, with no conscious effort, the dream serves to modulate and change the mood in a more positive, useful, usual and refreshed direction."

"Occasionally this process has a breakdown or failure in the form of a nightmare. The capacity of a dream to contain the intense feeling that is stirred up during the rather intense and capturing experience of dreaming is limited. It is capable of handling only so much. The solution is to change one's state, to wake up from the bad dream to escape the feeling."

"The current evidence from our observations and studies brings us to the conviction that a person sleeps and dreams to prepare himself for the next day," Kramer concluded.

Who has right to claim children?

Q. — I am having a debate with my former husband over who has the right to claim our children as a deduction for income tax purposes. I say I do because the court gave me custody of the children. He says he does because he is making support payments. Who's right?

A. It depends upon the amount of the husband's support payments. In the absence of an agreement on this point in the divorce decree or otherwise, the Internal Revenue Service has ruled that the parent having custody the greater portion of the year gets to claim the deductions for children.

However, there is an exception to this. If the other parent contributed $1,200 or more in child support (regardless of the number of children) that parent is entitled to the deduction unless the other parent can show that he or she provided a greater amount of support.

Parents may resolve the issue by taking turns in claiming the deduction for a child or, if there are two or more children, they may share deductions in the same year — on a "You claim Susie, I'll claim Billy" basis. However, they may not split a deduction for the same child on a 50-50 or any other basis.

Featuring this week:

Quinlan and Tyson, Realtors

Quinlan and Tyson, Inc., Realtors, has entered its 90th consecutive year of business on the heels of record breaking sales and an even higher level of professionalism.

Q&T — with three offices serving the northwest suburban area — began 1974 with a firm hold on leadership in the combined north shore and northwest suburban marketing area, based on total volume of residential sales.

Total 1973 residential sales were $115.2 million, a 10 percent jump over 1972.

Richard G. Rutledge, executive vice president of Q&T, said, "A large share of the credit for this impressive showing goes to our three northwest offices which sold over $34 million worth of property last year."

The northwest total includes exclusive Quinlan and Tyson transactions and sales in co-operation with other MAP Multiple Listing brokers.

Helping to set the record pace in 1973 were these eight real estate sales representatives who sold more than $1 million worth of property and qualified for the Quinlan and Tyson Million Dollar Club:

Arlington Heights - Mt. Prospect area office: Robert Griffith, Bunny Polanzi, Bunny Kaywood.

Palatine area office: Beverly Ann Berry, assistant sales manager; Mary Ann Falkenberg.

Schaumburg-Hoffman Estates area office: Merna Meyer, Jerry Trofholz, Kay Wojcik.

Both Griffith and Mrs. Polanzi set all-time personal highs by selling more than $2 million each in 1973.

"We expect even larger sales in the northwest area in 1974," Rutledge said, "as we strive for a company-wide goal of $120 million."

The three area offices are off to a fast start, with near record sales early in the year. In January, the offices rolled up sales of $3.50 million, just under the all-time monthly high of $3.6 million in January, 1973.

Marvin W. Kamps, vice president and northwest regional manager, said the success of the sales staff is due to its professionalism in serving the buying and selling public.

Thirteen sales representatives hold broker's licenses. They are: Marvin Kamps, Robert Griffith, Bunny Polanzi, Anthony Vasta, Gloria Kevorkian and Phillip Sears, Arlington Heights-Mount Prospect area office; Robert Stirn, manager; Beverly Ann Berry, Mary Ann Falkenberg, Grace Sullivan and Maryellen Morris, Palatine area office; Ken Koy, manager, and Jerry Trofholz, Schaumburg-Hoffman Estates area office.

Baird & Warner Trust reports quarter earnings

Baird & Warner Mortgage and Realty Investors, Chicago, really reported net earnings for the second quarter, which ended Jan. 31, of $525,572, equivalent to $1.50 per share, as compared to $450,098 or $1.49 per share for the second quarter of last year.

For the first six months of the current fiscal year net earnings were $1,050,731 or $1.01 per share in comparison to $869,339 or $0.86 per share for the same period a year ago.

John W. Baird, president of the Chicago-based real estate investment trust, also reported that total loan commitments at Jan. 31 amounted to $83,801,000 compared with $82,688,000 a year earlier. The total was down $12,177,000 from $95,978,000 at the end of the first quarter.

Funds advanced against closed commitments at the end of the current quarter were $48,159,185 compared with $51,853,988 a year ago and $58,719,693 at the end of the quarter which ended Oct. 31. The decline in funded balances and commitments during the quarter resulted from a concentration of pay-offs by takeout lenders.

Baird stated that recent months have seen a number of factors weighing heavily upon the real estate construction segment of the economy. Unusually high short-term interest rates, construction delays caused by material shortages coupled with increasing construction costs and the energy situation have made it increasingly difficult for developers to complete construction on schedule and within projected costs. These conditions, in some instances, have also affected the ability of borrowers to fulfill their obligations to construction lenders.

In consideration of these general conditions Baird reports the Trustees approved a charge against current income to provide a supplementary increase of $150,000 to the loss reserve. This was considered in addition to the normal loss provision which is based on an evaluation of the current investment portfolio. The allowance for possible future losses now amounts to $390,000 in comparison to $138,000 at this time a year ago against an investment portfolio of similar size.

Operating performance for the current quarter was favorably affected by the collection of approximately $140,000 in additional interest relating to condominium development financing. This is in addition to the normal periodic interest charges and is considered earned as repayment of loan principal is made upon the closing of sales. As a result of a significant concentration of condominium sales closings during the quarter the related additional interest was significantly higher than prior quarters and that which is anticipated in future quarterly periods.

Plum Grove Village wins top award

The Illinois Landscape Contractors Association held their second annual awards luncheon recently at Arlington Park Towers.

Lawrence & Ahlman, Inc. of Dundee won the top award for their landscaping of Plum Grove Village in Rolling Meadows, a project built by Albert Riley Builders.

Dieter Zoellner, vice president of construction, accepted the award for Lawrence & Ahlman, Inc. Also present was Paul Novak of Novak, Carlson & Associates, the landscape architects for Plum Grove Village. Tom King of the Illinois Landscape Contractors Association presented the award.

BANNER SERVICE CORPORATION of Des Plaines, the midwest's largest service center for the screw machine industry, has begun a new 20,000 sq. ft. expansion program. The architects' rendering shows the additional 2-story office facility being added to the rear of present offices and to the upper left, a 15,000 sq. ft. warehouse expansion extending 15 feet above the present facility. Banner will be using this addition for inventory stock and for more space in their specialized centerless grinding facility.

Tired of energy shortage? Here are ways to beat it

The search for alternative sources of power in the midst of the energy shortage has become so intense it has the federal government tilting at windmills. A national news magazine reports that the U.S. government has launched a five year program to develop a new windmill with an eye towards meeting the electric-generating needs of five families by mid-1975.

With demand rapidly outdistancing supplies, Americans are coming to "gripes" with the cold fact that the world's natural resources are finite. The per capita consumption of energy in this country, according to the National Bureau of Standards, is six times the world average, and growing at a rapid rate.

The Bureau reports that natural gas consumption has quadrupled in the last 20 years, electricity use has more than doubled since 1960 and is expected to double again by 1980.

"Our major source of energy — petroleum, gas and oil — are non-renewable," Bureau Director Dr. Richard W. Roberts points out. "Once used, they are gone forever."

In an address before the 3rd Urban Technology Conference in Boston last fall, Roberts said, "If we are to continue our present patterns of energy use, then clearly two things must be done. We must use present resources as efficiently as possible while we develop new sources."

Efficient use of our current resources hinges on the willing cooperation from the largest industrial users to the individual homeowner.

One way a homeowner can help in the conservation drive is to harness energy from a source that is as old as time itself — the sun. Large window areas let in sunlight providing the obvious economy of not needing to turn on so many lights.

Since windows can occupy as much as 30 or 40 per cent of the exterior wall space in modern homes, extra care in their selection is important. If they don't insulate properly, they can account for considerable heat loss in winter. Windows with good insulating qualities such as ponderosa pine units with factory applied weatherstripping and insulating glass can reduce heat loss from 15 to 35 per cent and pass on this savings to homeowners in lower fuel bills.

Wood is a natural insulator, and insulating glass, two panes of glass with an insulating air space between, cuts heat loss and avoids damaging condensation.

The orientation of a home can also be an important factor in energy conservation. If living areas with large glass windows face south for instance, open the drapes on a sunny winter day. The sunlight flowing in will provide enough warmth to allow you to lower the thermostat. At night close the drapes to prevent the heat from escaping.

A sun porch with large glass windows can use sunlight for heating purposes. On cloudy days close the sun porch off from the rest of the house.

Elsewhere in the house, make sure thermostats are not attached to walls that catch the direct rays of the sun. The heat may cause the thermostat to shut down the furnace before the room temperature is comfortable.

To gain heat from the sun in winter, you might have to trade some cooling in the summer. The right choice of window style can help balance the trade off. Wood casement windows for example provide excellent ventilation. They open 90 degrees to funnel outdoor air indoors and they offer top to bottom ventilation. At times when there is a cooling breeze, you might be able to shut off the air conditioning system. On warm, breezy, sunny days, use awnings to provide shade and reduce heat again.

Baird & Warner salutes staff for record volume

Baird & Warner, Inc., is honoring more than 100 members of their sales staff for leading a sales effort which produced the highest sales volume in the company's history.

Robert G. Walters, vice president and general sales manager, residential division, announced that the real estate company was honoring 117 of its salesmen as Star Salesmen, signifying distinguished performance in 1973. Of these 72 were named to the firm's Million Dollar Club for participating in at least $1 million in closed sales for the year. Fourteen of this group were named life members of the Million Dollar Club for hitting the million dollar mark for the third consecutive year.

Another group of 23 salesmen were honored as members of the company's "super-group," the $2 Million Club.

Citations were presented at the company's annual sales meeting at the Oakbrook Sheraton Hotel, where Walters announced that the firm posted a record dollar volume of $231,692,522 in 1973, a 7 per cent increase over 1972. The firm's 30 Chicago and suburban offices participated in 3,910 sales, second best in its history.

Bank offers energy savings plan

An energy conservation banking program has been developed by First National Bank of Des Plaines to help home owners conserve energy and improve indoor comforts.

According to Robert F. Bruhn, vice president, First National is offering a "Fuelsaver" loan program that's described in a folder available free to home owners. This plan encompasses six home improvement recommendations that can contribute up to a 30 per cent cut in home heating expenses.

For example, Bruhn explained, by adding six inches to top floor ceiling insulation, heating costs can be reduced 30 per cent over homes with uninsulated ceilings. Adding a fireplace is another savings idea, because for every degree the thermostat setting is lowered results in a three per cent savings on the heating bill.

Other home improvement energy saving ideas include repairing defective roofs, installing storm doors and windows, adding caulking and weatherstripping to seal heat leaks, putting up insulated siding and replacing inefficient, worn-out furnaces.

First National is offering loans to pay for these home improvements at low rates and with up to seven years for repayment.

Bruhn also pointed out that banking by mail helps ease the gasoline shortage. He stated that First National customers can handle nearly all their banking services by mail including savings, checking and Christmas Club accounts as well as loan transactions. "Best of all," Bruhn added, "First National pays the postage both ways."

To obtain a copy of the bank's "Fuelsaver" loan plan folder, visit the bank or write to: First National Bank of Des Plaines, 733 Lee St., Des Plaines 60016 or telephone 827-4411.

New condo complex in Rolling Meadows offers savings advantages

Condo complex under construction in Rolling Meadows

SUMMER OCCUPANCY is expected as the first of two construction phases continues on Eton Square, a $10-million condominium development in Rolling Meadows.

Eton Square is being completed under labor and construction contracts that do not include many of the spiraling costs prevalent in the home-building industry today. Therefore, prospective buyers will find opening prices considerably lower than those projected for the latter part of '74. An additional savings incentive being offered until April 30 is a $1,500 reduction of opening prices.

Developer Bernard Gold of Metroplan Development Co., 57 W. Grand Av., said construction was held up for about six months by a variety of delays, some caused by materials shortages. "Today," he said, "delays are the norm."

ONE-BEDROOM condominiums with 950 square feet will sell for up to $27,900, while models with a den (1,050 square feet) will go for up to $31,900. Two-bedroom units will go for $38,000 (with a 1,200 square-foot floor plan) to $43,000 (for models with 1,350 square feet). Three-bedroom condominiums, with 1,550 square feet, will cost up to $48,000.

The developers say condominium assessments will average about $45 a month.

All apartments are to have wall-to-wall carpeting, tiled baths, and kitchens equipped with oven, range, dishwasher, and disposal. Sliding doors of thermal insulating glass will lead to private patios or balconies averaging about 150 square feet.

Included in the purchase price will be one enclosed parking space per unit and one outdoor space.

Phase one includes two four-story buildings, each with 15 one-bedroom, 48 two-bedroom, and six three-bedroom apartments. Also included in phase one construction is a recreational center, a two-story building that will have a bar, billiard area, card room, golf practice range, saunas, and whirlpool.

An upper level lounge will have a sunken "conversation level" centered around a see-thru fireplace.

A swimming pool with sundeck and two tennis courts will be constructed outside the clubhouse, which will border a man-made lake of about two acres where residents will be able to sail small boats.

PHASE TWO development will see construction of two residential buildings that will bring to 276 the number of units in Eton Square. Completion is expected in summer, 1975. The project is being built on a 13½-acre site at Algonquin and New Wilke Roads, one mile north of Golf Road. Ph: 398-4555

Conserve fuel by knowing meanings of heating terms

With fuel costs spiraling upward because of the energy crunch, learning to use the language of conservation can save a homeowner money, win him top grades for good citizenship and improve his vocabulary in less than 30 days.

A basic primer:
BTU (British thermal unit) — The amount of heat required to raise the temperature of one pound of water one degree Fahrenheit. The term is used to describe the capacity of both heating and cooling equipment and is expressed in the number of Btu's per hour.

Degree Day — the measure of coldness during the heating season. It's the numerical difference between the average temperature and 65 degrees. For example, if the average temperature for a day is 32 degrees, the Degree Days for the day is 65 minus 32, or 33. The more Degree Days per year, the higher the annual heating cost.

Watt — A unit of power equal to the rate of work represented by a current of one ampere under a pressure of one volt.

Kilowatt — One thousand watts.

"R" Value — The measure of resistance to heat flow. The efficiency of a home's insulation is expressed in "R" values. The higher the R value, the more effective the insulation. With windows, wood sash has an R value of 2.57; insulating glass with a quarter-inch of air space between the panes has an R value of 1.64; single glazed windows have an R value of .89. Aluminum sash without a specific thermal barrier has an R value of .85.

A fully insulated house eliminates a substantial amount of heat loss and sharply reduces a homeowner's annual fuel bills. Because of the energy squeeze, the U.S. government plans to increase the insulation requirements on FHA-insured homes.

When it comes to windows, engineering tests have shown that the best insulation is provided by wood sash with insulating glass and factory applied weatherstripping. Wood is a natural insulator and the weatherstripping seals out air leakage. Ponderosa pine units with insulating glass, two panes of glass with an air space between, are available in many styles and stock sizes at local building material dealers.

Weigh home alterations for investment, pleasure

Homeowners who plot alterations and improvements with the expectation of handsome dividends when they eventually sell their homes may be in for a disappointment.

"Remodeling projects that may be very important to the owner may be taken for granted by the buyer, or might even be a negative," cautions Robert G. Walters, vice president and general sales manager, residential division, for Baird & Warner, Inc.

"If you're improving for investment with the expectation that you'll recover the cost, and maybe even make a little profit, you should be aware that some improvements may only bring back a fraction of what you spent when you sell, or maybe nothing at all.

"But," continued Walters, "If you are thinking in terms of your own comfort, convenience, and maybe even status, that's another matter. And since it looks like we'll be spending more time than ever entertaining and pursuing recreation at home, this may be reason enough."

Walters then described projects that might be considered investments for profit and others that belong in the category of personal pleasure.

Here are some improvements, he said, which could pay off when you're ready to sell your house:

1. Remodeled kitchens and bathrooms: They'll help to sell the house, but don't expect to recover more than 25 to 50 per cent of cost. Keep the project within reason according to the overall value of your house; the more you spend, the less you'll get back.

2. Adding a half-bath (powder room) to a home: If you have a two-story house with only one bath, and that on the second floor, a half-bath on the first floor is a must. And here you can recover from 80 to 90 per cent of the cost.

3. Central air conditioning: Valuation of this installation can be from 75 to 100 per cent; you'll get pleasure and comfort and get most of your money back to boot.

4. Building a family room onto the home: Costs can be $6,000 to $10,000. As the cost rises, the valuation drops. But whatever you spend, don't look for more than 50 per cent of your cost to be returned when you sell.

5. Building a porch enclosure for all-year use: This investment should have the same potential return — about 50 per cent — as a family room.

6. Adding a bedroom: The cost of adding a third bedroom to a two-bedroom house or a fourth bedroom to a three-bedroom house is usually 100 per cent recoverable, because three- and four-bedroom homes are most in demand now.

Adding a fifth bedroom, however, drops its contribution to less than 75 per cent.

7. Adding a garage: Especially in the Chicago area where winter temperatures often are below freezing and where heavy amounts of snow can be expected, a garage will pay its way in comfort and convenience, and recovery of the cost can be from 50 to 75 per cent. Also, many communities have parking ordinances that restrict overnight street parking. In these areas, a two-car garage is a must. Above all, a garage will help to sell your house.

But the following improvements, says Baird & Warner's executive, should be considered mostly for your own convenience or pleasure and are the least likely to return your cost:

1. Building a recreation room in a basement: If the basement is completely below grade, Walters advises, valuation at resale time can be as low as 15 per cent. This kind of amenity was popular several decades ago, but has lost appeal for most buyers. (If the recreation room is on the lower level of a split-level home, however, valuation can be close to 100 per cent.)

2. Installing a new heating plant or hot water tank: This cost may be discounted entirely by the market, because most people expect a heating system and hot water tank when they buy and it's difficult to measure the efficiency or future life of these systems.

3. Individual room air conditioning units: Depending on age, such units may return as much as 50 per cent of your investment, but it's more likely that the buyer of your house will consider them of no value. A central system is the best investment.

4. Swimming pool: If you can afford it, and if your family will derive pleasure from it go ahead and have it installed. But don't expect it to add much value to your property. Rather, some buyers may view a pool as a nuisance and it may dampen their enthusiasm for your house.

5. Elaborate driveway: This may cost you twice as much as an ordinary driveway, but it's unlikely that you'll recover more than a very small portion of the original cost at resale time.

6. Landscaping: This can amount to as little as $50 for grass seed, or up to $2,000 and more for trees, shrubs, and flowers. Whatever is spent is for personal enjoyment, because the valuation potential is only 20 to 50 per cent. Also, some buyers may be turned off by lavish landscaping, not wanting to be concerned with the upkeep.

7. Outside improvements: Patios, built-in barbecue grills, storage sheds and expensive fences will no doubt increase your pleasure, comfort, and convenience, but you'll be lucky to get a return of 50 per cent of your costs.

8. Exterior improvements to a frame house: Aluminum or vinyl siding will add to the appearance of the house and will reduce maintenance costs. Aluminum storm windows will improve appearance, will save fuel, and will keep your house warmer. But what will they add to the resale price of your house?

"Not very much," Walters says. "Although these items are improvements, most buyers consider them maintenance items and usually will pay little or nothing for them."

9. Expensive interior decorating: Consider this for the pleasure of you and your family only. Each person has his own taste in decorating, and it's unlikely that he'll pay for extra, expensive touches that are not of his own choosing.

Walters summarized his advice: "Even though you're aware that you'll recoup at least a portion of the costs of some home improvements, and that others may be for your own pleasure only, it's also well to be aware that some so-called improvements actually are in the category of maintenance."

These can include, he said, that new furnace, necessary plumbing and electrical repairs, outside and inside painting, repairs to your basement floor or driveway, care of your landscaping, and general day to day upkeep.

Truly fine living in a home designed and built for you.

Magic 'V' signals growth in transportation, housing

by RONALD WEISNER
President, Weisner Realty, Inc.

I call it the magic "V", because along these corridors are the major growth patterns of Chicagoland. The "V" to which I refer is the area which lies along the Northwest Tollway and along the East-West Tollway, beginning at a point from the Loop. The areas near these important thoroughfares have been, are today and should continue to be a builders' paradise.

DuPage County and northwest Cook County have set the pace for consumer interest and market trends. Out-of-state builders and developers are impressed with the activity in these areas, its potential and growth factors, and therefore wish to locate and build developments there.

Findings from our recently completed "Multi-family Housing Study of the Chicago Metropolitan Area" and our sales indicate a solid pattern and definite trend to the northwest and west quadrants of the suburbs.

During our extensive analysis of the housing market, change in people's life style have spurred the movement toward condominium ownership with its maintenance free living. Before we discuss the housing market, let's talk about DuPage and northwest Cook County.

DUPAGE COUNTY

DuPage County has an area of approximately 340 square miles and is about 15 miles from Lake Michigan. The county extends to Chicago O'Hare Field and the western boundary comes to within a few miles of the Fox River. It is the smallest in area of the six metropolitan Chicago counties but only surpassed by Cook County in population and housing density. In addition, the county's median household size was the largest of the six counties.

The past growth of DuPage County has been systematic and progressive in nature. It currently has a population of approximately 500,000 people. Between 1960 and 1970 its growth rate was over 50 per cent — thus it grew faster than any other county in the state of Illinois (U.S. Bureau of the Census).

Many factors contribute to make DuPage the fastest growing new population center in the entire Chicago metropolitan area. DuPage ranks as the fourth richest county in the United States, and it has the highest average income of any county in the state. According to the DuPage Regional Planning Commission, DuPage led the six metropolitan Chicago counties in 1970 median value of owner-occupied housing values and in median monthly rent.

Having a high prestige and being a desirable place to live and to work, DuPage County attracts many new office, research and industrial developments plus major shopping centers such as Oakbrook Center, one of the nation's 10 leading centers in sales, and Yorktown — one of the country's largest enclosed malls.

Since people follow industry, thousands of new jobs are projected by 1980 and the county's labor force is expected to increase substantially. Thus, this vast commercial and industrial growth produces a real boom.

The Chicago area is consistently one of the most active housing markets in the nation and DuPage County is in the center of this activity. Estimated growth between 1970 and 1980 is expected to be over 250,000 people — a real population explosion. It has also been estimated that approximately 150,000 new housing units will be required by 1985 to shelter new households in DuPage County.

One can see why we are so bullish about the future of DuPage County and the role it plays in the Chicagoland housing market.

NORTHWEST COOK

As for northwest Cook County, what can we say about the fantastic growth, both population and economic, which has been so consistently demonstrated for over 20 years? When one talks about population explosion, we need only to review the past two decades to learn that the area absorbed well over 300,000 people — of which over 200,000 were in the 1960's alone.

Residential construction grew at such a terrific numerical rate that none of the other counties was even a close second. Northwest Cook County provides perhaps the widest variety of available housing in the entire Chicagoland area.

The opening of the Northwest Tollway and O'Hare Field gave the area its biggest boost. The O'Hare complex alone employs over 20,000 people and represents the hub of the nation's transportation network.

Many industrial parks have been developed along the toll road and one only has to ride along the major roadways to see the endless subdivisions of industrial buildings. The activity is sometimes overwhelming to out-of-state developers.

Can we discuss the northwest area without mentioning Woodfield Mall in Schaumburg — billed as the world's largest enclosed multilevel shopping center. This is another catalyst to the area.

Office and research facilities have been and are continuing to be built at a record pace. Expansion is everywhere in the area and many millions of dollars continue to be invested in new construction.

We have just touched on the highlights of this exciting area. We could write pages about the growth of northwest Cook County; however, much of it is already known and experienced by many people. Continued development and growth are expected here along with the gradual movement toward the western suburbs.

As for current residential activity — northwest Cook County is still the top marketplace, but it's getting increasingly difficult to acquire usable sites for immediate building. As land in the area becomes built upon and sites get harder to find, the developers are spreading out more and thus a great deal of interest and building in neighboring DuPage has taken place.

Thus the marketplace discovers an area which was for some unexplained reason overlooked by many big builders — builders who are now discovering the geographically close-in location and market potential of the sister county on their southern border.

HOUSING MARKET

Let's now discuss the actual housing market and relate what our research and surveys unfolded and what we can look for in the future.

As mentioned earlier, the trend in the local housing industry has been toward condominium living. Rising costs of land, labor and materials and the public's desire for maintenance-free living have brought the condominium concept in the form of condo apartments, townhouses and quadruminums to the marketplace.

Many suburban cities and villages have enacted Planned Unit Development ordinances which not only give them more control of the type of developments but also allow the developers themselves the opportunity to be imaginative and creative in their planning and marketing.

Because these type of developments take longer planning and closer control and study by the municipalities, the "lead time" required to locate a piece of property, zone it and work out all the other varied and important problems can now run between one and two years. Therefore, we find more and more larger builders looking for smaller sites, ready to go, which they can develop to fill in these time gaps.

The single family market in most active areas is now in the $40,000 - $60,000 price range. The rising cost of land, the increased improvement costs and the land donations, which are required by the various municipalities, have pushed this segment of the market out of reach of many prospective purchasers.

To meet the rising costs and to fill the category in the $30,000 - $40,000 area, the townhouse and apartment condominium have become the type of housing available to the buyer. These two housing types are very popular today and we feel they will continue to be the answer for a large segment of the market in the future.

Apartments also are in great demand in many suburban areas. We feel there will always be a need for well located, soundly constructed apartment developments which provide suitable recreational facilities. However, because of the complexities of the developments and the increased costs involved, we feel they are and will be for the most part left to the big and experienced developers.

This brings us to the role, type and style of tomorrow's builder/developer. Big building companies are influencing the housing market. As the marketplace becomes more and more competitive and the dollar requirements become greater, the small and even medium-sized builders are finding it increasingly difficult to operate profitably. There has been, and most likely will continue, a shake out of the little guy and the non-professional.

We've seen many mergers and joint ventures by companies in our industry with giant concerns in other fields. These partnerships and/or resulting large companies have the financial strength and expertise necessary to function and operate in today's and tomorrow's marketplace. We look for this trend to continue.

In dealing with many of the largest building companies in the country, we find the growing trend toward their need to spread their operations geographically in order to broaden their markets. The Chicago area with its stable economy, diversification of industry, strong demand, etc. has been among the housing leaders nationally for many years. When we bring an out-of-state company to the Chicago metropolitan area and after they've done their market studies, they invariably locate their developments in the northwest and west suburbs

When they ask me where the action is, I just form a "V" with my hands and say, "this is where it's at." Industry, transportation, people all joining together and providing a marketplace of activity and growth — "Growth Along The 'V'."

Heating and air conditioning main cause of energy waste

"Power to the People" used to be a slogan banded about by political activists. Now it has become a kind of rallying cry for industrialists and government leaders scrambling for new sources of energy. But one near term solution to the energy crisis lies with consumers whose fingers control the thermostats and electric switches in the homes around the nation.

Nearly 90 per cent of all the energy used in U.S. homes is consumed in heating, air conditioning, water heating, refrigeration and cooking, according to Commonwealth Edison. Of these five, heating and air conditioning provide the best opportunities for conservation. Here are some suggestions.

Have a serviceman inspect, clean and adjust the heating and air conditioning unit at least once a year to make sure it is operating at the peak of efficiency. It's a good idea to check the filter every two months. If dirty, clean or replace it. A little preventive maintenance can forestall costly repairs.

In most homes, the single greatest area of heat loss or gain is the ceiling. Since uninsulated homes lose up to twice as much heat as insulated ones, the federal government is revising upward its insulation requirements on FHA-insured housing in an effort to conserve energy. The effectiveness of insulation material is expressed in R values. The higher the R value, the better the insulation.

Good insulation in the ceiling, walls and floors over unheated basements or crawl spaces makes for economical heating and air conditioning. But adequate ceiling, floor and wall insulation is doing only part of the job if the windows are not made of materials that guard against heat loss. The right choice of windows can contribute significantly to the efficiency of insulation.

Since wood is a natural insulator, the use of insulating glass in wood sash can save an additional 30 per cent of the remaining heat loss and it eliminates the need for separate storm sash. Some windows, such as ponderosa pine units, come with factory applied weatherstripping and insulating glass in a variety of stock sizes and styles. They are chemically treated to guard against weather abuse and wear.

There's a big difference in windows and window materials. Regardless of whether you heat with gas, oil or electricity, the right selection of window materials can mean more money in your pocket.

Here are examples of what energy conservation can mean on the homeowner in savings on heating costs using different fuels. If you live in a typical 1,400 sq. ft. home in the Cleveland area that is fully insulated, has 16 windows and averages 6,400 degree days in winter, it would cost about $214 a year to heat the home with gas if you have single pane glass and aluminum sash without a specific thermal barrier. It would cost approximately $149 to heat the same home equipped with wood sash and insulating glass, a yearly savings on fuel costs of $65. With oil heat, the savings would be $113 annually and with electric heat, $120.

In Minneapolis, with an average 8,400 degree days during the heating season, the owner of the typical home with wood sash and insulating glass instead of aluminum sash without a specific thermal barrier and single pane glass could realize yearly fuel savings of $100 with gas, $147 with oil and $171 with electric heat.

Another fuel conservation measure calls for keeping itchy fingers away from sensitive thermostats. The thermostat regulates the flow of the heating and cooling systems. When the desired temperature is reached, the thermostat turns off the equipment. If the thermostat is turned up and down, the system must continually readjust to the new settings.

It's easier on the system and your pocketbook if you agree on a desired temperature and leave the thermostat at that setting. The White House has recommended a setting of 68 adds about three per cent to your fuel bill. At night, lower the thermostat several degrees and use an extra blanket if needed.

Going on a weekend trip or vacation? Lower the thermostat, but don't shut off the heat completely. A cold snap could freeze the water pipes.

As with the heating and cooling system, the size of the water heater should be of no larger than needed to meet your requirements. Energy is wasted warming unneeded water in an oversized heater. Locating a water heater close to the points of use can mean less heat loss and lower fuel costs.

The same rule about size applies to refrigerators and freezers. Choose a unit that meets the needs of the family. Follow the recommendations of the manufacturer. Refrigerators and freezers operate 24-hours a day so don't use a setting that is colder than necessary.

When it comes to cooking, there are some helpful hints to follow to avoid wasting energy. Cooking in an oven can be less expensive than cooking on top of the range. The insulation in an oven holds heat in. Surface units disperse heat. But don't be an "oven peeper." It wastes heat. Lower the oven setting by 24 degrees when baking in glass or glass ceramic utensils. They transfer heat better than metal containers.

Frozen foods will use less energy if brought to room temperature before being cooked in the oven, broiler or on top of the range. Putting a frozen roast in the oven, for example, requires one-third additional cooking time.

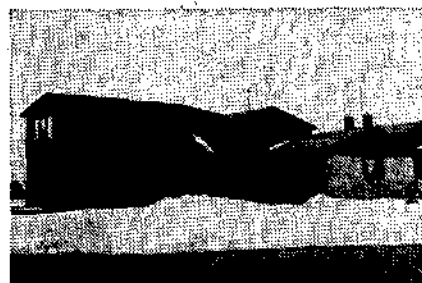

No matter how you heat or cool your home, store and cook your food, you can do it more economically by using energy wisely. By using electricity, gas or oil efficiently, you'll be helping to conserve the nation's natural resources.

3 Kole saleswomen complete first course

Arlene Platt, Lois Spradlin and Nikki Claffey, saleswomen with Kole Real Estate, Ltd. in Barrington, have returned from a week in Peoria, where they attended sessions of the Graduate Realtors Institute.

All three of the Barrington residents were enrolled in the first of three week-long courses leading to the G.R.I. designation. Courses are offered twice a year, in February and in December, for those working toward this advanced training in the field.

Mesdames Platt, Spradlin and Claffey hope to enroll for the second session in December of this year and complete the third week of study in February of 1975.

Construction activity down from last year

Construction activity in the six-county metropolitan area of Chicago declined 59 per cent in January from figures reported for the same month of 1973, according to the Bell Federal Survey of Building.

According to that survey, the number of housing units, apartment and single family, for which permits were issued reached only 1,424 compared to the 3,472 reported in 1973.

The significant decrease occurred in multi-family units which dropped from 2,299 to 871, a decrease of 62 per cent.

Single family permits in the six-county area reported a decrease of 53 per cent.

Gadget promises better mileage

A 'brand new' auto engine for $30? Well, no, but...

by BARRY SIGALE

"Congratulations, you now have a new engine," said the mechanic as he lowered the hood of my car, the first time the hood has been touched since the energy crisis officially began.

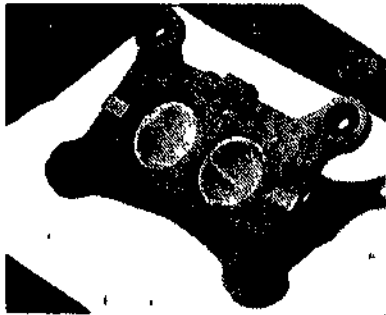

"In about 1,000 miles you'll notice the difference. You'll get better mileage and better performance from your car."

Actually, I didn't get a new engine at all. It was just the mechanic's way of telling me the new Davis Hydrocatalyst he installed under my carburetor would make a new automobile out of my machine.

THE INSTALLATION work took place at a press conference in which the hydrocatalyst was demonstrated. The new product is supposed to cut pollution by as much as 85 per cent and save 20 per cent or more in gasoline when properly installed by a qualified mechanic.

The device was tested under the supervision of the Gasoline Retailers Assn. of Metropolitan Chicago and endorsed by the organization's director, Ralph Porcelli, who said that "if this device had been installed on all of our commercial and private vehicles today there would be no shortage or discomfort" to motorists.

Tests were conducted on new and used cars and by several public agencies, including the Wheeling Police Department. Most of the experiments showed a major reduction in the amount of pollutants given off by the cars after the device was installed and an increase in the amount of miles per gallon the motorists got, according to statistics provided by Porcelli.

THIS STRANGE device, a Tungsten Hydrocatalyst, may be money in the bank for motorists who want to stretch their gas mileage.

THE NEW DEVICE, that just went on sale at some service stations (for about $30 plus labor), can do three things, said the officials behind the product.

First, a car which has the new pollution control devices on it but doesn't run well is supposed to run better with the Hydro-Catalyst. Second, a car without the pollution controls but does run well is supposed to emit less pollutants with the device. Third, all motorists should experience improved mileage from a gallon of gasoline after the new product is installed. Results will be different for various motorists because of car make and driver habits.

Installation of the device is simple. Using my auto for the demonstration, the mechanic removed the carburetor nuts, lifted the carburetor, replaced the gasket with the Hydro-Catalyst, put the carburetor back in place and made minor modifications to the motoring systems, such as changing the timing device.

A before-and-after test showed that while idling and at 2,500 RPMs, the number of hydrocarbons emitted by my auto was reduced from 100 to 60 parts per million. Environmental Protection Agency minimum requirements are set at 180 parts per million.

There is still some question whether auto dealers will continue to honor certain warranties of the engine and related parts and it is suggested they are consulted before having the device installed.

3-wheeled electric vehicle to be marketed

People-power has been changed to electric power by the makers of a three-wheel vehicle known as the PPV (People Powered Vehicle).

The new option, the Electric Powered Vehicle (EPV), is expected to be on the market for 1975 with battery propulsion that gives it an operating speed of 25 miles per hour and a range of up to 45 miles between rechargings.

The EPV will be licensable as a street vehicle, will weigh about 400 pounds and sell for about $1,200. It is powered by two 12-volt batteries and can be plugged into any 110-volt household electrical outlet for recharging.

The manufacturer, EVI Inc. of Sterling Heights, Mich., sold more than 10,000 PPVs last year, and is planning to make 1,500 to 2,000 EPVs a month after production starts in the fall. The vehicles, which can carry a total payload of 500 pounds, will be sold through a network of 1,000 dealers, most of them auto dealers who will handle EPVs on the side.

Maintenance costs will be minimal, the makers say, because the body is durable polyethylene. The EPV will require no lubrication or oil changes, and will cost less than one cent a mile to operate, including battery depreciation. In normal use, each battery should last three years.

Some likely uses for the EPV include college campus travel, cruising state and national parks, municipal maintenance, touring industrial complexes and for postal operations.

Options available include radio, all-weather top, heater, custom seat pads, spare tire and heavy-duty tires. All required safety equipment, including lights and seat belts, will be standard.

Average income tax payments up 62% from '72

Americans paid an average of $522 in taxes to state and local governments in fiscal 1972, a jump of 62 per cent from the previous period, notes a Commerce Clearing House report of the latest Census Bureau data.

Per capita state-local tax burdens — which grew heavier in every state except Alaska — ranged from a low of $312 in Alabama to a high of $789 in New York, the first time the $700 level has been passed. The fiscal period saw Alabama replace Arkansas with the lowest per capita burden while New York remained at the top for the seventh straight year.

California, with a per capita burden of $687, was in the runnerup spot. Close followers were Massachusetts ($639), Hawaii ($636) and Connecticut ($631). Illinois' per capita taxes were $575.

At the bottom of the scale, four states had amounts under $350 — Alabama, Arkansas, Mississippi and South Carolina. No state, CCH noted, had amounts under $300, compared to three states in 1971, six in 1970 and thirteen in fiscal 1969.

The median burden was $461, a 38 increase over fiscal 1971.

Total state and local tax collections for fiscal 1972 were $106.801 billion, up $13.826 billion over the $94.975 billion for 1971. The 1972 collection figures represent an increase of more than 100 per cent of the state and local revenues for fiscal 1964 — $47.9 billion.

New York led the states with collections in excess of $14.5 billion, while California closely followed with $14.1 billion. Illinois reached the $6.5 billion level; Pennsylvania hit the $6.3 billion mark; Michigan pulled in $5.2 billion.

Canada to issue Montreal Olympics set

Under the 1976 Canadian Olympic Coin Program, the Royal Mint will strike a total of some 80-million sterling silver coins to mark the XXI Olympiad in Montreal. The mintage will run from the fall of 1973 through the summer of 1976.

The coins are being issued in seven series, each comprising four distinctively different designs. Two will have a face value of $10 and two a face-value of $5, creating a total of 28 different coins in all.

All will be legal tender of Canada, including the specially minted proof-quality coinage. This is the first time Canada has struck $5 and $10 silver coins.

GROSS REVENUES from the sale of these coins in Canada and throughout the world are expected to be $500 million. And since the production marketing and all the other costs are estimated at about 50 per cent of over-all revenues, the anticipated profit realized on the entire program should be some $250 million.

It is this profit that is designed to provide the major portion of the financing for the first Olympic Games to take place on Canadian soil.

In keeping with tradition, the designs spotlight the games themselves. But additional emphasis is placed on the role of the host cities, Montreal and Kingston, and the North American continent.

The theme for the first — geographic — of seven issues are as follows: Map of the World; Map of North American Continent; Skyline of Montreal, and Sailsboats of Kingston, Ontario.

EACH COIN will bear the Olympic symbol of five interlocking rings incorporating a stylized letter M for Montreal. To the right of the symbol and disposed in descending order are the words: — Olympiade, XXI Olympiad.

Centrally located below the main device is the face-value. The first $5 coin will have the map of North America with the same inscriptions as the $10 coin.

All of Canada's 1976 Olympic coins will have a silver content of 92.50 per cent with 7.5 per cent copper alloy. This gives the $10 coin a fine silver weight of 1.445 Troy ounces and the $5 coin a fine silver weight of .723 Troy ounces.

The diameter of the $10 piece is 45 millimeters, roughly 1.8 inches, making it slightly larger than a silver dollar. The $5 coins are 38 millimeters, about 1.5

inches, and the exact size of a U.S. dollar. (Newspaper Enterprise Assn.)

Aerogramme to commemorate 25th NATO anniversary

The U. S. Postal Service will release a new 10-cent aerogramme commemorating the 25th anniversary of the signing of the North Atlantic Treaty and the establishment of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO).

First day ceremonies will be held April 4 in Washington, D. C.

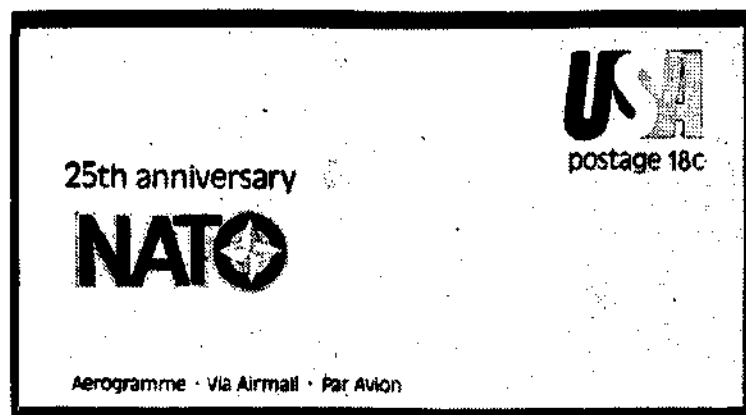

The pact is considered one of the most important United States alliances. It initiated 25 years of peace and security through collective self-defense and has provided for continuing joint action in political, economic, social and environmental fields.

The treaty was adopted on March 18, 1949, and ratified by the Senate on July 21, 1949. Canada, Britain, France, Luxembourg, Belgium, the Netherlands, Norway, Denmark, Iceland, Italy and Portugal were original signers of the alliance. Greece and Turkey joined in 1952 and the Federal Republic of Germany joined NATO in 1955, bringing the number of members to its current 15.

The aerogramme will be printed on the Andreotti Gravure press at the Bureau of Engraving and Printing. The initial print order is 10 million.

The letter sheet provides airmail service anywhere in the world for 18 cents.

Collectors desiring first-day cancellations should send their requests to NATO Aerogramme, Postmaster, Washington, D. C., 20013 with remittance of 18 cents for each aerogramme ordered. First-day canceled aerogrammes will be sent under separate cover to collectors who also send their own mailing labels.

linance of 18 cents for each aerogramme ordered. First-day canceled aerogrammes will be sent under separate cover to collectors who also send their own mailing labels.

LINN'S STAMP NEWS has resumed their policy of sending free sample copies to collector's requesting them. (The service was suspended for a time during the newsprint shortage.)

Send your request to Linn's Stamp News, P. O. Box 20, Sidney, Ohio, 45305.

LINN'S ALSO reports the results of their annual Stamp Derby. The 1973 Boston Tea Party block of four was named best adhesive, the Special Stamp for Someone Special (LOVE) was voted the worst issue and the Postal People release came in as the least necessary issue of the year.

THE FRANKLIN D. Roosevelt Philatelic Society will issue two cacheted covers commemorating the 29th anniversary of the death of the late president.

The black-bordered envelopes feature a portrait of Mr. Roosevelt as depicted on the 1945-46 Roosevelt Memorial Series with the wording "In Memory of Franklin Delano Roosevelt on the 29th Anniversary of His Death."

Stamp notes

by Bernadine Rechner

The limited-edition, numbered sets will be franked with Roosevelt Memorial Stamps and cancelled at Hyde Park, New York, April 12, 1974.

The set of two covers is available for $1 from the FDR Philatelic Society, Box 150-M, Clinton Corners, N. Y., 12514. Please include a self-addressed, stamped, No. 10 (long) envelope with your order.

More and more Britons turn to private medical care

by TOM CULLEN

LONDON — While Americans debate whether to extend Medicare, in Britain, home of socialized medicine, more and more people are opting to pay for their medical care under private health insurance schemes.

The trend here is seen as a black eye for Britain's National Health Service, which celebrated its 25th birthday in July, and which is currently costing the taxpayer $6.2 billion a year.

The private sector stresses that it is not competing with socialized medicine, but merely supplementing what the state provides. Nevertheless membership in private health services is booming.

The largest of these, the British United Provident Association (BUPA), now has 800,000 members on its books, which means that it covers two million people when members' families are taken into account.

Not all of BUPA's members are company executives. "With the affluent society ordinary working people now find that they can afford the best in medicine as well as color television and holidays on the continent," Mrs. Mary Adams, a BUPA executive, explained.

THE ADVANTAGES private medicine has to offer are obvious. For example, a private patient who is hospitalized can choose his own consultant rather than take pot-luck with a National Health Service doctor.

More important, the private patient can jump the line for a hospital bed. Currently the NHS has a waiting list of 500,000 patients for hospital beds, 80 per cent of whom require some form of surgery.

An NHS patient stands a 1 to 16 chance of being admitted to one of London's teaching hospitals, which are the pampered darlings of state medicine. But a private patient's chances are 1 in 3. (Under the original National Health Act one per cent of the beds in State-owned hospitals are set aside for private patients.)

A free, adequate, and equal health service for all was the high — some would say, utopian — goal set by the National Health Service, which began operations in July, 1948.

MORE AFTER A quarter of a century the NHS remains free, aside from minor charges for drug prescriptions, spectacles and dentures. Its services, however, are not adequate in the opinion of many.

WHEN THESE Britons lined up for free medicine under the fledgling National Health Service in 1948, it was hoped to provide free, adequate and equal health services for all. The picture today is far different.

An example is the acute shortage of doctors, there being fewer general practitioners today than there were 10 years ago to care for a greater population.

The reason for this is that the government made a colossal blunder in 1955 when it ordered a 10 per cent cut in the intake of medical schools. The government was basing itself on a faulty population projection which showed a population increase of only 4.5 per cent between 1955 and 1971. In reality it grew by almost twice as much.

The result is that today the percentage of NHS patients who live in "under-doctored" areas has doubled from 17 per cent to 35 per cent. The doctors themselves, many of whom carry a case-load of 3,500 patients, are overworked, have turned into mere pill-pushers in many cases.

IN GEORGE ORWELL'S "Animal Farm" the Seventh Commandment, "All animals are equal," was changed to read, "All animals are equal, but some are more equal than others."

This could well be the motto of the National Health Service, which tends to perpetuate old social and economic inequalities.

The mental and geriatric hospitals, for example, are the Cinderellas of the NHS. Here patients usually get less medical attention, worse food, and live in more none of the private health insurance schemes expected to last more than a year or two. Seventeen of these organizations came together to form the British United Provident Association in a sort of "suicide pact" for the purpose of phasing out their operations.

None was more surprised than its founders when after a shaky start (membership dropped from 39,000 in 1948 to 35,000 in 1950) BUPA caught on. The mid-1950s were the time of spectacular growth, BUPA picking up 150,000 new members in the period 1953-1956. By that time disillusionment with Britain's socialized medicine had set in.

TODAY BUPA administers 20 short-stay hospitals of its own, is building six more. It also operates the finest, automated medical center in Europe, where a complete diagnostic profile of a patient — blood tests, X rays, cardiograph — can be compiled in two hours. The NHS has nothing comparable to offer.

Observers here are convinced that private medicine has an important role to play in the socialized medical setup.

"A mammoth State organization such as our National Health Service cannot afford to experiment," says Dr. William A. R. Thomson, editor of The Practitioner.

"Private enterprise on the other hand can and should be prepared to experiment. In this sense the private sector should act as pace-setter for state medicine."

'American Graffiti' star hopes for Best Supporting Actress

An Oscar? Candy can't believe it!

HOLLYWOOD — The trade paper ads read simply:

"For your consideration . . . Best supporting actress — 'American Graffiti.'"

Beneath the words was a picture of Candy Clark, the dynamite young actress who played the witless blonde pushover in the picture.

The advertisement worked to perfection. Candy Clark was nominated for an Academy Award. But she won't know until April 2, when the Oscars are presented, whether she wins the award.

"I only took out four ads," Candy said. "Two in the Hollywood Reporter and two in Daily Variety. I used four different pictures of myself."

THE PHOTOGRAPHS were necessary. No one, save Candy's mother, would have recognized the actress from her screen characterization. Instead of a painted blonde ditz, Candy is a soft, beautiful brunette with blue-green eyes.

But she is ambitious and determined to become a movie star.

"I was lost in the large cast of 'American Graffiti,'" she said. "Nobody knew who I was. So I decided to take the ads in the trade papers."

A NATIVE OF Norman, Okla., Candy was reared in Fort Worth, Tex. She has four younger brothers. Her father was a chef and her mother worked for a telephone answering service.

The Hollywood scene

by Vernon Scott

"I left Texas when I graduated from high school and almost starved to death in New York," Candy said. "But I finally got some modeling jobs."

Candy came away with more than a good screen credit in her movie debut in "Fat City." She and Jeff Bridges (son of Lloyd) have been inseparable ever since.

"But we're not thinking of marriage," Candy said. "I'm too intent on my career. It comes before everything else. I'm still taking acting lessons and seeing all the movies I can to learn as much as possible."

Candy soon will be starring in her third film, "Report to the Commissioner."

"The odds on winning the Oscar are five to one," Candy concluded. "That's better than they give you in Las Vegas."

Win at bridge

by Oswald and James Jacoby

South's dummy play does it

There is nothing spectacular about today's hand. The contract is a humdrum four hearts which South brings home without any squeezes, coups or end plays. He does take a finesse but everybody takes finesesses.

Nevertheless the hand is worthy of lots of study because the winning play requires faultless technique.

South must start by ducking the first spade. West can do nothing better than to continue the suit. South wins and it is now up to him to take an immediate club finesse. When that works he must cash his ace and king of trumps. Then he heads a club to the ace and ruffs a third club.

Now he is ready and able to ruff his last spade. A fourth club is led and ruffed and South has eight tricks in. The ace of spades; ace-king of trumps; ace-queen of clubs; one ruff in dummy and two in his own hand. He leads to dummy's ace of diamonds and plays the last club.

If East ruffs, South's last trump will take his 10th trick. If East doesn't ruff, that club is the 10th trick.

All very simple, but the sort of dummy

Heart throbbing, faintness may suggest irregularities

For approximately five years my wife has had periods where her heart pounds hard or flutters, she feels faint and her fingers tingle. I cannot feel any pulse at her wrist during these periods. These actions used to be spaced months apart, but lately they are a lot closer together, and the periods last longer (10 minutes). She has seen a doctor of internal medicine who gave her an electrocardiogram test twice. Each time he has said "there is nothing wrong, you are a woman and lots of people have these spells all the time." This alibi does not help you at all.

As I understand it, an electrocardiogram test shows heart damage or change. We would like to remedy this problem before the damage is done.

She is 40, not overweight, does not drink or smoke. Would you have any comments on this situation?

From your story, I presume your wife started having this problem when she was about 35. The story suggests two possible causes. Your wife may be having an irregularity of the heart. These may occur in attacks as you describe. In this case often the only evidence of the irregularity that you can see on an electrocardiogram occurs during the attack. The heart tracing really has two purposes, first it shows the rate and rhythm of the heartbeat, and second it provides evidence of heart muscle damage, as in the case of a heart attack.

Doctors and patients are both frustrated with recurrent attacks of irregularity. It seems that the episodes have a way of happening outside the doctor's office and never when he wants to take a record to see what it is.

The doctor says

by Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

There is a solution to this too, but it is sometimes difficult to accomplish and expensive. The new portable tape recorders can record your heart rate continuously for hours and even days, and when the attack occurs you then have a record of what it really was.

I would like to reassure you that most of the irregularities of the heart, in a young person who has no evidence of heart disease, are not really dangerous. They are very annoying. Your wife is probably in this category because her medical examination didn't show anything.

Incidentally, irregularities of this sort can be treated if that is what the problem is. There are medicines that can be taken to calm down the heart muscle and prevent the irregular beats from taking over the heart.

The other possibility is that your wife may be over breathing, a condition called hyperventilation. I think of this because of your comment about her hands tingling. Overbreathing can cause irregularities of the heart and the tingling sensation. The next time your wife has one of these ask her to breathe very slowly and in a shallow manner. That may help her. Do not ask her to hold her breath. Breath holding in these circumstances can cause her to pass out.

Recipients of Social Security must submit report

Q. Last year I told the people at the Social Security office that I intended to earn $2,200 in 1973. Today I received my W-2 form from my employer and it shows gross wages of $2,200 for 1973. Do I still have to submit an annual report to Social Security?

A. Yes. Anyone who received at least one Social Security check and had gross earnings over $2,100 in 1973 must make an annual report of earnings to Social Security by April 15, 1974. (Note: the al-

Q. Does a company pension plan have any effect on social security benefits? I will retire next year and will receive a pension from the company even though I will be only 62 when I retire. I notice my social security is going to have some effect on my company pension. Is this legal?

A. Your company pension will have no effect on your social security benefits. We are in no position to comment on your company's pension plan. Pension plans vary from company to company and each incorporates provisions into their plans as best suits their needs.

We're making a little change.

CitizensBank

We're not exactly changing our name. Just making it shorter. Saying it the way you do: Citizens Bank.

We're also adding a service mark that combines the "C" in Citizens and the "B" in Bank. This mark symbolizes what a recent independent survey says you say we are. Progressive. Innovative. Dependable. Large. Centrally located. Experienced. Accommodating. All the good things you want a bank to be.

Because we're all of these things, you're using more of our services. The more you use them, the bigger we grow. With $274,000,000 in deposits, we're Illinois' largest bank outside Chicago serving the northwest suburbs.

As we continue to grow, we'll continue to make changes. Some little. Some big. Changes that will pay off big in benefits for you.

Vincent Gardenia enjoys best of all possible worlds

NEW YORK (UPI) — Vincent Gardenia is an actor who has reached a level in his profession at which he can enjoy the best of all three possible worlds.

He has won three awards in the theater, he is an Oscar nominee for his role as the baseball manager in "Bang the Drum Slowly," and he works regularly on television as Archie Bunker's neighbor in "All in the Family."

Gardenia finds each medium rewarding in its own way, and considers none of them his favorite.

"THE MOVIES are fantastic," he said in an interview here. "It's great to be able to work directly with the audience in a stage performance, and on television you get all that exposure."

Gardenia is a happy actor and also a far rarer thing — a busy actor. He is working on location in New York in "Death Wish," a film which stars him and Charles Bronson; he starts work next month on a remake of "The Front Page," with Jack Lemmon and Walter Matthau.

He is seen regularly on television in "Family," and this fall he hopes to do a play off Broadway.

Born Vincenzo Scognamiglio in Naples, Gardenia did his first acting in Italian in his father's New York-based company. He was 30 and a veteran of World War II before he got his first English-speaking role in a summer stock production.

HE WON HIS first award — an Obie — for his performance in an off-Broadway revival of "Machinal" in 1960. Another Obie followed for "Passing Through from Exotic Places," and he won a Tony for his performance as the older brother in Neil Simon's "The Prisoner of Second Avenue."

Gardenia has his eye now on another world he hopes to conquer — the Italian cinema. Although he still thinks in Italian and speaks it more fluently than English, he appeared only recently in his first Italian film, a picture about Charles "Lucky" Luciano which has not yet been released in this country.

VINCENT GARDENIA, a neighbor of Archie Bunker in TV's top-rated "All in the Family," has won three theater awards and is an Oscar nominee for his role in "Bang the Drum Slowly." He relaxes here with Sophia Loren's cookbook.

Auto racing criticism attacked

I must take issue with one of your columns in the Feb. 18 edition of the Herald, specifically "Religion Today" by Rev. Lester Kinsolving.

Kinsolving seems to be a latter day energy expert bent on creating headlines about one of the most visible forms of energy usage — auto racing. Maybe if the Rev. did a little homework he would have found out that:

—The Indy 500 does indeed use fuel, not gasoline or kerosene or aviation fuel, but methanol, which is not generally a petroleum derivative. I doubt that Nixon could get off the ground, much less go to Key Biscayne five times, using methanol in Air Force One.

—In the order of petroleum usage including the event's usage, transportation to and from the event, heating, lighting, etc., the following facts were determined by the National Motor Sports Institute (a combination of all auto racing associations) and disseminated to the news media and members of Congress in the form of a report officially titled "Leisure Time Activities Energy Consumption Report": (figures are in millions of barrels): Vacation travel, 128.9; general aviation, 19.8; movies, theatres, 17.8; football, 13.4; basketball, 5.8; horse racing, 2.3; motor racing, 2.2; rodeos, 2.1; bowling, .86; baseball, .80; wrestling, .65; and golf, .35.

As we can see, motor racing uses only 1.13 per cent of all leisure time petroleum. For more information on this report, read the March 1974 issue of Car and Driver magazine.

—Since the Indy 500 is the greatest motor racing spectacle in the world, it also gets the most press coverage, both good and bad. When someone is injured or killed there, the whole world knows. Where is Kinsolving's sympathy for the thousands of people killed and injured annually in attempting to get from point A to point B in their auto, or the men and children killed playing organized sports (like football)?

—As for the race cutting off the parishioners from church on Sunday morning in West Indianapolis, most will stay at home anyway to listen to the race over radio or some may go to the race itself.

The way Kinsolving writes, we may as well go back to the Dark Ages and let the Catholic Church dictate our daily lives. The men, who race automobiles know the inherent risks involved in their chosen profession, the same as anyone else who chooses a dangerous profession, i.e. policemen, firemen, truck drivers, coal miners or construction workers.

May I suggest that, in the future, the Rev. Lester Kinsolving get his facts straight before he attacks any group or event. If he considers himself a religious spokesman, calling for a ban on any activity which millions of adults enjoy, why isn't he also calling for a ban on cigarettes, liquor and automobiles, all of which can also be lethal, but which many adults enjoy.

Solzhenitsyn editorial scolded

The February 20 editorial on Alexander Solzhenitsyn, while pretending to extol the virtues of freedom of expression, was a most brazen example of the type of reporting we might expect now that almost all the major news media are liberally orientated, and there is little chance of contradiction. Solzhenitsyn really risked his life to give us a message, and it really breaks my heart to see that message distorted and given the exact opposite meaning. For example, the editorial stated, "He is not especially attracted to the West, and he speaks out about the hypocrisy of well-heeled Westerners, with no threat to their personal security, speaking out against repression." What Solzhenitsyn really wrote and I quote, "It is perfectly proper to protest if there is no danger to life, if the opponent is likely to back down, and if you don't risk being denounced by the left (in fact, it is always better to protest together with the left)." Quite a difference in meaning, wouldn't you say?

Secondly, the article made this ugly comparison: "One needs to recall the furor over Charlie Chaplin and the Hollywood blacklists during the 1940's to realize that the trouble with artists — and this is as it should be — is that they should not be trampled or restrained by state-imposed limits. Even our government and society, under pressure, can strike out against those who enjoy artistic freedom." As I recall, not Chaplin or any other artist was ever trampled or restrained by state-imposed limits from preaching the virtues of Communism. The problem was that at that particular time the Russian leaders were so busy butchering those who dared to oppose Communism, that it was rather embarrassing to admit that you were a Communist. Mr. Chaplin was not even a citizen of this country, so it is difficult to understand why he should have even been concerned with the form of government we lived under. Although both Mr. Chaplin and Mr. Solzhenitsyn were indeed artists, this was a poor comparison because one was in favor of Communism and the other was against Communism. And since we're talking about freedom of expression, how can anyone possibly ignore the fact that Communism is against freedom of expression?

Though the Fence Post Editor occasionally tosses out a bone to a conservative writer, we must condense our argument onto one typewritten page, and the result often is unconvincing and may even sound ridiculous. But even this is more than most other papers will grant. Since 1963 I have been asking that Padlock employ just one writer with a conservative viewpoint or at least print a syndicated conservative column on a regular basis. This request is always ignored. If this is freedom of expression, are we any better off than Mr. Solzhenitsyn was in Russia?

'Coverage aided drive'

As the 1973 Christmas Seal campaign comes to a close, we wish to extend our sincere thanks to your newspaper for its support of our fund raising drive.

We have said in past years that we couldn't have done nearly as well without you. Truly, though, our progress against lung diseases would greatly diminish without your support.

Throughout the year you provide the indispensable link with the reading public as you carry educational articles about lung diseases, air pollution, tuberculosis and smoking, news of our activities and appeals for the public to support Christmas Seals.

Because of your outstanding service to your community, we are enclosing a Certificate of Appreciation for your help in the 57th Christmas Seal campaign.

Please accept our thanks for your assistance in our efforts to protect the lung health of all citizens and my best wishes for success and good health in 1974.

She sought out Crane

I was a member of the Impeach Nixon delegation, criticized by Mr. Crane in your paper, who approached Mr. Crane at the Kirk Center. No cause is more dear to me than "exceptional children," for I have experienced the defeats and special joys of such a child.

Mr. Crane's office was contacted four times for an opportunity to meet with him, each time our call was not returned. Our purpose was not to take away from this celebration, but to arrange a future public meeting with the elusive Mr. Crane.

Millions of dollars have been impounded by Mr. Nixon which were "ear marked" for the very purpose Kirk Center was established, to help children with special needs.

As Mr. Crane expressed in his letter, "something has been stolen that belongs to others." I agree, monies have been illegally taken away from our special children.

Rob Roy attendance praised

We would like to congratulate the citizens of Mount Prospect and Prospect Heights who attended the meeting of the Zoning Board Thursday, Feb. 21. The discussion was concerning the development of Rob Roy, and the citizens were very well informed.

There are some glaring differences between what our mayor and village board have been telling us and what private citizens have found to be true. These differences should be well publicized before the survey is sent out by our elected officials. The two biggest differences are as follows.

—Mayor Teichert has said repeatedly that the cost to the town to purchase Rob Roy would be as high as $10 million. A private citizen stated that without zoning for apartments, the land as open space is valued at only $2 million!

—Mayor Teichert has said repeatedly that if we don't allow a PUD to be built by Kenroy, they can go to the county and controls would be out of our hands. Private citizens discovered that it is unlikely the county board would ever go against a town when the village puts up a strong fight against such developments. Even the Kenroy representatives stated that they do not want to take it to the county zoning board. (Recent court cases have been finding in favor of homeowners instead of developers.)

These are only two of the many important points brought out by our citizens. If this information was available to private citizens willing to take the time to investigate the matter completely, why wasn't it available to Mayor Teichert and the village board?

Perhaps they should contact their citizens and look beyond what Kenroy has been selling them. They should also stop trying to tell the homeowners they are defeated before these elected Officials have bothered to fight.

Many thanks to the citizens who worked so hard.

Superintendent applauds Herald

On behalf of the Board of Education of School Dist. 54, we would like to extend our sincere thanks to your publication for providing us with complete and informative news coverage in the weeks before our referendum election, held February 16.

Both issues on the ballot passed with substantial margins. We will now be able to proceed with remodeling of our eight oldest schools, and to construct new facilities during the next five years in order to keep abreast of the phenomenal growth being experienced in the Schaumburg Township elementary schools. The voters also approved the construction of a new administrative office complex, something that has been badly needed for many years.

It is gratifying to know that the citizens of this community are willing to support the elementary school system. We pledge our continued efforts to provide the best possible education for the children of Schaumburg Township.

Employee blasts 'termination'

I am writing this letter because I think people should know how concerned some food stores are about their employees. Particularly when they say what a great company it is to work with.

As everyone knows the Jewel Food Store at 208 W. Northwest Hwy, Mount Prospect, closed its doors on Saturday, January 26. I had been an employee there for 16 years and other employees had the same years of service, some more. We were sorry to hear the store was going to close, and naturally were concerned about our jobs.

A good company, as Jewel always claimed to be, we thought would transfer us. Weeks went by with no word. Four days before the actual closing date we were told that our employment was being terminated.

It was unreal to all of us.

The officials, if that terminology can be used, did not even have the courtesy or the guts to come in and tell us in person. It was done by telephone and the manager had to do their dirty work.

Some of the girls wanted to know what would happen to the insurance they had, the JCR plan and other questions were pending. We were left hanging. They probably did not know the answers to these questions or anything else as far as that matters so were afraid to come in.

As the last days were approaching and customers were asking us where we were going we told them our services were being terminated. The customers could not believe Jewel would do this. Many said, "I'm going to tell my friends and neighbors what a lousy deal Jewel pulled and am not shopping at Jewel anymore." They could not believe Jewel would do anything like it.

Had Jewel management had the decency to explain the situation and answer the questions for us it would have thrown a different light on the subject. We did not receive so much as a "thank you" for all the years of service. No wonder they did not want us to know about the store closing.

Maybe they feel that because we were part-time employees we should have been glad to have had a job. What they forget is that the Jewel is made up largely of part-time help.

We were told we could go to another store and apply, starting at the wages paid when we left. The reason they offered this to us is that they knew no other Jewel would hire us at the same wages since they can hire help at cheaper wages.

We also lose our seniority and have to start at the bottom again. Like all big companies they want every ounce of work out of you. You do your best for them and then they leave you out in the cold.

They talk about appreciation and loyalty but they have forgotten theirs.

Thank you Jewel. You do, do more than one expects.

Rose Poling
Mount Prospect.

Editor's Note:

According to Jewel, each part-time employee at the Mount Prospect store received two-week written notice of termination of employment. A Jewel spokeswoman said that regulations of the United Retail Workers Union prohibit transferral of part-time employees, but they could apply at other Jewel stores where, if hired, they would continue working at their same hourly pay rate, but would lose their seniority. Employee insurance, also offered through the union, remains in effect for 30 days after termination of employment, with an option for the employee to keep the insurance individually if he does not re-affiliate through another store. Participation in Jewel's profit-sharing plan ends with termination of employment, but, the spokeswoman said, since the company's fiscal year ends Jan. 31, the statements normally do not come out until spring.

No 'bandwagon' for Martwick

Regarding Wandalyne Rice's February 7 column, "There's a new word going around schools: Sexism," I would like to make an observation on the paragraph mentioning County Schools Superintendent Richard Martwick.

She refers to his "jumping on the nearest bandwagon," a rather peculiar way to describe what she next cites as taking positions on student smoking and lowering thermostats in the schools. Superintendent Martwick believes he is fulfilling his responsibility as an educational administrator to comment on topical news affecting education, as well as the need to devote himself to day-to-day administration as related to 143 school districts.

As for the recent appointment of four additional women to administrative positions in our office, it was with great pride that Mr. Martwick made the announcement. She used the words "with one news announcement. Still, she is entitled to her interpretation, but I hope that this clarifies the motivation and intent of our efforts.

Baldwin 'deteriorating'

Road condition assailed

While reading through your newspaper a short time ago, I came upon an article which was entitled, "Hicks Road widening O.K."

Fantastic, for once the people (residents) of Palatine are going to receive something very beneficial from not only the state of Illinois, but also from the Palatine village officials.

But what about the real home town politicians, where are they hiding? Where are the leaders who are working for their own constituents? More important, what are the so-called home town politicians doing for the people of Palatine?

There is a very deteriorating situation in the village of Palatine that needs to come to the attention of our local leaders, that being Baldwin Road. More specifically, from the corner of Hicks Road eastbound to Rohlfing Road.

A simple trip in either direction on this road will fully bring any unconscious driver to his or her senses immediately. The east bound lane is probably the worst, in fact I think it died many years ago. The chuckholes located near MacArthur drive have caused many a motorist to brake on a dime, causing undue stress on not only the driver, but also the mode of transportation being used. The new northbound lane also has its share of problems.

What I want to know is simply this: when are the Palatine village officials going to get on the ball and schedule major, and I repeat, major repair work, for a road that is seeing and experiencing continuous use primarily by residents of Palatine?

Residents who still are trying desperately to refer to their town as a real hometown had better wake up to what is going on in this town and be prepared to stand up for what they believe is right!

Women activists

Working hard for ERA

by MONICA WILCH PERIN

Their homes aren't always immaculate: they readily admit that. But there are only 24 hours in a day, even for Julie Sass and Cathy Duoba, co-founders of the Northwest Suburban Coalition for ERA.

Besides their efforts on behalf of the equal rights amendment, Julie, mother of five, works full-time for the Minority Information and Referral Service and is a speaker for Planned Parenthood, while Cathy, mother of two, is human resources chairwoman for the League of Women Voters.

"But don't make us sound like superhumans," Julie warned. "You know, those stories about how some woman does this and this and this and bakes bread, too."

Both women pointed out that due to their ERA work and other community involvement, they must make certain sacrifices on the home front, like putting off the ironing for another week.

FURTHER SHATTERING the superwoman fantasy, Julie and Cathy also spoke candidly of the "strains" and "crises" which their activities have at times created in their marriages.

"But you get through those times and grow because of it," said Cathy.

And Julie feels the relationship between her and her husband is even better now because of her growth as an individual. She also believes her children have benefited from her activity by having to learn a measure of self-reliance.

"They have to lead their own lives, too," the soft-spoken mother observed.

Hardly fitting the stereotype of the bra-burning, man-hating "women's liber," Cathy and Julie have over the years quietly picked out the paths of their convictions within their personal lives. And their two paths — though not identical in every respect — nevertheless happen to coincide with the concept of ERA.

"ERA IS NOT the same thing as the women's lib movement," Cathy believes. "Women's lib deals with personal relationships between men and women — raising consciousness and changing attitudes. But the ERA just says that at least the laws should not be stacked against women."

For Cathy the path toward active support of ERA began with the realization that the amendment wouldn't necessarily pass automatically. Julie, too, gradually became aware of ERA as it passed in Congress and then met opposition in the Illinois legislature.

"As women, we had both run into subtle discrimination," Julie said.

"We were active citizens in the community," explained Cathy. "And we became feminists when we found out some of the things that happen when you're involved — when you go to a commission meeting with all your research and your proposed solution to a problem and there's just a dead silence while they give you a funny look, then they continue as if you hadn't said a word."

JULIE'S PERSPECTIVE of the situation comes in large part from her job, where she sees "women with master's degrees still being asked 'How fast can you type?'" But she also has her own story to tell.

Last fall Julie decided she wanted a tubal ligation. To her surprise, she said, Northwest Community Hospital required her husband's signature on the approval form. Her signature, witnessed by her husband who did, in fact, concur in her decision, was insufficient.

Julie argued that the hospital's position was untenable in light of recent legal developments giving women more of a voice over the destiny of their bodies.

But the hospital, she said, claimed that "your husband got the right to your body in the marriage vows."

The matter went to the hospital board of directors, Julie said, and they finally made a special exception allowing her to have the operation on her own approval.

"I WON THE BATTLE but lost the war," Julie concludes sadly. Any other woman who cares to defend the principle involved will presumably have to go through the same trauma all over again, since the hospital's policy was not changed.

But despite the emotional nature of this and other feminist issues, Julie and Cathy are not "rabble-rousers." Each has her own differing personal position on abortion, for instance, which neither wishes to impose on anyone else. They simply want the freedom — for themselves and for every other woman — to make that choice.

And in their dedication to an ideal rather than a movement, they criticize "radical-liberal" organizations, along with more traditional ones, who cry "We need a woman on this committee" — not because she is capable, but because she is a woman.

As for the future, Cathy and Julie will not be left without a cause if and when ERA is ratified.

"I WOULD LIKE to devote more energy to the women's caucus," Julie mused. She has been instrumental in the founding of the Northwest Suburban Women's Caucus, which will hold its third meeting this month. According to Julie, the bipartisan organization will encourage and support any woman — "or any man with feminist issues at heart" — to run for office.

And Cathy foresees infinite possibilities in the area of equal opportunities in education and housing, her ballwicket in the League of Women Voters. Cathy has adopted as her own philosophy the popular slogan, "If you're not part of the solution, you're part of the problem."

Stripped of any "holier-than-thou" connotations, the slogan aptly describes the approach both women take to daily living.

CATHY DUOBA, district 3 coordinator for ERA, visits a local church women's group to rally support for the Equal Rights Amendment.

JULIE SASS, center, has added to her ERA activities the task of helping establish a northwest suburban women's caucus. Also on steering committee are attorney Carolyn Krause, left, and Lucille Gallagher.

NON bucks tradition

It stands for child-free lifestyle

by GAY PAULEY

What this country needs is more "social space," says Ellen Peck. She's leading a movement that would help provide it through a "none is fun" approach to parenthood.

"Social space is a combination of physical space and emotional freedom . . . not being crowded into molds, into masses," said the Baltimore homemaker, writer and co-founder with her husband, William, of the National Organization for Non-Parents (NON).

Mrs. Peck knows that NON is bucking deep tradition in a country where having children is expected of couples, where the family is revered, where Mother's and Father's Day were established.

"Inevitably all young people hear is the fulfillment of parenthood," she said. "Motherhood is given such adoration. I believe it should be respected, and that's not the same as adulation."

MRS. PECK SAID that NON, in its second year, had met some opposition, but not any formal group protests. "The opposition comes at a personal level," she said.

"But there are not very many people who, when you get right down to it, will tell you to have children."

"Our system of universal parenthood simply won't work. We're too crowded in our modes of living . . . a nightmare of masses."

"True, the government statistics show the fertility rate has dropped below the 'replacement' level. But the truth is, the real numbers in our population grow about 2 million more a year."

NON is one of several organizations concerned with the hazards of over-population. One of the oldest, Planned Parenthood, has its roots in Margaret Sanger's work in birth control in the early part of this century. Fairly new to the scene, like NON, is Zero Population Growth (ZPG).

Mrs. Peck, in an interview, explained that all overlap to an extent in their goals. ZPG "emphasizes the dangers to our environment of too many people."

"NON EMPHASIZES the benefits of child-free lifestyles. But we are concerned about children. That is why we're concerned about the quality of parents."

"Notice I emphasize child-free, not child-less. We reject the suggestion that one without children is less."

The National Organization for Non-Parents grew from Mrs. Peck's research on a book that started out to be about "fun marriages" and ended up titled "The Baby Trap" in which she exhorted that marriages frequently soured after children came along.

Then the letters started, mostly from young wives who supported her expose of the "baby sell" in this country. NON's membership now numbers 2,000 around the nation, she said. They're singles and marrieds and about 30 per cent already have children. Support is by $10 individual membership plus "several large donations," she said.

MRS. PECK AND her group have marshaled a lot of research to support NON's stand that raising children is not what a marriage is all about. They cite a survey by the University of Michigan Institute for Social Research, for instance, which discovered that most women identified the happiest times of their marriages as those before the first child and after the last had grown out of the nest.

The Pecks (he's in advertising), married nearly 10 years, reached their decision to be child-free after about four years of discussions, she said.

"How many couples weigh equally the option of parenthood?" she asked. "I know that had we decided to have children, I'd not be able to be a part-time mother. I wouldn't want someone else answering my child's questions."

"We're often accused of being selfish. Surely, I value my freedom to write a book, to travel, to complete a thought."

"These are kinds of selfishness which don't hurt anyone else. This lifestyle is not an evasion of responsibility, but responding to a different set of responsibilities . . . giving attention to the larger family of man."

Second Liberty plate available

The second in a series of four collectors' plates commemorating the nation's upcoming 200th birthday in 1976 is now available through members of federated women's clubs.

The series, "Portrait of Liberty," tells in chronological order the four major movements of the American Revolution.

The second place, as was the first which portrayed Patrick Henry issuing the challenge, "Give me liberty or give me death," is available in antique powder blue and Early American milk glass.

Price is $10. After Dec. 31, 1974, the price for the second plate will be $12, for which tab the first plate may also be ordered. Prices increase progressively and after July 4, 1976, prices will be $15 or market bid. Original molds will be destroyed in a public ceremony in Independence Hall on the 200th birthday date.

Flowers help sick improve

Flowers serve many purposes and they help sick people get better, according to a Miami psychiatrist.

Dr. George Jacobson, an attending psychiatrist at Jackson Memorial Hospital, says flowers have a "positive psychological effect" on many patients in hospitals.

"Symbolically, flowers express love to sick people," Jacobson says. "They respond to tender loving care and flowers mean that someone cares for them — someone loves them. That's an important incentive to get better."

"Green plants have a similar meaning. A plant is alive and growing, which encourages many patients to identify with the living plant and with life, thus speeding recovery."

Leave lights on when you're away

In this era of the energy crisis, is it still a good idea to leave a light on at home when you're away?

"Yes," says insurance man Myron Dubain, executive vice president of Fireman's Fund American Insurance Companies.

He is concerned about a possible rise in crime, particularly burglary and vandalism, that could result from a blackout to conserve electricity when the family is away.

Dubain said law enforcement and insurance authorities have been urging homeowners to give their residences a "lived-in" look at all hours of the day and night to discourage would-be burglars.

"In our frenzy to cut back on power, we may be turning out too many lights for our own good," he said. (UPI)

Sandra and Bruce Whiting go on skiing honeymoon in Utah

A week of skiing at Park City, Utah, was the honeymoon chosen by Sandra Frediani of Mount Prospect and Bruce Whiting of Des Plaines. They were married Feb. 24 in St. Raymond Catholic Church, Mount Prospect, and greeted 250 guests at a dinner at Fontana D'Or, Chicago, before leaving on their trip.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Enzo Frediani and the Cecil Whittings.

The wedding was solemnized at four in the afternoon with a large bridal party preceding Sandra down the church aisle. Nancy Hieker, Mount Prospect, was her maid of honor. Bridesmaids included Patricia Frediani, Mount Prospect, her sister-in-law Joanne Kiol, Bloomington, Catherine Zoin, Schaumburg; Kay Whiting, Des Plaines, her sister-in-law, and Constance Lessner, Mount Prospect.

The bride's niece, 4-year-old Chandra Frediani, Mount Prospect, served as flower girl.

ALL THE GIRLS were gowned alike in electric blue taffeta with white French cuffs and a bib front trimmed in white eyelid lace. They all carried white snowball mums tipped in blue to match their dresses.

Sandra's bridal gown was of ivory satin, princess-styled with a bodice overlaid in ivory embroidered lace and pearls. It had a high neckline, long sleeves and a chapel train.

The bride made her own veil, cathedral length and outlined with scalloped lace, and attached it to a lace cap. She carried long-stemmed calla lilies with stephanotis and ivory baby's breath.

BRUCE'S BEST MAN was Daniel DiGangi of Des Plaines. His groomsmen included his brother, Gary Whiting of Schaumburg; Terry Somers, Des Plaines; Dino Frediani, Mount Prospect, brother of the bride; Bill Evans, Elk Grove Village, and Jim Maggiore, Mount Prospect.

Since returning from their honeymoon the newlyweds are living in Mount Prospect. Sandra works for Frediani Developers, Inc., Mount Prospect, and Bruce for DuPage Drywall Co., Inc., Villa Park.

Workshop planned on open marriage

"Open Marriage" is the topic of the Harper College Expanding Horizons Workshop Friday, March 29. The workshop is from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. in the boardrooms of Building A. The $6 tuition fee includes lunch.

Topics to be included are the contemporary influences that necessitate a re-evaluation of traditional marital relationships, what constitutes "openness" in marriage, and sexist roles and the expectations one has of oneself and one's partner.

Dr. Marguerite Ewald and Dennis Brokke, counselors at Harper's Community Counseling Center who will direct the program, also plan to discuss communication and how sexual permissiveness differs from the concept of "openness."

To register for "Open Marriage," readers may send name, address, telephone, Social Security number and birth date with a check for the correct tuition to Doe Hentschel, coordinator of women's programs, Harper College, Algonquin and Roselle roads, Palatine, Ill. 60067.

Child care is available by prior registration for an additional charge. Mothers may call 397-3000, Ext. 248.

Safety standards in offing for TVs

If your television set has given you a shock — and it wasn't related to program content — the Consumer Product Safety Commission wants to hear about it.

The Commission has announced it will hold hearings April 23 and 24 to collect information on the increasing incidences of shock, fires and explosions associated with TV receivers. The agency will then set mandatory safety standards for television sets, it announced.

Consumers nationwide are invited to contribute testimony, either written or in person, on their experiences with TV hazards. The hearings will be held in Washington, D.C. Testimony may be submitted to Harvey Tzaker, Office of Standards Coordination and Appraisal, U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission, Washington, D.C. 20207.

Consumers should include all pertinent details in their written testimony, but should also include a summary of their comments in no more than 250 words.

THE COMMISSION has received numerous reports of shock and fire accidents, some of which have resulted in injuries and deaths. In addition, nine notices of defects have been issued by manufacturers involving potential hazards in more than 140,000 television sets now in use.

The inquiry will not include hazards associated with radiation, because that is regulated by the Food and Drug Administration.

Underwriter's Laboratories, which tests most major brand electrical appliances on the market for safety and performance, declined any comment on the situation. However, it was learned that a new standard on impositions (an inward explosion) of TV receivers was issued by UL Jan. 25.

The Commission will seek technical information on the problem from the television manufacturing industry as well as from consumers.

THE FEDERAL TRADE Commission is considering requiring mail order firms to refund the purchase price of merchandise not shipped within 30 days.

Or, if the manufacturer is unable to ship within 30 days due to circumstances beyond his control, he would have to notify the customer before 30 days and receive the customer's consent for a delay.

The seller would also have to maintain records of complaints of non-delivery and of disposition for 18 months.

However, the proposal applies only to the initial shipment in the case of serial deliveries, such as magazines.

Planning to buy an air conditioner this summer? Be sure to look for the "energy efficiency ratio" of the models you consider.

The EER is determined by dividing the number of BTU's of cooling capacity by the unit's wattage. Some brands are now including this number on their air conditioners. If not, consumers should do the computation themselves before deciding on a unit.

ACCORDING TO Smithsonian Magazine, an EER of 10 is good (for example, a 10,000 BTU unit that draws 1,000 watts). But an EER of 5 indicates inefficient use of energy.

For further information on EERs and BTUs, consumers may write to the Association for Home Appliance Manufacturers, 20 N. Wacker Dr., Chicago, 60606.

Feminist fund-raiser for NOW Start with it clean

A "Feminist Fund-raiser" to initiate the new Northwest Suburban/Chicago chapter of the National Organization for Women (NOW) will be held at St. George and the Dragon Restaurant, Rts. 12 and 68, Palatine, Monday April 1, at 7:30 p.m.

Auxiliary seeks more volunteers at April coffees

Members of Northwest Community Hospital Women's Auxiliary are hoping April showers will not be in evidence Thursday, April 4. This is the date they have chosen to hold several simultaneous morning membership coffees to inform interested area women about activities of the hospital auxiliary.

These coffees, to be held in the homes of auxiliary members in Arlington Heights, Mount Prospect, Barrington-Palatine area and Plum Grove-Schaumburg area at 10 a.m., are being coordinated by Mrs. Robert Alfani. Women interested in attending may call Mrs. William McElroy, membership chairman, 392-2102, for further information.

Ruth Crawford, president of the auxiliary, explains that the purpose of the coffees is to interest prospective members to join the auxiliary as volunteer service is needed in many areas. Representatives of auxiliary projects such as the Snack shop, Pink Box Thrift Shop, gift cart, Pink Lady Gift Shop, fall fashion show, Boutique Noel, and volunteer workers in hospital departments will describe their work and meet the guests at the coffees.

Membership is open to all women over 19 years of age. Membership fee is $5 a year. There are no monthly meetings, but there are three luncheon meetings each year.

"The Auxiliary has something to offer everyone, whether it be service, fund raising or social," commented Mrs. McElroy.

A $2 donation is suggested, payable at the door, and there will be a cash bar. Stern and Tobin, a comedy team specializing in political satire, will head the program, which will also include a presentation of the goals and specific areas of action of NOW.

The purpose of NOW, according to its constitution, is "to bring women into the mainstream of American society... in truly equal partnership with men."

The new Northwest Suburban/Chicago NOW chapter, is an outgrowth of the North Suburban/Chicago NOW, which was started in 1970 and has actively worked for passage of the Equal Rights Amendment, elimination of sex-role stereotyping in schools and the dissemination of information about the achievements of women. The group will hold its first business meeting next Monday. For further information, those interested may contact Carol Wrabl at 537-8388, or Judy Keller, 398-8542.

Dry cleaning better for acetate dress

Dear Dorothy: I have a triacetate dress that washes beautifully. Recently I bought a 100 per cent acetate dress and discovered that the label for laundering is missing. Are triacetate and acetate the same? If so, then I ought to be able to wash the acetate dress the same way I do the other dress. Yes? — Caroline Hefernan

No. They're not the same. While triacetate can be washed easily and tumbled dry, acetate is tricky to wash as it can stretch when wet. While your acetate dress can be handwashed in tepid water in a mild suds, rinsed and then squeezed dry and allowed to drip dry, it might not be the exact size when dry. One of my favorite dresses is acetate and, when it's soiled, it goes right to the cleaner.

Dear Dorothy: This is how I make good brown gravy. I put a few grains of granulated sugar in the skillet with oil or the popular vegetable spray, then fry the meat which has been lightly sprinkled with flour (if desired). The meat browns nicely and then I use the pourable flour as it mixes with water so easily. The gravy comes out a rich brown. —Mrs. E. Sherman

Dear Dorothy: You may be interested in the instructions from the manufacturer of our fiberglass tub and shower unit I had cleaning problems, too, once the finish became dull. The instructions suggested cleaning with turpentine, then rubbing the finish with car polish. It works beautifully. —Phyllis Hoffmeister

Dear Dorothy: Somebody marked up the sidewalk in front of our house with crayon. How do we get it off? —Harold Pickens

Try the nonflammable cleaning solvent, trichloroethane.

Cool climate tips for early harvest

An Elk Grove Village woman writes the Potting Shed for planting tips for her vacation home in the north woods.

As many of you know, I moved from Arlington Heights to Wisconsin two and a half years ago, so I've got a bushel basket of tricks for cool-climate growing. These tips work in the northwest suburbs just as well, their benefit being an earlier harvest.

When it is cool, the soil must be rich in phosphorus — very important — so you add bone meal to the garden at planting time. Liquid seaweed (it comes in a bottle and you purchase it at any good nursery) adds trace elements which make plants more resistant to the cold. (Put the liquid seaweed in the compost pile or mix up a batch in your sprinkling can and water the plants with it.)

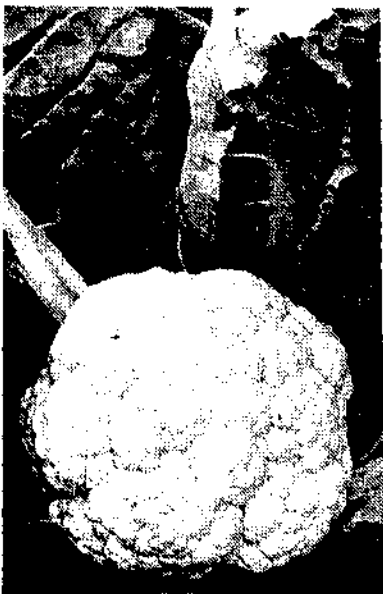

COOL CLIMATE SOIL must be light and springy, so incorporate finished compost at planting time into the soil. A light porous soil warms faster, yields sooner. You can start plants two or three weeks earlier with plant protectors. These are plastic covers supported by wire frames which cover a bed five feet long, one foot wide and one foot high. I bought a bunch of them through the Park Seed Co. catalog (address: Greenwood, S.C. 29647) three for $6.95.

Planting where the growing season is short or cool means you have to buy vegetable varieties that mature early. A surprise for the experienced northern gardener is the number of warm weather vegetables now on the market such as watermelon and cantaloupe which have been adapted for northern conditions. Consider planting loosehead lettuce (example Burpee's Oak Leaf — 40 days to harvest) instead of crisp-head lettuce (Burpee's Great Lakes — 90 days to harvest) or early cauliflower (Stokes Extra Early Snowball — 50 days) instead of a late variety (Stokes Igloo — 70 days).

If you want to plant the vegetables that take forever to mature, start seed indoors about six weeks before planting time, or buy flats of seedlings already vigorously started. Some varieties of Brussel sprouts, for example, take as long as three months to mature, savoy cabbage 80 days, celery 130 days, honeydew melon 110 days, Hubbard squash, 115 days.

Potting shed

by Mary B. Good

HERE'S A CAULIFLOWER that resists cold weather, matures early. Extra Early Snowball Cauliflower from Stokes Seed Co. adapts to a wide range of soil conditions, including muck, clay and sand. Plant June 1 and you'll harvest about the middle of July.

FROM THE VOLUME of my mail, it seems that many people are going to save money growing their own vegetables this year for the very first time. This line crops up very often in the letters you write me: "I need all the help I can get!"

To give you this help, I'm in the process of preparing another new booklet on growing vegetables that gives special planting tips on each of the commonly grown vegetables and how to ward off insect attacks organically for each specific plant. In addition, months of research have gone into yet another brochure on companion planting, which will also give a detailed diagram of laying out the plot in such a way that it wards off bugs. Both pieces of information, along with my 1974 revised bug booklet, "The Housewife's Guide for Fighting Garden Pests," will be back from the printers and available in plenty of time for opening day of planting. (More details later.)

In addition, I will be in the Chicago area from June 10 to July 1 and available then for speaking engagements on organic vegetable growing and bug fighting, edible wild plants, insect-eating plants, terrarium and bottle garden-making workshops and mushrooms. If you would like to arrange a program for your club or organization, write to me now at Lake Content, St. Germain, Wis. 54558, and reserve a date.

Resurgence of untreated fabrics requires attention to laundering

A return to the style of bygone eras, including the Great Gatsby look, 1932 roadster dress and Panama (Superfly) hats, are all part of the predicted fall fashion scene.

Besides a revival of fashions of yesterday, a return to the good old days will, to some degree, signal a resurgence of the "natural" fabrics, like untreated cotton, linen, silk and wool.

A generation that grew up in the synthetic fiber age cannot remember living without easy-care permanent press garments. However, some fall fashions will likely require a return to earlier laundering techniques, according to laundry specialists at Maytag.

Untreated cottons should not be laundered with synthetics, since some cotton garments tend to shed a great deal of lint, which can be picked up by the synthetics during the wash cycle.

It is also important to sort cotton garments by color. Whites should be washed in hot water, colors in warm water and bright or dark colors in cold water. Bleach will keep white cottons white and bright.

COTTON GARMENTS should be washed on the regular cycle, and Maytag advises that they be dried on the regular dryer setting, or even on the damp dry setting, if it appears the garments will require extensive ironing.

Linen, which is durable, absorbent and tends to wrinkle if untreated, should be washed like cotton. On the other hand, silk usually requires drycleaning, but if it is labeled "washable," it should be treated as a delicate garment.

This fall's fashions may also signal a re-emergence of wool. The manufacturer's care label on the wool garment should be checked for specific instruction. The label may indicate it should be drycleaned, machine washed and dried, or hand washed.

Woolens that can be machine washed and dried have been given a special finish by the manufacturer that protects them from shrinking. Some woolens are blended with nylon to give strength and stability. These woolens ought to be washed three to eight minutes on the gentle or delicate cycle. They should be removed from the dryer when slightly damp.

WOOLENS LABELED "handwash" indicate the garment should be laundered "as if" it is being hand washed. The hand wash cycle on an automatic washer may be labeled as "gentle" or "delicate." Some such cycles slow the agitation speed by about one-third of the speed. Others use a new concept which alternates short periods of agitation with longer periods of soak. The alternation agitation-soak cycle is automatic on some new washers and it can be done manually on older models by letting the washer agitate for one minute, then shutting off the washer for three to four minutes; then repeating. Hand washable woolens should be blocked to shape on a flat surface and allowed to air dry.

Whichever method of accomplishing a "hand wash" cycle is used, plenty of water should be used. Water is a cushioning agent. When a full tub of water is used for a small load of delicates, the water circulates gently and freely around the clothes.

FOR THOSE looking for the "natural" look this fall without the bother of the natural fibers, synthetics that look like natural fabrics, but require little care, will, of course, still be in the forefront.

If the trim or lining of these easy-care garments does not alter the care procedures, they should be laundered like permanent press garments. They should be washed in warm water on a permanent press or regular cycle and tumble dried in a dryer. Overloading should be avoided as wrinkles fall out of clothes more easily when they have plenty of room to circulate in the washer and to tumble in the dryer.

Speed kills

In fatal auto accidents, the principal driving error is speed, says the National Safety Council. This includes "speed too fast for conditions."

In injury and total auto accidents the most commonly reported driver error is "failure to yield the right of way." (UPI).

FUNDING PEDIATRIC intensive care unit is the goal of Holy Family Hospital Auxiliary. Volunteers Mrs. William Sommers, Mount Prospect, and Mrs. Francis Kest, Arlington Heights, are among those to be honored at the auxiliary's spring fashion luncheon next Wednesday at Allgauer's Fireside. Reservations, $7.50, can be made at 724-2473.

Fatigue blamed

Most accidents happen at midmorning and midafternoon. Many of these can be blamed on fatigue. That's why a University of Illinois safety specialist recommends the relaxation of a "coffeebreak." Excessive noise leads to fatigue and hence helps cause accidents, says the expert, Ordie L. Hogsett, in an article in the Journal of the American Water Works Association. Anger also makes people more accident prone. Hogsett says it reduces vision, perception and judgment. (UPI)

Saturday Bread Baking

There are two basic types of bread bakers. Those who make the most homemade bread are the women who never stopped baking. Every Saturday they make a batch of bread to last the week. Bread for school lunch boxes, for husband's lunch pails, for breakfast toast and the family dinner table. Making good bread, for them is simply standard procedure.

The other type of bread baker is the adventurer — the gal who makes bread once or twice a month for the fun of doing it. Often it's a new recipe for a pretty coffee cake, a fancy holiday bread with a foreign flavor or an unusual bread using different grains. It is from this group that new converts to bread baking come. And the ranks are growing daily with concern over increased costs for many basic needs, with the energy crisis keeping more folks home, with a whole new interest in the craft — the art, if you will — of making bread.

Following you'll find a group of recipes to please each type of bread baker. A plain white bread with a recipe that makes six big loaves. Some to eat right away, the rest to freeze and use as needed. Homemade breads will stay fresh and moist if tightly wrapped in aluminum foil, plastic wrap or an air-tight plastic bag. Seal well and place in bread box or cool, dry place.

The next recipe is a plain roll dough, called Versa-Dough, that makes Hamburger Buns, Cloverleaf Rolls or any other shape you choose, as well as delicious, caramelly Butterscotch Pecan Buns.

And finally a recipe for Honey Nut Rye that will be especially appealing to the health faddists in your family. It's chock full of such goodies as honey, molasses, yeast, almonds, sunflower nuts, sesame and caraway seeds, wheat germ, white and rye flour.

Bread justly earns its place on our tables. Bread and cereals form one of the basic food groups that everybody should eat every day to stay healthy. Enriched breads and cereals give us carbohydrates for energy; protein for growth and repair of body tissues; iron to help build rich red blood cells; thiamin (Vitamin B1) for normal appetite and digestion, a healthy nervous system and to help change sugar and starches into energy; riboflavin (Vitamin B2) to help us use oxygen and to help keep mouth and eyes healthy; and niacin, another of the B vitamins, is needed to help us use the energy in food.

VERSA-DOUGH

- 5½ to 6½ cups unsifted flour
- ½ cup sugar
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 2 packages active dry yeast
- 1½ cups milk
- ½ cup (1 stick) margarine
- 2 eggs (at room temperature)

In a large bowl thoroughly mix 1½ cups flour, sugar, salt and undissolved active dry yeast.

Combine milk and margarine in saucepan. Heat over low heat until liquid is very warm (120-130 degrees). Margarine does not need to melt. Gradually add to dry ingredients and beat 2 minutes at medium speed of electric mixer, scraping bowl occasionally. Add eggs and 1 cup flour. Beat on high speed 2 minutes, scraping bowl occasionally. Stir in enough additional flour to make a soft dough. Turn out on lightly floured board; knead until smooth and elastic, 8 to 10 minutes. Place in greased bowl, turning to grease top. Cover; let rise in warm place, free from draft, until doubled in bulk, about 1 hour.

Punch dough down; turn out onto lightly floured board. Divide dough into 3 equal pieces then proceed according to directions for desired variation.

Recipe makes 36 Cloverleaf Rolls or 27 Butterscotch Pecan Buns or 24 Hamburger Buns.

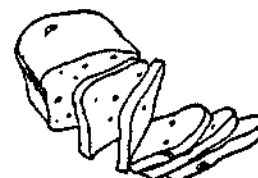

Cloverleaf Rolls: Divide one piece of dough into 12 equal pieces. Form each piece into 3 small balls; place 3 in each section of greased muffin pans, 2½x1¼ inches. Cover; let rise in warm place, free from draft, until more than doubled in bulk, about 1 hour 15 minutes. Bake at 375 degrees 12 minutes.

Butterscotch Pecan Buns: Melt ¼ cup (½ stick) margarine. Stir in ½ cup firmly packed dark brown sugar and ¼ cup dark corn syrup. Heat, stirring, until sugar is dissolved. Pour into a 9-inch square pan. Sprinkle with ¼ cup broken pecans. Roll one piece of dough into a 6x9-inch rectangle. Brush with 1 tablespoon melted margarine; then sprinkle with 3 tablespoons sugar combined with ¼ teaspoon ground cinnamon. Roll up from long end as for jelly roll. Pinch seam to seal. Cut into 9 1-inch slices. Arrange cut side up in prepared pan. Cover; let rise in warm place, free from draft, until doubled in bulk, about 1 hour. Bake at 375 degrees for 20 to 25 minutes or until done. Cool for 5 minutes. Invert rolls onto wire rack over waxed paper to cool.

Hamburger Buns: Divide one piece of dough into 8 equal pieces. Form each piece into a smooth round ball. Place on greased baking sheets about 2 inches apart; press to flatten. Brush each with slightly beaten egg white and sprinkle each with ¼ teaspoon sesame seeds. Cover; let rise in warm place, free from draft, until doubled in bulk, about 1 hour. Bake at 375 degrees 13 to 15 minutes, or until done. Remove from baking sheets and cool on wire racks.

WHITE BREAD

Makes 6 loaves

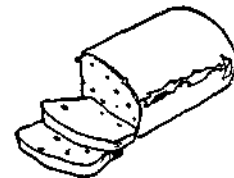

- 2 cups milk
- ¾ cup sugar
- 8 teaspoons salt
- ¾ cup (1½ sticks) margarine
- 6 cups warm water (105 - 115 degrees)
- 4 packages active dry yeast
- 24 cups unsifted flour (about)

Scald milk; stir in sugar, salt and margarine. Cool to lukewarm. Measure warm water into large warm bowl. Sprinkle in active dry yeast; stir until dissolved. Add lukewarm milk mixture and 12 cups flour; beat until smooth. Add enough additional flour to make a stiff dough. Turn out onto lightly floured board; knead until smooth and elastic, about 10 to 12 minutes. Place in greased bowl, turning to grease top. Cover; let rise in warm place, free from draft, until doubled in bulk, about 1 hour.

Punch dough down. Cover; let rest 15 minutes. Divide dough into 6 equal pieces. Roll each piece to a 14x9-inch rectangle. Shape into loaves. Place in 6 greased 9x5x3-inch loaf pans.

Cover; let as many as will fit in oven rise in warm place, free from draft, until doubled in bulk, about 1 hour. Cover remaining loaves; put in cooler place, free from draft, until doubled in bulk, about 1½ hours.

Bake at 400 degrees about 30 minutes, or until done. Remove from pans and cool on wire racks.

HONEY NUT RYE

Makes 2 loaves

- 1½ cups milk
- ½ cup corn oil
- 2 tablespoons honey
- 2 tablespoons molasses
- 2 teaspoons salt
- ½ cup warm water (105 - 115 degrees)
- 2 packages active dry yeast
- ¼ cup chopped almonds
- ¼ cup dry roasted sunflower nuts
- 2 tablespoons sesame seeds
- 2 tablespoons wheat germ
- 1 tablespoon caraway seeds
- ½ teaspoon garlic powder
- ½ teaspoon onion powder
- 2 cups unsifted rye flour
- 4 to 4½ cups unsifted white flour

Scald milk; stir in corn oil, honey, molasses and salt. Cool to lukewarm. Measure warm water into large warm bowl. Sprinkle in active dry yeast. Stir until dissolved. Add lukewarm milk mixture, almonds, sunflower nuts, sesame seeds, wheat germ, caraway seeds, garlic powder, onion powder, rye flour and 1 cup white flour. Beat until smooth.

Add enough additional flour to make a stiff dough. Turn out onto lightly floured board; knead until smooth and elastic, 8 to 10 minutes. Place in greased bowl, turning to grease top. Cover; let rise in warm place, free from draft, until doubled in bulk, about 1 hour.

Punch dough down; divide in half. Shape each piece into a loaf. Place in 2 greased 8½x4½x2½-inch loaf pans. Cover; let rise in warm place, free from draft, until doubled in bulk, about 1 hour.

Bake at 375 degrees about 35 minutes, or until done. Remove from pans and cool on wire racks.

SWEDISH MEAT BALLS are often on the menu when Mrs. Al Ulvog, Arlington Heights, entertains large groups of friends. Three-year-old Allison, watches as her mother browns the meat balls before they are baked in broth.

Mrs. Al Ulvog

She entertains with ease

by LOIS SEILER

Recipes ideal for a large group are a specialty of Joan Ulvog, Arlington Heights. She and her husband, Al, like to give parties for 20 to 25 guests, and Joan finds it no more trouble than smaller dinner parties when dishes can be made in advance.

Of Scandinavian descent, one of her favorite recipes is for Swedish Meat Balls, which was handed down from her grandmother. They are so tender and light, they seem to melt in your mouth, according to Joan.

She uses ground beef, veal and pork, seasoning it with nutmeg, ginger and lemon juice. Whipping cream adds richness to the meat mixture, which is refrigerated for several hours for the flavors to blend. It is also easier to form into balls, said Joan.

After the meat balls are browned in butter, they are baked in beef broth. Or they may be frozen and baked before serving.

Because the broth makes a tasty gravy, Joan serves mashed potatoes with this entree. For a holiday buffet she often includes another meat, plus gelatin molds and a vegetable.

Her savory baked bean casserole makes an excellent accompaniment for the Swedish Meat Balls.

"When we lived in Minneapolis, all the ladies on our street made this recipe, so I call it 'Kellogg Ave. Baked Beans,'" Joan explained. "Someone always prepared it for our block parties because it serves at least 20."

The casserole is a combination of canned kidney beans, lima beans, yellow butter beans and baked beans mixed with a tangy sauce. It needs only one hour baking time and should not be over-baked.

For dessert Joan suggests Lemon Yummy, which is rich yet light and refreshing. It has a graham cracker crust, lemon filling and a meringue topping. The dessert is frozen and need not be defrosted before serving.

Party leftovers are always enjoyed by the Ulvogs' four children, David, 8, Anne, 7, Katie, 5, and Allison, 3. Joan and Al belong to a couples gourmet group and Joan is quite active at The Lutheran Church of the Cross where she teaches nursery school and a children's arts and crafts class.

Consumer hints

Fresh or raw foods are not, necessarily, better than frozen ones. It depends on how they are handled. The vitamin C value of frozen, reconstituted orange juice provides the same as the juice squeezed from fresh oranges.

Raw cabbage stores well. It holds its vitamin C value even at room temperature, according to U.S. Department of Agriculture nutritionists.

Improves with age? Yes, sweet potatoes actually improve in storage. The vitamin A value of sweet potatoes increases during the maturing period before they reach the retail store.

If you want to add a good tang to cauliflower, try adding caraway seed, celery salt, dill, mace, or tarragon. If used sparingly, it will enhance the natural flavor of cauliflower.

Use dental floss when sewing a turkey. It won't dry out and will be easier to remove.

A good way to remove the top of a fresh pineapple. Wrap hands in a cloth or towel and twist off the top.

Clams dress up casserole

Many varieties of canned fish and shellfish provide excellent nutrition and convenience at a moderate price. Especially noteworthy are minced clams, long a favorite of connoisseurs and becoming increasingly popular with seafood fanciers everywhere.

Clams are high in valuable protein, contain an abundance of calcium and iron and have no fat. They combine readily with other foods in many main dish entrees as well as being tasty in chowders, soups, fritters, sauces, dips, salads and canapés.

Consumer-sized cans of minced clams contain 7 to 7 1/2 ounces and are economical and ready to enjoy. The wise homemaker will have a supply on her pantry shelf for easy entertaining or nourishing family fare.

An old favorite recipe from National Marine Fisheries Service, Clam 'n' Pasta Casserole, is a dinner-in-a-dish with an Italian air that cuts down on preparation time. It's equally delicious whether prepared with spaghetti, macaroni or noodles.

The clams make a savory sauce when blended with canned mushroom soup and are combined with pasta and topped with buttered crumbs, then baked briefly till hot and bubbly.

THINGS YOU MAY NOT KNOW ABOUT CONSERVING ELECTRICITY.

Do-it-yourself hints to cool food for less cost.

Refrigerators and freezers operate night and day. If they're not in proper working order, you can be wasting energy around the clock. These tips can help maintain them in top operating condition.

Door gasket test. To check the tightness of the door seal, place a piece of paper between the gasket and the cabinet. Close the door with normal force and try to pull the paper straight out. There should be a slight drag. Repeat the test at various places around the door, including the hinge side. If there are places where no drag occurs, have a service man check the gasket and the door for proper alignment.

Condensate drain. If you have a no-frost or self-defrosting refrigerator, examine the condensate drain. Make sure it's clean. A prolonged blockage will cause frost to build up on the coils and impair efficiency.

Condenser coils. If your condenser coils are exposed on the back of the unit, clean them regularly. Use a bristle brush or vacuum cleaner. Newer refrigerators have the condenser coils covered by a panel. Remove it for cleaning. Some models have coils beneath the unit. To clean, remove the front grill and vacuum.

These and other refrigeration hints are among the 101 ways to conserve electricity at home in our free booklet. To receive a copy, write Commonwealth Edison, Department AV, P.O. Box 767, Chicago, Illinois 60690.

USDA nutrition labeling for meat, poultry products

The U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA) has proposed a nutrition labeling program for meat and poultry products.

This new proposal from USDA's Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service (APHIS) would amend the regulations issued under the federal meat and poultry inspection laws to make more nutrition information available to consumers in an understandable and useful form. The new proposal is similar to regulations established by the U.S. Food and Drug Administration (FDA) in January, 1973, governing nutrition labeling of all other food products.

The labeling program stems from an increased public awareness of nutrition, according to USDA. Consumers are demanding more factual and useful information about the food products offered for sale. Thus, says USDA, nutrition labeling on meat and poultry products would give American consumers a more informative system of product labeling to provide them with the facts needed to wisely choose foods.

The new system would also provide the consumer with reliable information on the identity, quality and nutrition value of a greater variety of foods.

The primary responsibility for implementing and maintaining this proposed nutrition labeling program would fall upon USDA's Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service.

THE NEW SYSTEM would become effective Jan. 1, 1975 and would specify voluntary participation by meat and poultry processors. It would become mandatory, however, when a processor makes a nutrition claim or advertises a nutrition benefit from his product.

If a processor elects to participate, he would have to conform to regulations and its placement on the consumer package. Processors would also be required to present a quality control inspection plan for USDA approval before implementing a nutrition labeling plan.

Processors adding vitamins, minerals, or protein to products would also come under the mandatory section of the program. However, those who use enriched ingredients in making processed meat and poultry foods would be exempt from the regulations, so long as they don't call attention to this fact through label design or wording on the package.

One important aspect of USDA's proposal is the requirement that on certain foods which require cooking, the nutrition panel would also show the nutritional value of the product after being cooked. The "after cooking" information would coincide with an explanatory statement on the label telling how to prepare the product. The cooking instructions would have to represent a common method of cooking — such as frying, broiling, or baking — and might include recommended time and temperature.

Franfare

by Fran Heckart

THE USDA PROPOSAL provides for information to be titled, "Nutrition Information Per Serving." The serving size, the number of servings in the package, the calories, protein, carbohydrate and fat content per serving would also appear under this heading.

The percentage of U.S. Recommended Daily Allowances (U.S. RDA) per serving for protein, vitamin A, vitamin C, thiamine, riboflavin, niacin, calcium and iron would have to be placed immediately adjacent to the nutrition information.

All labels would be submitted to USDA's Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service for approval in advance of public use. All plants opting for the program would be required to maintain an approved in-plant quality control monitoring system.

Copies of this nutritional labeling proposal published in Federal Register Jan. 11 may be obtained from APHIS, Room 1638-S, USDA, Washington, D.C. 20250.

Any comments should be sent in duplicate to the USDA Hearing Clerk, Washington, D.C. 20250 by April 19.

Freezing hints

If using sauces or gravy — thoroughly combine the flour and fat. These foods may appear curdled while thawing but will usually recombine when stirred.

Don't try to freeze raw apples and grapes: They become soft and mushy when frozen and thawed.

Don't freeze hard cooked eggs — or even salad greens. Cooked egg white toughens and salad greens lose their crispness and become soggy during the

A different casserole with tuna, cheese, ripe olives, onions, celery and tomatoes proves attractive, appetizing and less expensive when the ingredients nestle in a bed of crepes. The crepes may be frozen to use with other recipes or for a duplicate of the Tuna Crepes Casserole, so make a double batch.

Pot roast dinner has tangy flavor

Less-expensive beef roasts turn into delicious dinner cuts when braised and simmered with special seasonings to make them more tender. In other words, the pot roast is at the top of the list as an economical and flavorful dish to serve the family or guests. Add vegetables during the last 20 minutes to avoid overcooking and loss of flavor and nutrients. This recipe calls for prune juice which gives a tart-sweet, almost wine-like flavor to meats.

TANGY POT ROAST

- 1½ cups prune juice
 - 1 medium onion, sliced
 - 1 tablespoon vinegar
 - ¾ cup soy sauce
 - 1 3-to-4 pound chuck roast
 - 6-8 new potatoes
 - 6-8 small carrots
 - 1 can sliced beets
 - 1 tablespoon cornstarch
 - Green peas, canned
 - whole onions (optional)
- Combine 1 cup prune juice, onion, vinegar and soy sauce in saucepan and bring to boil. Pour over chuck roast in dutch oven, cover and simmer on top of stove about 2½ to 3 hours or until meat is tender. Boil new potatoes and add with carrots during last 20 minutes. Heat beets separately. When pot roast is done, remove to serving platter, keep warm. Combine liquid from beets with pan juices. Dissolve cornstarch in ½ cup prune juice and add to hot mixture. Stir constantly until mixture thickens. Spoon over pot roast and serve with vegetables. (Newspaper Enterprise Assn.)

- 1 (6 ounces) can pitted ripe olives
- ¼ cup finely chopped onion
- ¼ cup finely chopped celery
- 2 tablespoons margarine or butter
- 1/3 cup sifted flour
- ¾ teaspoon salt
- 1/16 teaspoon white pepper
- 1/16 teaspoon tarragon, crumbled
- 1½ cups thin cream
- 2 teaspoons lemon juice
- 2 tablespoons ripe olive liquor
- 1 (7 ounce) can tuna, drained
- 1 tablespoon finely chopped parsley
- 3 tablespoons shredded Parmesan cheese

- 4 tomato wedges
- Bake crepes and set aside. Drain ripe olives, saving 2 tablespoons canned liquor. Heat oven to 350-degrees. Melt margarine. Add onion and celery and cook until soft but not browned. Stir in flour, salt, pepper and tarragon. Slowly stir in cream. Cook, stirring, until sauce becomes very thick. Stir in lemon juice, ripe olive canned liquor, drained ripe olives, tuna, parsley and 2 tablespoons Parmesan cheese. Arrange 4 crepes in 10x5x2-inch baking dish so bottom is covered and allowing crepes to hang over sides. Top with remaining 4 crepes to make a double layer. Spoon hot filling into casserole. Fold crepes over filling leaving center open. Sprinkle with remaining tablespoon cheese. Bake in a pre-heated oven for 20 to 25 minutes until hot. Garnish with a tomato wedge in each corner. Makes 4 servings.

CREPES

- 2 eggs
- 2/3 cup milk
- 2 tablespoons salad oil
- 2/3 cup buttermilk pancake and waffle mix

Mix together the eggs, milk, oil and pancakes and waffle mix and blend until smooth. Lightly grease a 9-inch skillet. Heat over moderate heat until few drops of water dropped onto pan will jump around. Pour 3 tablespoons batter into pan, for each crepe, and rotate pan to cover bottom. Cook until lightly brown on one side. Turn and brown on other side. Makes 8 large crepes (7 to 7½ inches in diameter).

Ethnic dishes stretch American budgets

by JEANNE LESEME

Supermarkets on the lower East Side of Manhattan sell pigs' ears, feet, and tails, meatless beef marrow bones and pork skin from which the fat has been removed almost entirely.

A restaurant on the fashionable upper East Side suggests that its patrons take home ready-cooked duck and goose gizzards — for their pets.

Somewhere between 14th and 75th Streets, people have forgotten how overcrowded countries and the poor everywhere learned long ago to use even the skin, bones and limbs of meat and fowl to enrich diets that are heavily dependent on vegetable protein.

With food prices as they are and still moving out of sight, we Americans may be required increasingly to remember there are other ways to cook and eat.

It's not being suggested that everyone — or anyone — start eating pig ears, although they are a common ingredient in some really delicious West Indian stews. But ethnic and national dishes in general represent an appetizing way of stretching food budgets during this period of record high prices.

MACARONI PRODUCTS are an obvious example. Americans usually prepare them with meat or seafood sauces and, occasionally, with cheese. But in Italy they're just as likely to be served with vegetable sauces instead — zucchini, cauliflower, lentils or broccoli, for instance. One Italian Lenten sauce uses two kinds of nuts a good alternate source of protein, some raisins and grated cheese, more good protein.

Dried beans are another good example. A French cassoulet is unsweetened baked beans to which you add as much or as little meat or fowl as your budget and conscience permit. Preserved goose is a traditional ingredient, but pieces of duck, chicken, leftover smoked or fresh ham or even pork skin and — or sausages could be used instead.

Peanuts belong in the dried bean class because they're actually legumes instead of nuts. We treat them largely as snack food but African cooks use them as a protein-extender in stews and pound them into paste for rich sauces to make meat go farther.

AS FOR GIZZARDS, they may be pet food here, but by Chinese standards they're delicacies to be reserved for honored guests. Of course, the cook trims away gristle before slicing and stirfrying the meat as a special treat.

Pea soup is one of The Netherlands' national dishes, thick and rich enough to make an entire meal. There are as many different recipes for it as there are Dutch families, some of whom use pigs' feet to enrich the soup. But it's not uncommon to find half a pound of ham or frankfurters as the only meat ingredient.

In the Middle East, chick peas, lentils and other dried legumes are widely used in salads and stews that contain little or no meat.

Rice and corn meal also are international budget stretchers. Paella is the Spanish casserole that uses rice with bits of meat, fowl and — or seafood. America's jambalaya, Spanish rice and hoppin' john are variations on that theme, with the latter two generally meatless.

Tamales and tamale pie make a little ground or chopped meat or poultry into many servings with a corn meal crust or coating. In Italy, the same basic grain product is used for gnocchi, or dumplings, and polenta, or corn meal mush. Both usually contain grated cheese or are served with it.

Curried Shrimp with Hot Marmalade Sauce

This modern gourmet dish utilizes plentiful shrimp

Shrimp, either fresh or frozen, are always a treat, especially in inland areas where the product must arrive by air or other transportation. The National Marine Fisheries Service reports that shrimp from the Gulf are in very good supply, especially the convenient ones that are ready to use, breaded, frozen and packed for preparation ease. Some of the companies who prepare these products are overstocked, and expected to market shrimp at reasonable prices, according to the Service.

Curried Shrimp with Hot Marmalade Soy Dip is an old-fashioned recipe with an up-to-date gourmet flair. The shrimp are broiled with a savory butter that has a hint of curry to create an aromatic air and an exotic taste. Complement the hot, crispy shrimp with a tangy dip that is a combination of marmalade, lemon juice, soy sauce, garlic, and a dash of ginger.

CURRIED SHRIMP WITH HOT MARMALADE SOY DIP

2 packages (10 ounces each) frozen breaded shrimp
1/2 cup butter or margarine
1 teaspoon curry powder
Hot Marmalade Soy Dip
Cream together the butter or margarine and curry powder. Spread curry butter over both sides of frozen shrimp. Arrange on shallow baking pan. Broil about 3 inches from heat, for 8 to 10 minutes or until hot and browned, turning once. Serve with Hot Marmalade Soy Dip. Makes 6 servings.

Hot Marmalade Soy Dip
1/3 cup orange marmalade
1/4 cup lemon juice
1/4 cup soy sauce
1 clove garlic, minced
Dash ginger
1 teaspoon cornstarch
Combine ingredients; mix well. Cook, stirring constantly, until clear and thickened. Serve hot with shrimp. Makes about 3/4 cup of dip.

Homemade gumbo chases the chill

Homemade chicken gumbo is delectable, hearty, and a nice way to take the chill out of blustery March.

Start with leftover chicken or buy it just for the occasion. Most ready-to-cook poultry is available as parts and in whole, halved, and quartered form. So just buy the right amount for your needs. Mature chickens are preferred for rich stews and casserole dishes because they are more flavorful than young chickens. However, broiler or fryer chickens may also be simmered, steamed, or braised for use in creamed dishes, stews, soups, or casseroles.

If you are using leftovers for your gumbo, remember that poultry is perishable. Leftover cooked poultry, broth, stuffing, and gravy should be separated, covered, and refrigerated. They should be used within one or two days. For longer storage, chicken leftovers should be frozen.

CHICKEN GUMBO

- 1/2 cup canned tomatoes
- 1/2 cup celery, thinly sliced
- 1/2 green pepper, thinly sliced
- 1/2 cup onion, thinly sliced
- 1/2 tablespoon parsley, finely chopped
- 4 chicken bouillon cubes
- 4 cups chicken broth
- 2 cups chicken, cooked and diced
- 1 10-oz. package okra
- 1/2 cup cooked rice
- 1/2 cup cooked corn

Add tomatoes, celery, green pepper, onion, parsley and bouillon cubes to chicken broth. Simmer 24 minutes or until vegetables are tender. Add chicken and okra and cook 6 minutes longer. Add rice and corn. Heat and serve. Makes 6 servings, 1 cup each.

Peanut burgers a taste surprise

Got the cooking and eating blahs? Try something new in the sandwich filler line, such as a Peanut Frankfurter. This is a combination of high-protein ingredients molded into a surprisingly tasty meat roll. Peanut butter, ground chuck, egg and bacon make up this winning combination. Serve with a favorite soup and fruit for dessert.

PEANUT FRANKBURGERS

- 1 pound ground chuck
 - 1 small onion, chopped
 - 1/2 cup peanut butter
 - 1/2 cup chili sauce
 - 1 egg
 - 3 slices bread, crumbled
 - 12 slices bacon
 - 6 frankfurter buns, toasted
 - Sliced dill pickles or pickle relish
- Mix chuck, onion, peanut butter, chili sauce, egg and bread. Shape mixture into 6 frankfurter shaped rolls of meat. Wrap each roll in 2 slices of bacon. Place rolls under a broiler and broil until bacon is crisp, turning rolls to brown on all sides. Place in toasted frankfurter buns and top with dill pickles or relish. Makes 6 servings.

Bacon, eggs and oysters in recipe from Hangtown

The recipe called Hangtown Fried Oysters is not only an interesting breakfast, brunch or late supper dish; the story of the name and how the dish was first prepared is even more fascinating.

The small town of Placerville, Calif., now the county seat of El Dorado county, is located in the Sierra foothills quite near to the location where gold was first discovered at Sutter's Mill.

Placerville became a boom town overnight and the only close-by location to the mining country for enforcing law and order. Enforcement was simple. A Vigilante Committee merely would round up the suspected individual, bring him to the town square in Placerville and hang him. Thereby the name "Hangtown" was adopted and even today Placerville is still referred to as Hangtown.

During the height of the gold mining in the Sierra foothills, a miner who had been up in the back country for months, rode into Hangtown straight to the largest restaurant and proclaimed himself in loud terms to be starving. He wanted a big platter of eggs, bacon and oysters.

When the cook told him that eggs were $5 each, oysters worth their weight in gold and the same for bacon, the miner shouted he didn't care how much they cost, he had gold dust to pay and he wanted a big platter full.

THE COOK, taking him literally, fried all of the ingredients at one time. When he served the miner he was so hungry he didn't argue even though he had expected three individual servings of bacon, eggs and oysters.

Nevertheless, the combination was so good that soon everybody who could afford it was eating this dish and Hangtown Fried Oysters became famous.

Alan M. Hallene of Moline, Ill., who supplied the foregoing story, says the original recipe, as developed is as follows:

In a skillet fry 8 slices of bacon until crisp. Drain on paper towels. Beat 5 eggs with 2 tablespoons water, 1/4 teaspoon salt and a dash of pepper. Drain a dozen small raw oysters. Dip them in the beaten egg mixture then roll in bread crumbs (you'll need 1/2 cup for the dish). Quickly brown the oysters in 1/4 cup hot bacon fat, turning once.

Top oysters with bacon, pour the rest of the egg mixture over all. Cook without stirring until firm and slightly browned on the bottom. Turn out onto a hot platter and serve at once to 4.

Before getting the official recipe, Hallene says he made his own version which really amounts to a crisp bacon and fried oyster omelet.

"I precooked the bacon and slightly precooked the oysters, cutting them into smaller pieces. I then prepared the omelet in normal fashion and used the bacon slices and oysters as filling. Thus, Hangtown Oysters Omelet ala Hallene was conceived."

Important vitamin

Don't lose it before you use it! Vitamin C — or its less popular term, ascorbic acid, long recognized as an important nutrient, is also one of the most sensitive to destruction when the commodity is subjected to adverse handling and storage conditions according to the Agricultural Research Service at the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

Plant tissues contain oxidase systems that are capable of oxidizing ascorbic acid. Unfavorable conditions involving high or low (nonfreezing but chilling) temperatures, physical damage and wilting will produce stress conditions in the tissues. This accelerates the oxidation of ascorbic acid.

Leafy vegetables usually keep best when stored just above their freezing temperatures — which also is the most effective way to maintain the vitamin C content in vegetables. Kale — which will easily — loses its ascorbic acid at relatively high (above 50 degrees) temperatures. Spinach, turnip greens, and collards do, too. Cabbage loses ascorbic acid more slowly — the reasons for this have not been determined. Low temperatures are not the answer to all fruits and vegetables, in fact, some are injured at temperatures well above their freezing temperatures. "Chill susceptible" items might be sweet potatoes, cucumbers, squash, tomatoes, bananas, and some others.

Gas on Sundays? Nixon may have to man the pumps

A Herald staff report
Few gasoline dealers in the Northwest suburbs plan to return to a seven-day-a-week operation as indicated in a spot check of local dealers. This despite President Nixon's announcement Tuesday that he's withdrawing the request for voluntary Sunday closings by dealers. The request for Sunday closings had been effective since last Nov. 25.
A sampling of 37 dealers turned up the following: 21 do not plan to open their stations on Sunday. 13 said

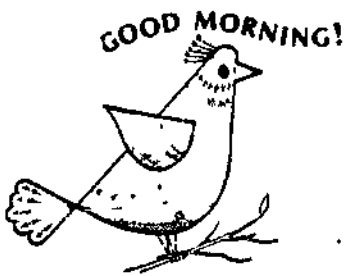

"maybe" they will do so, and 3 said they will open their station Sundays.
The American Automobile Assn. said 17 per cent of the nation's service stations were open last Sunday, compared with 11 per cent in January and 12 per cent in February.
A resounding "no" to questions about Sunday sales is indicated in these comments from Northwest suburban dealers:
• John Molick of Molick's Standard Service in Des Plaines: "No. I found out what it's like to be home with my wife and family after 12 years in this business, and I like it."

• At Frank's Gas for Less in Des Plaines, a spokesman said "Ask Nixon where do I get the gas? If I could get more gas, I would be glad to stay open on Sunday to accommodate my customers."
• "The hell with what the President says. What does he know? He flies," said an attendant at John's Super Shell in Palatine.
• "I'm taking advantage of a good thing," said an attendant at Al's Enco in Rolling Meadows. Taking Sunday off is like getting away from "a big headache," he said.

• Jim Weber, day manager at Walden Mobil station in Schaumburg said "No we're not. Sunday is a bad day and we feel we have a day off coming, too."
• At the Arlington Heights Cigo station, 1001 S. Arlington Heights Rd., a spokesman said he doesn't have enough gas to open Sundays.
• "Hell no, I won't open," said Jack

Parker, operator of Arlington Park Arco in Arlington Heights. "People who need gas for Sundays can get it Saturday night or during the day."
• "When the banks are open Sundays then I'll open on Sundays," said Jack Berndt at Jack's Marathon station in Prospect Heights. He's been closed for a year on Sundays.
AMONG THE "maybe" responses are the following comments:
• "We still don't know yet because the allocation isn't high enough," said

Harry Howland, owner of the South Point Shell station in Wheeling.
• "I don't know anything about it. The company informs me what to do and I do it," said Elmer Waskosky of Pay Less Stations in Wheeling.
• At the Montgomery Ward station in Mount Prospect, assistant manager Joe Urbansus said, "I don't know yet. We haven't gotten anything from our corporate office yet."

Bill's opponents among leading candidates

5 already in running for suburb RTA post

Jack Walsh

Robert Micher

by KURT BAER
The last ballot had not been counted before speculation sprang up Wednesday on the possibility of a Northwest suburban appointee to the governing board of the new Regional Transportation Authority.
Among the names mentioned were Arlington Heights Village Pres Jack Walsh, former Elk Grove Village Mayor Jack Pahl, Mount Prospect Mayor Robert D. Teichert and Schaumburg Mayor Robert O. Atcher.
Joseph A. Tecson, Riverside Township Republican committeeman and unsuccessful aspirant last fall for the GOP's county board slate, also is regarded as a likely candidate.

Floyd Fulle, influential Cook County commissioner who will help select two representatives from suburban Cook County to sit on the RTA board, said Wednesday he had a file of applicants "two inches thick."
"We started this thing a long time ago," Fulle said. "We'll set up some selection process. I'm not going to do this myself."
FULLE AND THREE other suburban commissioners must select two RTA board members within the next 28 days. (continued on page 2)

Lake County, village feud looms on Vernon township

by JOE FRANZ
A news analysis
Buffalo Grove and Lake County officials may be headed for a feud over new developments planned for unincorporated areas of Vernon Township.
Village officials told the Herald they are opposed to the active role of Lake County in encouraging developers to build projects under its zoning. Officials also said municipalities, like Buffalo Grove, are in a better position to control growth in the township area.
Said Village Mgr. Daniel Larson: "I personally feel the county is not adequately staffed and has not passed the proper ordinances to control growth."
RONALD COLES, chairman of the Lake County Board, however, told the Herald he disagrees with Larson. "I think Lake County is well staffed with people who are doing a good job. I think the county board is cognizant of the fact there is development going on and is facing the issues of development."
The county Coles said is better equipped to handle developments than most municipalities in the area. "I consider it a personal challenge to the manager of Buffalo Grove to point out to us specifically where he thinks Lake County is not getting the job done," Coles said.
He added that he was not aware Buffalo Grove is concerned about the development that is taking place under county zoning.
There is a growing concern among some Buffalo Grove officials that developers seem to be favoring Lake County over annexation to the village. They contend the builders are going to Lake County because its ordinances and other requirements are less restrictive than the village.

"It's less expensive for the builder to go to the county, but the people end up suffering," Larson said. "Not only that, the village also could end up suffering because of substandard housing on its borders."
According to Coles, however, Larson's charges are not true. "As far as I'm concerned the county of Lake is doing everything possible to bring good development to this area. We've been successful in getting what we want from developers."
LARSON SAID the village is better equipped to provide new developments with police protection, water and other services and utilities. In addition, a village resolution requires developers to make cash or land donations to the school and park districts. Lake County has no such ordinance.
The village also charges developers a considerably higher fee than the county to tap into the water and sewer systems. The fees, he said, are necessary to cover the capital improvements that must be made in order to handle the additional homes. "Our fee structure is designed so the builders are paying their own way," Larson said.
Coles, said the county has been responsible and has not allowed zoning of property until developers have met its requirements, as well as the needs of other local agencies such as schools.

"There are certain laws that limit us," Coles said. "After all we can't hold a gun to a developer's back and say do it. But we have been holding them back somewhat until they satisfy our needs."
THE HANK FARM development, north of Chevy Chase Country Club, is one case where a builder has gone to the county after being turned down by Buffalo Grove. The developer, Centex Homes Corp., originally planned to build the project under county zoning, but then was asked by village officials to seek annexation to Buffalo Grove.
After the project was rejected, the developer went back to its original plan for Lake County. The village turned it down because the project did not comply with ordinances and the developer refused to increase its donation to the school district.
Two other developments now in the planning stages threaten to cause additional friction between Buffalo Grove and Lake County. The Chesterfield Development Corp. plans to build its Indian Head townhouse project under county zoning, on the Bugner Farm.
The project is on Weiland Rd., south of Busch Road and currently not contiguous with the village, a requirement if the village is to annex it. However, village officials have expressed interest in the project. They have said they want to make sure it complies with village ordinances and standards because it is in its

Architect hired to plan garage

Buffalo Grove has hired Knoeppel Associates of Arlington Heights as the architect for its proposed public works garage.
The firm was one of five interviewed by a special committee which made a recommendation to the village board. Knoeppel gave the village the lowest price. The village board Monday night voted 4-2 to enter into a contract with the firm.
Under the agreement, the village will pay the architect a fee equal to 5 1/2 per cent of the total cost of the garage. The estimated cost of the facility is $500,000, so Knoeppel Associates will be paid about $28,250, providing the project goes according to plans.
If for some reason the village abandons the project while it is still in the early stages of planning, it only will have to pay the architect 15 per cent of the $28,250, or $4,237.50. However, once the project gets into the advanced stages of planning, the village will be liable for the entire amount should it decide not to build the garage.
TRUSTEE Edward Osmon, one of those in opposition to hiring the architect, said he feels the village should study the matter more closely before committing itself to a public works facility. The village, he said, does not know what type of facility it needs or whether it has the revenues to afford the garage, he said.
Village Pres. Gary Armstrong said the reason for hiring an architect is so a professional can help the village determine its needs. If the village decides it cannot afford what is proposed, Armstrong said the pain always can be revised to meet the village's budget.
Trustees Randall Rathjen, voted against the proposal because he felt the contract favored the architect and not the village. The contract is a standard form prepared by the American Institute of Architects.
KNOEPPEL ASSOCIATES will begin planning the garage, as well as evaluating possible sites in the area that would suit the village's needs.
The most likely location for the garage is still a 4.9-acre site at the southeast corner of Raupp Boulevard and Lake Cook Road. The site is being donated to the village by a developer.
Village Manager Daniel Larson has said the site is the best available location in the village for a public works facility. It will give public works facilities good access to all parts of the village and will not create a hardship on homeowners, he said.
The village board will make the ultimate decision. (Continued on Page 5)

Believe it—it's spring!

Today is the first full day of spring.
It officially began Wednesday at 7:07 p.m., when the sun made its yearly appearance over the equator, which is known as the vernal equinox.
In California Tuesday, specifically at San Juan Capistrano, the swallows returned, as they have for at least 175 years. They made the 3,000-mile flight from Argentina to the cheers of thousands of townspeople.
Local residents call it "Swallows Homecoming Day" ever since the birds began coming back to the same spot every year on the date since March 19, 1799.

Locally, area park districts and golf courses are preparing their grounds for the increase in outdoor sports and other activities.
Gardeners are preparing for better days ahead, culminated in the warm summer months when plants and flowers take full bloom.
But some people are wondering why anyone would even talk about spring.
"It's 35 degrees outside! What do you mean, spring?"

It's a business doing pleasure at Cooper Junior High

Principal Larry Weaver hawks his wares, and school gets profits

by JILL BETTNER

"Step right up! Get'er tasty ice cream bars, dee-licious chocolate milkshakes or wet yer whistle with a can of pop!"

The Barker could be Larry Weaver and the scene the cafeteria of Cooper Junior High School any day at noontime. Actually, the principal doesn't hawk the wares in the lunchroom, the students do. But Weaver is the brains behind a money-making scheme that is benefiting everybody at the Dist. 21 Buffalo Grove school.

Ice cream and other goodies are sold in most Dist. 21 lunchrooms to obtain extra revenue for activities and projects not covered by district funds. But at Cooper, the enterprising Weaver has expanded on the idea to offer students a variety of items and raise funds for many school improvements at the same time.

Cooper students are required to stay at school for the noon hour, either eating a hot lunch sold each day or bringing a bag lunch. Weaver said he felt the students should have a greater choice of menu and decided shortly after the school opened four years ago to check into selling items in the cafeteria.

MILK IS SOLD at all Dist. 21 schools, but to that Weaver added first ice cream bars, then fruit punch, and when the kids told him they'd like to have music in the lunchroom, a jukebox was installed.

When it became legal last December to sell "pop" in school cafeterias, a pop machine went in at Cooper. With revenue from the sale of the other items, the school purchased a $2,200 milkshake machine in January.

The pop and milkshake machines put the fruit punch stand out of business, Weaver said. The competition from the sale of the extra items also forced the company that supplies hot lunches recently to begin offering two entrees instead of one, he added.

Selling ice cream bars at 15 cents each, cans of pop at 15 cents, milkshakes at 30 cents and operating the jukebox at a cost of 10 cents per record, the school takes in about $500 per week. About 40 per cent is clear profit, according to Weaver.

IN THE PAST four years, "ice cream money," as Weaver calls it, has paid for carpeting the school's learning center ($3,000), the large sign in front of the school ($1,000), and landscaping ($800).

Goody revenue also provided the funds two years ago that allowed Cooper to offer vocational education way ahead of the other two junior high schools in the district. Home arts will not be offered at London and Holmes junior high schools until next fall when a district-wide program is to be implemented.

Cooper purchased almost $500 in shop materials and $400 in home economics equipment to set up vocational education classes as part of an elective program at the school.

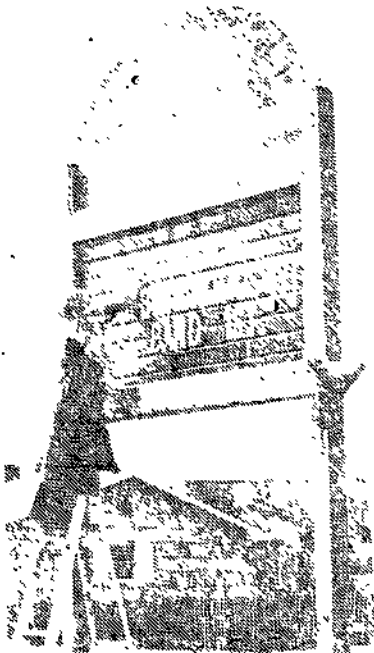

In addition, the fund has paid for trophies and plaques, is used for entrance fees for cheerleaders and the drill teams when they enter contests and to partially defray the cost of uniforms.

The fund also paid the cost of providing athletic officials at sports events and transporting Cooper teams to other schools for two years, which Weaver estimated at about $3,000.

THE "ICE CREAM ACCOUNT" also functions as a sort of emergency fund, the principal said. If, for example, a student is unable to afford the cost of participating in a field trip, his way is paid out of the fund.

Weaver said parents have not objected to selling goodies in the lunchroom and don't appear worried that their children will blow their lunch money everyday.

"It just offers kids a greater variety of things they can purchase and the profits go back into things they would normally not have," he said. "I think junior high kids are pretty well able to make decisions about what they should eat, too. It gets old to have a milkshake and a Coke everyday. I think the parents like it that they have the variety more than they fear their kids aren't eating right."

"Ice cream money" sign.

Right now, there's a balance of nearly $5,000 in the account for ice cream sales alone. Revenue from pop sales now stands at $400 and the new milkshake machine is breaking even, Weaver said.

What's next? The principal is saving to install central air conditioning in the school or maybe purchase a small van to transport athletic teams.

Ice cream sandwiches are big money-makers at Cooper.

The new $2200 milkshake machine is a popular addition to the Cooper lunchroom.

Arlington officials lean to subsidy for bus firm

by KURT BAER

A majority of the Arlington Heights Village Board apparently is ready to subsidize the Metron System Co.—at least for a limited time and in limited amounts.

Trustees, contacted by The Herald yesterday, generally said they still believe that a commuter bus service is a good idea, and should be tested a little while longer before it is dropped.

Each board member, however, said he would withhold final judgment until Metron's books are reviewed by the village administration. The financially-troubled company has asked for a $2,000 monthly operating subsidy in order to continue running in Arlington Heights.

"I find myself to be at least open-minded about a subsidy on a short-term basis, with the assumption that the State of Illinois is going to come through with a subsidy of its own," said Arlington Heights Village Pres. Jack Walsh.

METRON PRESIDENT Claude Luisada says he expects a $15,000 subsidy from the Illinois Department of Transportation. However, actual payment has been held up since the end of February.

"I think it would be very harmful to have a break in the bus service, where it is dropped and then started up again if the state comes through," Walsh said.

Within a month to six weeks, Metron should know whether the state money is going to be available, Walsh said. If it is, the funds almost certainly would be used to reimburse the village for its subsidy.

"You never feel too good about something like this. However, I think I'm inclined to go along with a subsidy, but not for too long a period," said Trustee David Griffin.

He suggested that the subsidy money might be drawn from Arlington Heights' revenue sharing — federal funds given to municipalities for use locally. "I think this is an area of expanded service where revenue sharing might really belong,"

GRIFIN SAID HE would be against a permanent operating subsidy "for a couple hundred riders, especially since some of them come from areas outside the village."

In addition to three routes between the train station and subdivisions in Arlington Heights, Metron picks up riders from Buffalo Grove and Wheeling.

"I don't think a subsidy is anything that should be unexpected," said Trustee Richard Durava.

"The Village of Arlington Heights has no reason to expect it can do what virtually no one else in the country has been able to do, that is, run a bus company that makes money."

He also pointed to the high cost of providing additional commuter parking near the train station.

"I'm not totally opposed to the idea of a subsidy, but I think we have to take a hard look at it," said Trustee Frank Palmatier, chairman of the village board's finance committee.

HE SAID THAT revenue sharing probably could be used for the subsidy, adding however that he was "not enamored" with that prospect.

"I think we have to take a good look at Mr. Luisada to see if he's the guy who should be running the bus company. I'm in favor of a bus company in town and I don't think it should be run by the village," said Trustee Ralph Clarbour.

Trustee J. Burton Thompson said that, in general, he "favored a subsidy on a limited basis."

"The service seems to have gotten off the ground and is moving in the right direction. Whether it will ever go far enough, I don't know."

James T. Ryan, another trustee, said he felt "encouraged that Metron's ridership appears to be increasing and that there appears to be some acceptance of the service by people in the village."

"WHETHER THIS IS going to carry me to voting for a village subsidy, I don't know," he said. "I am not unaware of the fact that there are very few bus companies operating anywhere without a subsidy."

Ryan said the "tremendous dollar crunch" already on the village's 1974-75 budget could make a subsidy for Metron "a difficult question of priorities."

Trustee Ted Salinsky, who already has said he supports a commuter bus service, said yesterday that "the big problem is that the village budget isn't balanced at the present time and we don't know what kind of bottomless pit a subsidy is going to be."

Salinsky said he was against "touching revenue sharing for this kind of thing."

The ninth member of the village board, Trustee Alice Harms, said she hadn't had time to think about the subsidy question.

The village board is scheduled to meet Monday night to formally consider financial aid for Metron.

Without an operating subsidy, Luisada says the service will end almost immediately.

Wheeling woman, 24, raped

A Wheeling woman, 24, was abducted from the lobby of her apartment building and taken to a deserted construction site where she was raped early Wednesday, Wheeling police said.

Police are looking for a man about six feet tall, 170 pounds, white and between age 22 and 25. He was driving a red or maroon older model Chevrolet or Ford, Police Lt. Ronald Nelson said.

The man, wearing a red-ski-type mask, grabbed the woman as she entered the lobby of her apartment building, about 12:05 a.m. police said. He reportedly held a six-inch knife to her throat and told her to cooperate.

Police said the attacker put a stocking hat over his victim's face and then led her outside to his automobile. The attacker then drove the woman to a construction site which police believe was at Tahoe Village, Buffalo Grove Road north of Hintz road.

Police said the woman was raped there and then returned to her own street. She ran to a neighbor's apartment and called police. This was about 12:35 a.m., police said.

Nelson said the name of the apartment complex was being withheld so as not to panic the residents. He said he would want the residents to form any kind of vigilante group to try and find the attacker.

'Gamma Rays' show Friday, Saturday

"The Effects of Gamma Rays on Man-in-the-Moon Marigolds" will be performed Friday and Saturday at 8 p.m. at Buffalo Grove High School.

The play, will be performed partly in the round. The audience, as well as the performers, will be on stage, and tickets will be limited to 200 each performance. Admission is $1.50.

Bigger budget cited

Village tax increase expected: Passolt

by LYNN ASINOF

Wheeling Village Mgr. George Passolt predicted an increase in residents' 1975 village taxes as a result of sizable increases expected in the 1974-75 budget currently being prepared.

Passolt said Wednesday he could not predict the size of the budget or the tax increase since the budget is still in preliminary working stages. He said he is now finishing the tabulation of personnel costs for the coming year, and will then turn to other areas of village operation.

Passolt said he hopes to have the budget to the village board by mid-April for a first review. The 1974-75 fiscal year begins May 1.

"In all honesty, I don't see how we can avoid a tax increase this year," Passolt said. "With the inflation cycle, I feel it is imperative or else cut village services."

IN PREDICTING a tax increase, Passolt said he did not think new development in the village will increase the assessed valuation enough to cover the hike in the village budget. He said that in past years the village has tried to prevent tax hikes by adjusting the budget to the anticipated rise in village property values.

Last year, the village portion of the property tax bill decreased 21 per cent from 72.2 cents per $100 assessed valuation to 57 cents per $100 assessed valuation. Passolt said this decrease was caused by a jump in the village's assessed valuation due to new developments and the township-wide reassessment of property values.

Passolt has been unable to predict this year's increase in village property values because of the recent township-wide adjustment. Passolt also said that hikes in property values become less significant as the village's total assessed valuation increases. The village's latest assessment is at $96 million.

PASSOLT DECLINED to outline the areas that will cause the budget hike, saying he has not presented the financial program to the village board. In the past, however, the largest increases have come under personnel, which accounted for about 42 per cent of last year's budget.

Employees have traditionally asked for cost-of-living adjustments in their salaries. Negotiations have not been scheduled this year between the village board and the Employee Wage and Salary Committee.

Despite the anticipated increase in village taxes, the village accounts for only a small portion of residents' total tax bill. Therefore, the village tax hike does not mean that property taxes necessarily will increase in 1975.

Passolt noted that the village's proposed building program, which includes additions to the village hall and fire station, will not be part of next year's budget. He said these expansions were part of this year's budget, and thus were included in the 1974 tax bills.

NO HEARING will be scheduled on the budget unless the village board requests them. "If it is a real biggy that will have something that will run it too high, then hearings may be necessary," he said.

Although the village board is scheduled to begin budget reviews in April, public information on the budget may not be available until sometime this summer. The village technically begins using the budget May 1, but is not required to approve a financial program until the appropriations ordinance is due at the end of July.

Kickback indictments expected

A Cook County Grand Jury is expected to return indictments against two Schaumburg village employees, a district worker and as many as 21 other suburban officials from at least 10 municipalities at 11 a.m. today before Chief Criminal Court Judge Joseph E. Power.

One village employee could face 11 charges of bribery, official misconduct and conflict of interest in connection with kickbacks from municipal chemical purchases, according to a source in the Cook County State's Atty's office.

A four-month investigation has identified numerous suburban officials alleged to have accepted merchandise certificates, cash or U. S. Savings Bonds in return for influencing chemical purchases from eight firms whose records have been subpoenaed, the source said.

SCHAUMBURG VILLAGE records indicate regular purchases of chemicals and cleaning supplies averaging about $1,000 per month from United Laboratories, Northlake, and smaller less frequent payouts to Madison Chemicals, Franklin Park, from early 1970 through mid-1973.

Park purchases from United Laboratories and Precision Laboratories over the past several years have also been confirmed by Paul Derda, director of parks and recreation.

In January, Ralph E. Wilkening, former Schaumburg Township highway commissioner, pleaded guilty to seven charges of official misconduct stemming from acceptance of Sears and Roebuck merchandise certificates sent to him by a chemical company following purchases.

Wilkening was subsequently fined $2,400 and received one year's probation on each of the charges, with the terms running concurrently.

$2,000 coin collection stolen from apartment

A $2,000 coin collection was among the items stolen during Tuesday's burglary at the Glenn A. Furth residence, 648 Lake View Dr., Wheeling police said.

Also taken were a camera and a .38-caliber gun. Police said the Furth apartment had been found open a week go, but nothing was taken at that time. The burglary occurred sometime during the day Tuesday.

Coin collectors can keep abreast of new issues and values, every Thursday in the HERALD.

Prosecution requests delay

Stavros trial set back to April 24

The first in a series of trials resulting from the indictment of six former and present Wheeling and Cook County officials has been set back one month until April 24.

James Stavros, indicted former Wheeling Township Democratic committeeman, was originally scheduled to begin his trial Monday before U.S. District Judge Hubert Will. Stavros is charged with several counts of extortion.

The U.S. Attorney's Office, however, asked that the case be rescheduled because one of the prosecuting attorneys will be out of town until mid-April.

Stavros' attorney, Joel Murray, said he would have been ready to go to trial Monday if the government had provided him with needed information on the case. He said the U.S. Attorney's Office has not given him that information as ordered by Judge Will earlier this month.

OTHER TRIALS stemming from the indictments returned Jan. 31 are being scheduled at two-week intervals. Ira Colitz, former Cook County Zoning Board member, and Nicholas Phillips, a county zoning board employee, will stand trial beginning May 6.

Phillips is charged with extorting $50,000 from Wickes Inc., and Colitz is charged with aiding in the extortion.

Wheeling Building Director William Bieber will begin the first of four trials May 20 for charges of extortion, conspiracy to commit extortion and perjury.

The other three trials have not been scheduled. Indictments followed a year-long federal grand jury investigation into alleged shakedown of Wheeling developers and businesses. One of the six indicted officials, former Wheeling trustee Michael Valenza, has pleaded guilty to conspiracy to commit extortion.

Stevenson High wrapup

Guidance program review slated

Citizens' groups and educational consultants will be used to conduct an in-depth review of math, freshman studies and guidance and counseling practices at Stevenson High School.

The evaluation was directed this week by the Stevenson High School Dist. 125 school board.

The in-depth studies were recommended by Dist. 125 Supt. Harold Baner and school board Pres. Robert Anderson following a meeting last week with a citizen's group from Lincolnshire. The group raised questions about the three areas to be considered.

Action will be taken immediately to find consultants and select a citizens' group to review the freshman studies program. The school board agreed to name 15 persons to the citizens' committee and asked other school board members and local citizens to submit names as soon as possible.

"WE NEED PEOPLE who are capable and willing to serve and who represent the entire community," Anderson said.

At the suggestion of school board member Justin Fishbein, Baner will contact the National Council of Teachers of Mathematics and the American Personnel and Guidance Association for help in reviewing and evaluating those areas.

Citizens' committees of seven persons each will be named later to work on the evaluation.

In discussion which accompanied the action Monday night, Baner briefly discussed the freshman studies program and answered questions that had been raised by the Lincolnshire group.

Earlier in the meeting, a parent expressed concern about the freshman studies program through a letter to the board. A letter praising the program, signed by 50 present freshmen, was also presented to the board.

Board to study bilingual ed

The Stevenson school board will investigate the possibility of establishing a bilingual education program for Spanish-speaking students in response to a parent request.

Mr. and Mrs. James Bade of Sylvan Lake presented a petition to the school board Monday night. The couple told the board they thought there were at least 15 high school students in the district who could take advantage of a bilingual program. The petition was signed by 50 persons.

All school districts in Illinois will be required to implement a bilingual program by 1978, Bade told the board. He said state funds are available to finance a program.

Baner and Anderson agreed to begin immediately examining the need and possibility of establishing bilingual instruction.

SAM FULGINITI, a student at Kolmer School, Dist. 21, next move. Kids in the first through sixth grades are Buffalo Grove, chews thoughtfully and considers his participating in a lunchtime chess tournament.

Double payoff in bribery scandal?

Former Hoffman Estates officials may have been paid off twice for rezoning the same parcels of land, Edward B. Stulberg revealed yesterday, testifying in the federal trial of Bernard M. Peskin in the Kaufman and Broad Homes Inc., zoning, bribery scandal.

Stulberg, K&B's former vice president for land acquisition and zoning, said yesterday Peskin told him the village officials had already collected bribes to zone the land for a retirement community.

Peskin, former attorney for K&B, is on trial before U. S. District Court Judge Frank J. McGarr on bribery, conspiracy and tax evasion charges. He was indicted Oct. 26 along with six past village officials and K&B. The village personnel pleaded guilty and McGarr sentenced them to federal prisons. K&B pleaded no contest to paying $100,000 in bribes, and was fined $50,000.

PESKIN ALLEGEDLY told Stulberg in April 1968 that Ross Cortese, owner of Rossmoor Corp., paid a bribe to obtain zoning for a Leisure World, similar to Rossmoor's west coast developments. Cortese held more than 3,000 acres, most of which was condemned for Cook County forest preserve. K&B bought the rest. While Stulberg testified he thought at the time Peskin had handled Cortese's zoning petition, he said he later learned Peskin had not. He then attributed Peskin's statement to rumor, he said.

Peskin's alleged the Cortese bribe when he told Stulberg the village officials wanted $25,000 to grant K&B high-density multiple-family zoning for 320 acres of Barrington Square, said Stulberg. The K&B bribe request was hiked to $100,000 by fall of 1968 because of public opposition to K&B's plan, Stulberg has said. Another $25,000 was sought later for a second part of Barrington Square, a 90-acre tract.

When Stulberg balked at the last request former Mayor Roy Jenkins agreed to accept a gas station site instead, Stulberg has testified.

Stulberg also revealed yesterday he had considered buying hardware at Jenkins' hardware store in Hoffman Plaza as one means of passing the bribes.

The idea of buying hardware from Jenkins and insurance from former trustee James Sloan, both of whom were among those pleading guilty, was rejected because the amounts of bribe money were too large for that strategy, said Stulberg.

IN OTHER TESTIMONY, Stulberg told of two meetings he held with Jenkins outside the public forum of village board meetings. The first was in March or

April, 1968, before bribes first were discussed, said Stulberg, and took place in a back room of Jenkins' hardware store. Stulberg said he told Jenkins general plans for the project and information on K&B's background, including financial statements. The second was a lunch date at which Peskin's former law partner, Earl Deutsch, joined Stulberg and Peskin. The meeting was in about August, 1968, in a Hinsdale restaurant. Stulberg said bribes were not discussed in his presence then, but Deutsch and Peskin asked him to leave them alone for about 15 minutes and then called him back.

Stulberg also clarified the procedure chosen to pay the bribes. First, he said, $50,000 was given to Peskin, disguised as attorney fees, with half to go to the trustees and half to pay Peskin's income tax on the total. Then, said Stulberg, the remaining $75,000 due on the 320-acre parcel was to be paid as occupancy permits were issued for the project, at the rate of $100 per permit. Peskin would receive the money as attorney fees, and distribute half to the village officials, again using the other half to pay his taxes.

Stulberg said only $100,000 ever was paid to Peskin, and $50,000 of that was justifiable legal fees. Only $25,000 ever reached village officials, said Stulberg.

planning area and probably will be ultimately annexed.

LARSON SAID he thinks Lake County should cooperate with the village and allow it to inspect plans for all projects being built near Buffalo Grove's borders.

Another development planned for the Sophie Link Farm, northeast of Ill. Rte. 83 and Arlington Heights Road also may go to the county. The developer, The DeBruer Co. originally proposed annexation to Buffalo Grove, but the firm is now reportedly planning to build the project in the county.

The developer has refused to say what its plans are for the 86-acre tract.

mate decision on the location of the garage.

A PUBLIC WORKS garage is badly needed, Larson said, because vehicles stored outside deteriorate faster and are subjected to vandalism. He estimates the village loses as much as $25,000 annually because it has no facility.

In addition to sheltering vehicles, the garage will give public works employees an adequate place to repair and maintain equipment, which they currently do not have, Larson added.

He has proposed the village take out a loan for the garage and pay it back over a five-year period with federal sharing funds as they are made available to the village.

It is not known at this time when construction of the facility will begin, but some officials are hopeful it can be started by this fall.

Gas on Sundays? Nixon may have to man the pumps

A Herald staff report
Few gasoline dealers in the Northwest suburbs plan to return to a seven-day-a-week operation, as indicated in a spot check of local dealers. This, despite President Nixon's announcement Tuesday that he's withdrawing the request for voluntary Sunday closings by dealers. The request for Sunday closings had been effective since last Nov. 25.

A sampling of 37 dealers turned up the following results: 21 do not plan to open their stations on Sunday; 13 said

"maybe" they will do so, and 3 said they will open their station Sundays. The American Automobile Assn., said 17 per cent of the nation's service stations were open last Sunday, compared with 11 per cent in January and 12 per cent in February.

A resounding "no" to questions about Sunday sales is indicated in these comments from Northwest suburban dealers:

• John Molick of Molick's Standard Service in Des Plaines: "No. I found out what it's like to be home with my wife and family after 12 years in this business, and I like it."

• At Frank's Gas for Less in Des Plaines, a spokesman said "Ask Nixon, where do I get the gas? If I could get more gas, I would be glad to stay open on Sunday to accommodate my customers."

• "The hell with what the President says. What does he know? He flies," said an attendant at John's Super Shell in Palatine.

• "I'm taking advantage of a good thing," said an attendant at Al's Enco in Rolling Meadows. Taking Sunday off is like getting away from "a big headache," he said.

• Jim Weber, day manager at Walden Mobil station in Schaumburg said "No we're not. Sunday is a bad day and we feel we have a day off coming, too."

• At the Arlington Heights Citgo station, 1001 S. Arlington Heights Rd., a spokesman said he doesn't have enough gas to open Sundays.

• "Hell no, I won't open," said Jack

Parker, operator of Arlington Park Arco in Arlington Heights. "People who need gas for Sundays can get it Saturday night or during the day."

• "When the banks are open Sundays, then I'll open on Sundays," said Jack Berndt at Jack's Marathon station in Prospect Heights. He's been closed for a year on Sundays.

AMONG THE "maybe" responses are the following comments:

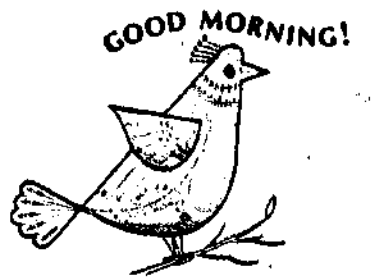

• "We still don't know yet, because the allocation isn't high enough," said

Harry Howland, owner of the South Point Shell station in Wheeling.

• "I don't know anything about it. The company informs me what to do and I do it," said Elmer Waskosky of Pay Less Stations in Wheeling.

• At the Montgomery Ward station in Mount Prospect, assistant manager Joe Urbansky said, "I don't know yet. We haven't gotten anything from our corporate office yet."

Bill's opponents among leading candidates

5 already in running for suburb RTA post

Jack Walsh

Robert Atcher

by KURT BAER
The last ballot had not been counted before speculation sprang up Wednesday on the possibility of a Northwest suburban appointee to the governing board of the new Regional Transportation Authority.

Among the names mentioned were Arlington Heights Village Pres. Jack Walsh, former Elk Grove Village Mayor Jack Pahl, Mount Prospect Mayor Robert D. Teichert and Schaumburg Mayor Robert O. Atcher.

Joseph A. Tecson, Riverside Township Republican committeeman and unsuccessful aspirant last fall for the GOP's county board slate, also is regarded as a likely candidate.

Floyd Fulle, influential Cook County commissioner who will help select two representatives from suburban Cook County to sit on the RTA board, said Wednesday he had a file of applicants "two inches thick."

"We started this thing a long time ago," Fulle said. "We'll set up some selection process. I'm not going to do this myself."

FULLE AND THREE other suburban commissioners must select two RTA board members within the next 28 days, (continued on page 2)

Furor over downtown redevelopment continues

by STEVE BROWN
The battle over objections raised by the Plan Commission and the Environmental Commission to downtown redevelopment in general and the proposed Ellinwood Street parking garage in particular continue to smolder.

Ald. Gerald Meyer (8th), in a statement read to the City Council Monday, denied any role in the comments made by the two commissions regarding the development project.

Meyer had been mentioned last week by Mayor Herbert Behrel as the person who might be coordinating the renewed objections to the redevelopment and the garage project. Meyer and several other aldermen have consistently voted against matters before the city council related to redevelopment.

"I TALKED TO Mayor Behrel last Friday and stated to him that I have not in any way influenced these commissions nor have I attempted to manipulate their opinions, nor do I have any knowledge of any other alderman's attempt to do this," he said.

Meyer also stated that he believes the various commissions in the city have the right to make independent statements "without the fear of reprisals."

Behrel has also indicated that he will not reappoint Richard Tabatt, chairman of the environmental commission. Tabatt was one of the commission who signed a report questioning the environmental impact of the redevelopment project.

While Behrel did not comment on Meyer's letter during Monday's city council meeting, he later characterized the statement as that of a "man showing his political inexperience."

"HE DOESN'T SEEM to be willing to make a decision and then live with it," Behrel added.

The mayor also repeated his intention not to reappoint Tabatt. Ald. Irene Birchfield (5th) asked Monday that both Tabatt and Mark Rooney, another commission member whose appointment expires at the end of this month, be reappointed.

Behrel said he was not ready to make any new appointments to the commission.

However, Behrel did agree to a meeting proposed by Mrs. Birchfield which would involve Tabatt.

"This doesn't mean I will change my mind, but maybe I will be able to hear his explanation of the action he took on redevelopment," Behrel said Tuesday at his regular weekly press conference.

BEHREL INDICATED that Tabatt has a right to his opinion, but he was critical of the fact that several other members of the commission were also involved in the signing what has been referred to as a "minority report" on Superblock.

"How can there be a minority report when there has not been a majority report," Behrel questioned.

In addition to the letter from Meyer, Ald. Carmen Sarlo also read a prepared statement indicating that he has opposed Superblock.

"I serve as an alderman voting on strong convictions conveyed to me by my constituency," Sarlo said. But Sarlo also said that several newspaper articles have implied that he has acted improperly.

"I have always tried to conduct myself with propriety befitting my office, if there are any charges on your part, I ask you now make these charges public before this council and public body so that I may have the opportunity to answer them," he said.

"I don't know that I have ever said you have acted improperly, but I have said that you have voted against Superblock," Behrel responded.

Board 'gums' up plans for contest

An Iroquois Junior High School student made an attempt to close the generation gap between school board and student council at the recent meeting of the board.

Student Joe Hock appeared before the board Monday night to ask permission for his school to participate in a contest sponsored by a local radio station and a sugarless gum company. Winners of the contest receive a free concert at the school.

Joe, a student council president at the school, was obviously shaky as he attempted to explain the contest to board Pres. James Kremers. Dressed in sports shirt and slacks, the youngster shifted nervously from foot-to-foot in making his request, rolling a piece of paper slowly in his hand.

JOE SAID THE idea for entering the contest came up during a class discussion in his social studies class. The idea was approved by students at a student council meeting and the request made to principal Robert Klein.

Klein denied the request, saying board policy prohibited schools from participating in commercial ventures. The contest requires students to collect gum wrappers or draw up facsimiles. The school collecting the most wrappers per capita wins the concert.

Kremers, apparently not a rock radio fan, eventually garnered the details of the contest from Joe. He told the youngster the board would read over the contest rules and make a decision at the April 1 board meeting.

JOE MET Tuesday with Supt. Eric Sahlborg and Klein, who convinced the student council president the contest violates district policy. The administrators did agree to a compromise — they'll attempt to get rock disc jockey Larry Lu-jack, the emcee of the concert, to come out to the school to meet with students.

Klein said students weren't happy about the administration's decision.

"Under the contest rules, the school would be acting as a collection agency — that's promoting the gum in a sense," he said. "If we commercialize sugarless gum this week, next week in comes Hershey's with another contest."

Movies at school

On parent-teacher conference day, March 25, the PTA of Ballard School, will show movies for children of all ages in the school's gym at 9:30 a.m. and 1 p.m. The movie, "Savage Sam," lasts about two hours. A 50 cent donation is requested to help pay the cost of the film. For information contact Jerri Gootnick at 299-0249.

'Guys and Dolls' opens tonight

The hit Broadway musical "Guys and Dolls" will open tonight at Maine West High School. Performances will also be given Friday and Saturday nights, all at 8 o'clock in the West auditorium, Oakton Street and Wolf Road.

The Herald incorrectly reported the dates for the show in Wednesday's edition.

Believe it—it's spring!

Today is the first full day of spring.

It officially began Wednesday at 7:07 p.m., when the sun made its yearly appearance over the equator, which is known as the vernal equinox.

In California Tuesday, specifically at San Juan Capistrano, the swallows returned, as they have for at least 175 years. They made the 3,000-mile flight from Argentina to the cheers of thousands of townspeople.

Local residents call it "Swallows Homecoming Day" ever since the birds began coming back to the same spot every year on the date since March 18, 1798.

Locally, area park districts and golf courses are preparing their grounds for the increase in outdoor sports and other activities.

Gardeners are preparing for better days ahead, culminated in the warm summer months when plants and flowers take full bloom.

But some people are wondering why anyone would even talk about spring.

"It's 35 degrees outside! What do you mean, spring?"

Education can be 'camp,' students are finding out

by LUISA GINETTI

Education doesn't always happen within the confines of a school classroom and 160 eighth graders at River Trails Junior High School in Mount Prospect are about to find this out first hand.

The students are a core group chosen to take part in a special outdoor education project. The project, a four-day field trip to George Williams camp in Williams Bay Wis., is designed to give students an opportunity to apply what they have learned in class to the realities of the outdoor world.

The trip is the idea of five teachers who have been instructing the core group since September. George Chase, social studies teacher and spokesman for the group, said the idea for the trip was an outgrowth of the group's first outdoor field trip this fall.

"The students will be directly exposed to reality and we can make the environment part of the classroom," Chase said.

THE STUDENTS, half the eighth grade class selected at random, will begin a special study program next month which will culminate in the May trip. The core teachers, Chase, Marlon Jezowski, Bud Lewis, Lois Muse and Chris Foutris, are each preparing special programs in their courses for the fourth quarter study which begins next month.

Chase said his social studies program will include learning how to map, making pollution studies and studying general camping and safety tips.

In science Lewis will prepare students to conduct ecological studies designed to compare water and air pollution conditions of Illinois and Wisconsin. Students will also be learning how to identify animal tracks and plant life.

Math work will be integrated into the camp study in such projects as measuring stream depth and taking temperature readings using the metric system.

IN LANGUAGE arts Mrs. Muse said students will be asked to write essays based on their observations at the camp site. Even students taking French will be putting their knowledge to use. They will be required to converse in French not only during camp outings but during meals.

By coordinating all these class activities, the teachers said the students will learn that all their studies are related and can be applied in many ways.

In addition to the five core teachers other teachers making the trip will include the physical education teacher, the shop teacher, the art and science consultants and the school's assistant principal.

TEACHERS ARE not alone in planning for the trip. A group of 10 students selected by the core staff is helping to plan recreational activities for the trip.

Suggested recreational activities include swimming and boating (weather permitting), tennis, softball and a talent show.

Teachers are very enthusiastic about the facilities at the camp. Graduate students from George Williams College will be available to work with the group. The Yerkes Observatory is also nearby and students will make a special trip to see the astronomy facility.

STUDENTS ARE also looking forward to the outing. "At first they looked at it as a chance to have fun but now they're also looking forward to doing some of the things they've been learning in class once they get there," Chase said.

The core staff is hopeful the project will prove successful enough to include all eighth graders in the field trip program next year. If the program is instituted as an all-eighth grade program next year, two trips would probably be scheduled to accommodate all the students.

All 160 positions have been filled for the trip, which will cost each student $28, including room and board. The district will pick up the tab for transportation, equipment and other costs which have been estimated at $2,060.

Burglars take $250 watch, $50 cash

Burglars entered the apartment of a Des Plaines woman and stole a watch worth $200 and $50 in cash, said police.

According to reports, Ella Webster, 725 Dempster St. was returning home from work Tuesday evening and noticed someone went through her bedroom dresser and stole the cash and watch.

Police said there were no signs of force used to open the door of the apartment or the lobby door of the apartment.

Super Saturday set March 30 at Maine West

A "Super Saturday" with activities for all ages will be held March 30 from noon to 11 p.m. at Maine West High School, 1755 S. Wolf Rd. "Super Saturday" is sponsored by the Maine West Student Council and the Presidents' Council.

From noon until 5 p.m. a carnival will be held in the C-wing gymnasium. Tickets will be 10 and 20 cents. Clowns will be in attendance, and balloons will be plentiful. The Food Occupations Club will sell refreshments.

From 4 p.m. until 7 p.m. the Brotherhood Society will sponsor a spaghetti dinner in the student cafeteria. Tickets may be purchased at the door for $1.50 for adults and $1 for children under 12.

The proceeds from the dinner will be used to sponsor concerts and programs during the year at the school.

From 7 p.m. to 9 p.m. roller skating will be the C-wing gymnasium activity. Skates may be rented from German Club members or students may bring their own skates. The roller skating is sponsored by the German Club and admission is twenty cents. This activity is open to high school students only.

Gemini students honored

Forty students from Gemini Junior High School have been named winners in the regional contest of the 47th Annual National Scholastic Art Awards program.

Four who received blue ribbons will enter national competition. These are seventh graders Mark Rhodes, Carol Wisniewski and Dorothy Vitro and eighth grader Scott Griffin. Rhodes went on to win eligibility for the Hallmark honor prize, a $100 award given to the best piece of art submitted in each region.

Sixteen of Gemini's 40 place winners in the contest received "Gold Keys." These students are: Danielle Bobene, Julie DeSalvo, Carolyn Donatelli, Cynthia Glassman, Jill Grant, Scott Girrin, Jean Jakowski, Rob Kaye, Viki Macchione, Tom Malamos, Mark Rhodes, Lisa Shaffer, Dorothy Vitro, Cara Weissman, and Carol Wisniewski.

The rest of the students who placed in the contest include Mark Augustyn, Janice Bender, Chris Brown, Tom Bruzan, Paula Christensen (2 places), Margaret Dix, Susan Dunn, Laurie Levenson, Pat McGrath, Anita Platzner, Carrie Talbert, and Peggy Walsh. Also Nancy Andjich, Chris Kondiles, Joe Lennart, Julie Main, Yvonne Metz, Gordon Shore, Elaine Sikorski, Julie Tattelman, Joanne Wagner, Michael Ziebell, and Ted Broten.

Other Gemini students received merit awards. These students are Dawn Femmel, Lorraine Obrish, Dani Cawas, Lori Sterling and Barbara Olson.

Bus panel to meet on bids

District 63's bus committee will hold a meeting at 3:30 p.m. on March 25 at Ballard School, 8320 Ballard Rd., to open bids on bus service for the next three school years, beginning in September 1974.

According to James E. Bowen, Dist. 63 business manager, the committee has sent out specifications to eight bus companies in the area.

The bus committee consists of parents only. Board member Milton Langer and administrative representatives James Bowen and Mrs. Pat Kolvek, the district's assistant business manager, attend committee meetings as liaisons between the board of education and administration, respectively.

Maine students in tourney

The Illinois Speech and Theatre Assn. recently sponsored a speech tournament in individual speaking events at Pekin High School in Pekin, Ill. Twelve speaking events were offered at the tournament and only one trophy was presented for each event. Mary Jo Zalabak, a Maine West High School senior, won one of the 12 first place trophies in special occasion speaking.

Bob Limbrick, also a Maine West senior, received an honorable mention for his second place win in original comedy. Other participants from Maine West were Steve Pelinski, Brad Serani, Scott Peckenpaugh, Yvonne Monreal and Roy Chapman.

Dist. 26 wrapup

Summer school signup May 8-11

Registration for summer school in Dist. 26 will be May 8 through May 11. The registration timetable as well as the summer school calendar were approved by the school board Tuesday.

Summer school classes will begin June 24 and run through July 30 with no classes held July 4 and 5.

Classes will be held at Bond School and River Trails Junior High. Program offerings will depend on registration but a tentative list of classes includes Scrambled Letters and Sounds; Lights, Camera, Action; Stop the Presses, Mini Courses in Arts and Crafts; Ecological Discoveries; and Get Ready for First Grade.

Libraries stay open

The board overruled an administration recommendation to limit the times for summer library hours. Instead, board members said all six school libraries should remain open throughout the summer schedule which runs from June 25 through Aug. 1.

The administration had suggested limiting the days and hours for opening school libraries in the summer because of declining use. The board thought, however, that school facilities exist for the public's use and should therefore not be limited in any way.

Seek computer bids

The board voted to seek bids for computer services for next year. The bids are necessary because Dist. 26 has opted not to participate in the Northwest Educational Cooperative's computer service, the agency that has provided the district computer service for the past several years.

Only five of eight school districts have decided to remain in the NEC data processing cooperative. If one of the five decides to leave the program by April 1, the computer service will be disbanded.

Sabbatical leaves OKd

The board approved two requests for sabbatical leaves for the 1974-75 school year. The approvals mark the first time in the district's history that sabbatical leaves have been requested and granted.

LeRoy Schenke will be attending the University of Western Colorado to obtain a Master's degree in industrial arts. Schenke has taught industrial arts at River Trails Junior High School for six years.

Jeanette Bucher, kindergarten teacher at Park View School for the past six years, will also be doing graduate work next year.

Both teachers will return to the district at the end of their leaves.

PTA notes

Friendship Junior High PTO will hold its general meeting Tuesday, March 26, at 8 p.m. in the school auditorium. Election of officers for the 1974-75 school year will be held at this meeting.

Speaker will be Ald Richard Ward (8th). He will speak on the current status of the Metropolitan Sanitary District plant, the future stability of High School Dist. 214 boundaries and the possible annexation of the Waycinden area. Also to be discussed are airport noise abatement and expansion plans; Des Plaines downtown renewal which includes city hall and Super Block; and the Mount Prospect border dispute, its history and resolution.

A question and answer period will follow. The public is invited.

A bake sale will be held in conjunction with this meeting. Refreshments will be served by Angie Concialdi and Irene Hayer, hospitality chairmen.

Hotline offering drug workshops

"One of the dangers of buying illegal drugs on the street is not knowing their real content. This has resulted in many overdoses when buying 'good stuff' from a friend," according to Al Miller, director of the Chicago chapter of Do It Now Foundation in the first of a series of training workshops sponsored by Maine Township Hotline.

The public is invited to attend the remaining eight sessions in the next four weeks. Included will be two sessions on "active listening" presented by Dr. Eugene Stehura, psychologist and clinical coordinator of the day hospital program at Lutheran General Hospital and a session on alcoholism presented by Walter Freissinger and Virginia Payne, counselors with the Lutheran General Alcoholism Rehabilitation Center. Miss Payne also has been associated with Alcoholics Anonymous.

Pool passes may be used in two towns

An agreement is being considered that would allow swimming pool pass holders in Des Plaines and Mount Prospect to use pools in both towns, according to David Markworth, recreation superintendent for the Des Plaines Park District.

Under the tentative plan, the two park districts would honor each other's pool passes this summer. "It's not going to cost any money," said Markworth. "It will just be an added convenience for someone from Mount Prospect visiting a friend in Des Plaines to be able to swim down here on his own pass."

The possible agreement was discussed by officials of the two park districts when the Des Plaines Park board met Tuesday night.

Des Plaines' four pools open June 15 while Mount Prospect parks operate three pools scheduled for a June 20 opening.

Des Plaines Park District pool pass rates are: $20 for a family; $8 for children up to high school age; $10 for adults and $15 for a husband and wife.

Mount Prospect passes cost $15 for a family of three while single adult passes are $7.50 and $10 for adults.

Markworth said officials of the two park districts tentatively plan further discussion of the agreement.

Behrel breaks council deadlock

Day-care center plan OKd

After several months of deliberation, the Des Plaines City Council gave preliminary approval to a controversial ordinance which would allow day-care centers in residential areas.

The council voted 9 to 8 in favor of the provision, which directed the city attorney to draw up the ordinance for inclusion in the city code.

Mayor Herbert Behrel voted in favor of the issue, breaking a deadlock.

A number of aldermen had commented in recent weeks that they were opposed to allowing any type of business in a residential area fearing this would establish a precedent for other commercial operations.

ALD. JOSEPH SZABO (1st) who is a member of the municipal development committee which recommended approval of the measure, said he did not sign the committee report because he believed it "would penalize residential areas."

The new provision will require residential day care center operators to appear before the zoning board of appeals and seek special use zoning to operate their facility.

Much of the controversy surrounding the proposed ordinance resulted from establishment of the Angel Town-Baby Town.

Some neighbors of the center complained of the operation in the residential neighborhood.

IN OTHER ACTION, the council also gave preliminary authorization to Mayor Herbert Behrel to sign the 1974 application for state motor fuel tax funds, which will be used to repair and improve streets throughout the city.

City Engineer Robert Bowen said the 1974 program will probably include improvements costing about $304,000.

Bowen also announced that the city would continue its 50-50 sidewalk repair program again this year. He explained the annual program would allow homeowners to request repair of walks in front of their homes with the city paying half of the cost.

BOWEN SAID THAT complete details would be announced later, but he estimated that the city would budget about $20,000 as its share of the sidewalk repair program this year.

In another zoning related matter, the council gave preliminary approval for the creation of an institutional zoning district.

The district will set special zoning standards for non-commercial/non-residential areas and was primarily designed to establish regulations for the construction of a mausoleum at the All Saints Cemetery on River Road in Des Plaines.

The city council had defeated a request for the mausoleum last year because several aldermen objected to the 75-foot height of the proposed building.

ALDERMEN VOICED concern about the approval of the mausoleum setting a bad precedent for the development of property surrounding the cemetery.

The new institutional provision would not establish a precedent for any other commercial or residential construction in the area.

Ald. Gerald Meyer (6th) announced that Des Plaines will begin a five week city-wide clean-up campaign beginning April 8. Meyer said for a five-week period the city will haul large discarded items away from residential areas. He indicated that complete details of the program, which will operate in conjunction with the city's regular garbage collection service, will be announced later.

Firemen to sponsor boys' baseball teams

The Des Plaines Firemen's Assn. will sponsor three park district boys' baseball teams again this year.

The association uses funds raised from the annual firemen's dance to sponsor boys' baseball and a variety of other community activities.

Also to be sponsored this year will be four girls' bowling leagues and a park district women's softball team.

According to Lt. Charles Provenzano, the association has also been active in providing Christmas cake and ice cream for children at local hospitals, day care centers and for senior citizens at convalescent homes.

Dist. 59 wrapup

Holmes sidewalk bid approved

The Elk Grove Township School board approved an apparent low bid for construction of a 6-foot-by-935-foot sidewalk along Meyer Road between Arlington Heights and Mount Prospect for children walking to Holmes Junior High School.

Low bidder was Barron Paving Co. of Elmwood Park which submitted a bid of $3,831.

The sidewalk will run along the road up to the parking lot of St. Cecilia Church, 2000 W. Scott Terr., Mount Prospect. The sidewalk was designed primarily for children walking to nearby Holmes.

The job had been awarded to B and B Paving Co., of Schaumburg last fall, but the company went out of business, according to Adolph Danta, buildings and grounds director for Dist. 59.

B and B's bid was estimated to be about $1,200 less, according to Danta, who cited rising costs and material shortages in the paving industry as the reason for the substantial cost increase.

Policy manual charges proposed

Two changes in the school board's policy manual were read. Action on the two changes will come at the board's next meeting April 1 at Friendship Junior High in Des Plaines.

One change deals with fees and rentals. The district has stopped charging fees for rental of textbooks and the section in the manual dealing with that has been changed accordingly.

Another change proposed would prohibit board members from accepting gifts unless of small value and widely distributed.

Music camp approved

The board approved a request from the Lively Music Parents Assn. of Lively Junior High to hold their fourth annual summer music camp.

The camp will be at Covenant Harbor campgrounds in Lake Geneva, Wis., Aug. 18 to 25.

District gains films

The Dist. 59 film library will get more than $19,000 in new 16mm sound films thanks to a state grant.

The board approved the administration's request to apply for a $19,183.50 grant from special state funds to be used for purchasing films to add to the 250-film collection of Dist. 59.

Some of the films will replace older, worn out film copies now being used.

2 Oakton College students are cited for achievement

Two Oakton Community College students have received awards from the 1973-74 Student Achievement Recognition Program.

The winners are Terry Wunderlich, Des Plaines, a student in the child care career program, and Marc Glickman, Skokie, a student in the physical therapy assistant program.

The award winners have demonstrated achievement toward their personal goals and have shown leadership qualities in their studies and in campus and community activities. Twelve Oakton students were candidates for the awards.

The judges for the Oakton competition were John Oles, Glenview, a senior research chemist for Kratco; Ann Evans, Des Plaines, a member of the Board of the Cook County League of Women Voters and former member of the Illinois Constitutional Convention; and Betty Petroski, former newswoman who is presently working for the Finnish Consulate as public relations director and translator.

Apollo addition to cost $1,094,889

The East Maine Elementary School board has approved a bid totaling $1,094,889 for construction of an addition to Apollo Junior High School.

The contract was awarded to Meyer-Ross Inc., at Tuesday night's board meeting. Principal James Lumb said the addition will include rooms for industrial arts, art and home economics.

Addition plans also call for an auxiliary gym and multi use auditorium as well as storage space. No time schedule has been set for construction.

Scouting news

A 14-year-old Des Plaines scout, Randall Gary Bernstein, 9237 Parkside Dr., has won a certificate of merit in the first annual scout photo scholarship awards, sponsored by Eastman Kodak Co.

A member of Troop 33, sponsored by Good Shepherd Community Church, Bernstein won recognition in the color category for his unusual composition featuring a wet rock formation. Asked why he felt his photograph might be worthy of merit, the Eagle Scout pointed to "the unusual lighting effect on an interesting rock formation."

The scout photo scholarship awards, a nationwide competition open to scouts, ages 11 through 15, who have earned their photography merit badges, attracted more than 1,000 entries in its first year. A selection of outstanding entries will be shown throughout the United States this year as part of six traveling exhibits, sponsored by Boy Scouts of America.

5 area teachers are finalists

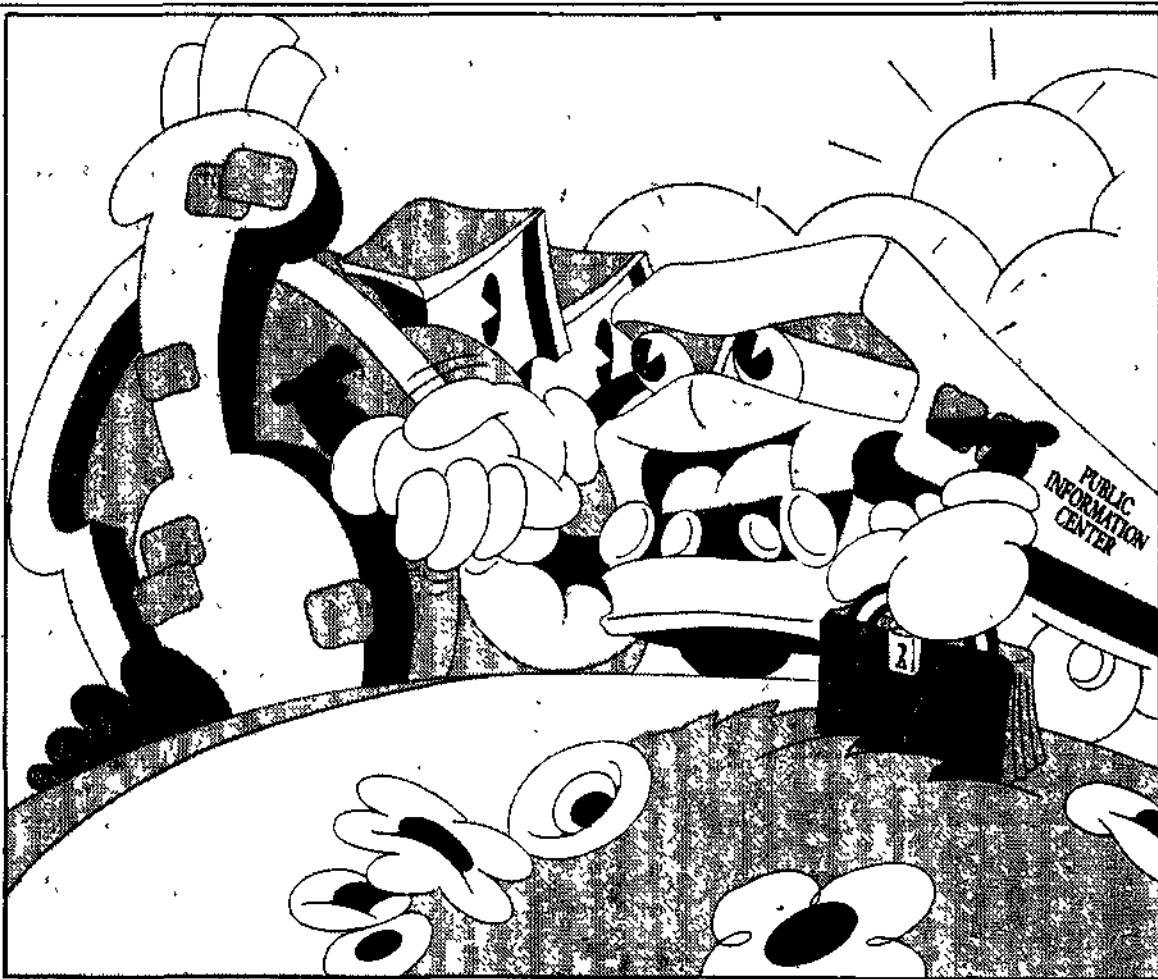

Five teachers in Elk Grove Township School Dist. 59 have been named as finalists in "Representative Teacher Award" competition.

The first annual award is sponsored by the Dist. 59 Teachers' Council and is given to the teacher who best fits the image of the teaching profession, according to Chuck Meyer of the Teacher's Council.

The finalists are Roy Landzbaum from Hig Ridge Knolls School in Des Plaines; Alice Ekstrom from Lively Junior High in Elk Grove Village; Marv Azrael, also from Lively; Bonnie Peters from Cook School in Elk Grove Village, and Judy Fink from Juliette Low School in Arlington Heights.

Winners will be selected on the basis of a questionnaire submitted by the candidate, recommendations from the observer team and letters of evaluation from colleagues.

Finalists will be observed in class by a panel of judges. Winners will be announced by April 14, according to Meyer.

Gas on Sundays? Nixon may have to man the pumps

A Herald staff report

Few gas-line dealers in the Northwest suburbs plan to return to a seven-day-a-week operation, as indicated in a spot check of local dealers. This, despite President Nixon's announcement Tuesday that he's withdrawing the request for voluntary Sunday closings by dealers. The request for Sunday closings had been effective since last Nov. 25.

A sampling of 37 dealers turned up the following results: 21 do not plan to open their stations on Sunday; 13 said

"maybe" they will do so, and 3 said they will open their station Sundays.

The American Automobile Assn., said 17 per cent of the nation's service stations were open last Sunday, compared with 11 per cent in January and 12 per cent in February.

A resounding "no" to questions about Sunday sales is indicated in these comments from Northwest suburban dealers:

• John Molick of Molick's Standard Service in Des Plaines: "No. I found out what it's like to be home with my wife and family after 12 years in this business, and I like it."

• At Frank's Gas for Less in Des Plaines, a spokesman said "Ask Nixon, where do I get the gas? If I could get more gas, I would be glad to stay open on Sunday to accommodate my customers."

• "The hell with what the President says. What does he know? He flies," said an attendant at John's Super Shell in Palatine.

• "I'm taking advantage of a good thing," said an attendant at Al's Enco in Rolling Meadows. Taking Sunday off is like getting away from "a big headache," he said.

• Jim Weber, day manager at Walden Mobil station in Schaumburg said "No we're not. Sunday is a bad day and we feel we have a day off coming, too."

• At the Arlington Heights Cito station, 1001 S. Arlington Heights Rd., a spokesman said he doesn't have enough gas to open Sundays.

• "Hell no, I won't open," said Jack

Parker, operator of Arlington Park Arco in Arlington Heights. "People who need gas for Sundays can get it Saturday night or during the day."

• "When the banks are open Sundays, then I'll open on Sundays," said Jack Berndt at Jack's Marathon station in Prospect Heights. He's been closed for a year on Sundays.

AMONG THE "maybe" responses are the following comments:

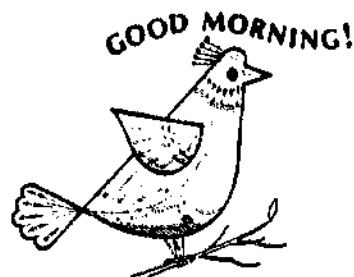

• "We still don't know yet, because the allocation isn't high enough," said

Harry Howland, owner of the South Point Shell station in Wheeling.

• "I don't know anything about it. The company informs me what to do and I do it," said Elmer Waskosky of Pay Less Stations in Wheeling.

• At the Montgomery Ward station in Mount Prospect, assistant manager Joe Urbansky said, "I don't know yet. We haven't gotten anything from our corporate office yet."

Bill's opponents among leading candidates

5 already in running for suburb RTA post

Frank Walsh

Robert Atcher

by KURT BAER

The last ballot had not been counted before speculation sprang up Wednesday on the possibility of a Northwest suburban appointee to the governing board of the new Regional Transportation Authority.

Among the names mentioned were Arlington Heights Village Pres. Jack Walsh, former Elk Grove Village Mayor Jack Pahl, Mount Prospect Mayor Robert D. Teichert and Schaumburg Mayor Robert O. Atcher.

Joseph A. Tecson, Riverside Township Republican committeeman and unsuccessful aspirant last fall for the GOP's county board slate, also is regarded as a likely candidate.

Floyd Fulle, influential Cook County commissioner who will help select two representatives from suburban Cook County to sit on the RTA board, said Wednesday he had a file of applicants "two inches thick."

"We started this thing a long time ago," Fulle said. "We'll set up some selection process. I'm not going to do this myself."

CD siren warning system here called a 'life saver'

by JERRY THOMAS

The Elk Grove Village Civil Defense agency believes its warning siren system is a definite lifesaver. "But, unless people are aware of what the siren blasts are saying, the alert is useless," said Capt. Glen Lerum, plans and operations officer for the Elk Grove Village Civil Defense.

"A better warning system has dramatically lowered death and injury tolls that usually accompany tornadoes and storms," said Lerum.

"In no event is it ever used to alert the public of a tornado watch, or to advise of an all-clear condition. A siren warning is used only when a tornado has actually been sighted in the area or detected by radar," said Capt. Lerum.

Lerum said a watch is the first alerting message between the National Severe Storm Forecast Center and the area potentially threatened by tornadoes, but it does not prompt activating the siren warning.

"THE MONTH OF March signals the beginning of the tornado season," according to Lerum.

For the next three months, residents should be conscious of the fact that it is the tornado season in Northern Illinois.

Though none of the months are immune to tornadoes, they commonly occur in the late winter and spring, with May the peak month.

The National Weather Service has forecast an increase in tornado activity in this area for 1974.

Elk Grove Village suffered the effects of two tornadoes in the past; one struck in September of 1967 and the other in July of 1972.

According to fire department records, the first tornado was sighted running along Devon Avenue. Damage to many homes on Harmony, Peachtree, Cypress, Walpole and Pleasant streets was confined in most cases to roofs and was considered slight. Several trees lost branches or were uprooted and some minor damage was done to sheds and outdoor furniture. No injuries were reported.

The 1972 TORNADO in July severely damaged the Paulex Tool and Mold plant on Criss Circle in the Higgins Road Industrial Park.

Firemen said a wall fell in, portions of the roof were lifted off the building and some homes near the park were damaged.

Lerum said fortunately the plant had a skeleton crew in the building and there were minor injuries reported, but no fatalities.

Elk Grove Village Civil Defense agency holds an alert test the first Tuesday of the month at 10:30 a.m. "We don't want people to become used to or to ignore sirens, but want them to be aware of what the sirens sound like," said Lerum.

When a real tornado warning is sounded — a three-to-five-minute steady blast — residents are urged to take cover in an area of the home, office or plant that has been pre-designated as the best

Civil Defense sets briefing on tornadoes

To assist Elk Grove Village residents in reviewing warning signs of effects of tornadoes, the Elk Grove Village Civil Defense office has scheduled a briefing at 7:30 p.m. Friday.

People who are interested in learning how they can protect themselves from tornadoes or recognize the warning signs of impending tornadoes, are asked to attend the meeting in the lower hall of the Elk Grove Village Fire Department, 101 Biesterfeld Rd., Elk Grove Village.

protection against tornado damage.

LERUM SAID, "If you have a basement, go to the southwest corner of the basement or if there is no basement go to the interior of the home," he urged.

Occupants should stay away from large glass windows, especially on the west and south side of the building. Capt. Lerum urged people to get under heavy furniture such as beds or heavy tables for protection. In a large building, do not

Carey starts on fire measure

State's Atty. Bernard Carey is preparing legislation that would outlaw "subscription-type fire and ambulance service."

Bob Bensen, assistant to the director of public information in Carey's offices, said, "the state's attorney is reviewing the text of statutes governing fire and ambulance protection and working on modification of the language of the law."

"The exact words are still being worked on, but there may no longer be a subscription-type service option for people in unincorporated areas without fire departments," said Bensen.

The state's attorney's office recently investigated the death of an Elk Grove Township woman. An investigation of Elk Grove officials and the incident exonerated the village and no charges were brought.

Carey said he is working on a recommendation to modify present laws and will introduce the proposed legislation to the Illinois General Assembly in April.

Elk Grove Village officials were exonerated by the state atty.'s office, but face two lawsuits totaling $12 million, brought against them by Gary Pettie, of 277 Martha St., husband of the dead woman.

PETTIE'S PREGNANT wife, Jean, died of a massive blood clot in her lungs, Jan. 6. The village fire department refused to send an ambulance to her aid when Pettie called the village for aid. He filed suits March 11 in both Cook County Circuit Court and U. S. District Court, asking $6 million damages in each.

Village Mgr. Charles Willis said the village was served with the Circuit Court suit summons Monday and must answer it in 30 days. The circuit court action charges criminal negligence and the federal court charges village officials deprived Mrs. Pettie of her civil rights.

The Pettie family lives in an unincorporated area just a few blocks away from the village fire station. Pettie had refused to subscribe to fire and ambulance services from Elk Grove Village and had instead contracted with the Roselle Fire Department located about six miles away.

Village officials throughout the issue maintained they were under a policy that dictates service to outlying unincorporated areas only in life-or-death emergencies or when contracted for, said Village Pres. Charles Zettik.

Since Mrs. Pettie's death, the village answers calls from unincorporated areas on a serve-now-pay-later plan.

Believe it—it's spring!

Today is the first full day of spring.

It officially began Wednesday at 7:07 p.m., when the sun made its yearly appearance over the equator, which is known as the vernal equinox.

In California Tuesday, specifically at San Juan Capistrano, the swallows returned, as they have for at least 175 years. They made the 3,000-mile flight from Argentina to the cheers of thousands of townspeople.

Local residents call it "Swallows Homecoming Day" ever since the birds began coming back to the same spot every year on the date since March 18, 1798.

Locally, area park districts and golf courses are preparing their grounds for the increase in outdoor sports and other activities.

Gardeners are preparing for better days ahead, culminated in the warm summer months when plants and flowers take full bloom.

But some people are wondering why anyone would even talk about spring.

"It's 35 degrees outside! What do you mean, spring?"

CONCENTRATION is the key to mastering the art of balancing and other "fun" projects for Scott Sanchez and other preschoolers with unique learning needs in Dist. 54's Early Education Center.

Early Education Center provides for 'unique needs'

by PAT GEKLACH
Why is a snowflake like a child?
Each is a tiny miracle, unique and fragile.
Her name is Lisa. She is four years old and super-friendly, eager to take you by the hand, smile warmly as you admire her pretty pink dress and lead you toward her classroom activity.
Lisa seems oblivious to the white hockey-type helmet covering her curly head. She wears it as a protection against injury during the two to three seizures she may experience during the morning.
Lisa is a more dramatic example of the 115 preschoolers directly served by Schaumburg Early Education Center (SEEC).

The center, funded by a three-year $180,000 federal grant, was created by Elementary School Dist. 54 to serve three- and four-year-old children with "unique educational needs."

THESE NEEDS, according to SEEC Director Jennie Swanson, include delays in speech and language, learning, social and emotional adjustment as well as problems with vision, hearing and physical development.

"Our children have 'unique' needs. We use no other identifying label," explained Mrs. Swanson, who is an early childhood education specialist. However, she said most children enrolled in the program have "language oriented" difficulties.

The program itself is strictly geared to the needs of the child. "Some of our youngsters attend every day," others less, said Mrs. Swanson. A child is phased out when his unique need has been remedied.

Morning and afternoon programs are held in a special wing at Armstrong School. Mrs. Swanson said some of her staffers also visit area nursery and preschools where children with unique needs have been identified.

BUT WHAT DOES SEEC do? Brings the child up to the appropriate intelligence level, say Mrs. Swanson and others involved in the program.

"Fifty per cent of a person's intelligence is built by age 5. Think of that compared to the years in between, say up to about 17," remarked Mrs. Swanson.

But how do you build intelligence? Well, if you are talking to a child about a cow, for example, you don't build his intelligence by showing him a picture of the cow. Show him the real thing. Let him see and touch a cow," is Mrs. Swanson's method.

Theories of Jean Piaget, an 86-year-old Swiss psychologist who has developed methods of intellectual development for children, are largely used in SEEC. Piaget's three key elements for growth consist of: a child's genetic intellect (the intelligence he is born with), environment and experiences.

PIAGET FEELS that in order to develop a child's intelligence, he needs to be active in his environment. In SEEC, this activity is achieved in a number of ways — painting, baking cookies, and other play. To his teachers they are experiences of assimilation and accommodation.

Parent interest and participation is an important part of SEEC and the role it has helped play in overcoming preschool learning disabilities.

Parent involvement groups are held weekly; parents are encouraged to visit classes each Wednesday and most of them have become enthusiastic SEEC boosters.

But it is not easy for a parent to accept the realization that a child is disabled, agree Kathy Reynolds and Ann Perich, mothers of children now in the program.

"WHEN MY SON first came to SEEC it was without his father's approval of knowledge but Mrs. Swanson soon brought dad around," Mrs. Reynolds said.

They encouraged parents to review the unique educational needs checklist with their children to identify potential problems and, with the help of SEEC, obtain an early solution.

Children must be three years old by Dec. 1, 1974 to qualify for September enrollment in SEEC.

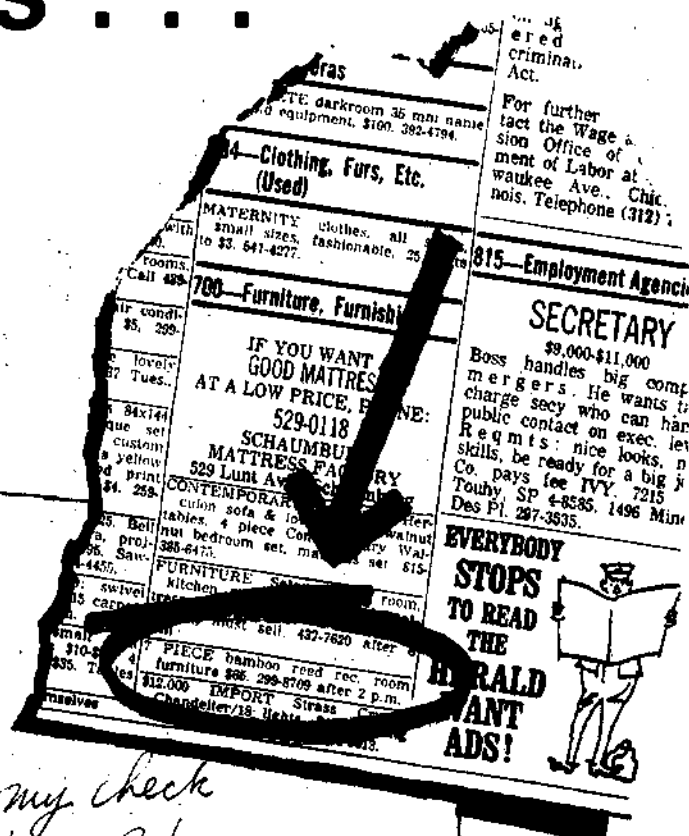

A NUTRITIONAL snack is always welcomed by preschoolers in (SEEC) classes at Armstrong School.

Wheeling woman, 24, raped

A Wheeling woman, 24, was abducted from the lobby of her apartment building and taken to a deserted construction site where she was raped early Wednesday, Wheeling police said.

Police are looking for a man about six feet tall, 170 pounds, white and between age 22 and 25. He was driving a red or maroon older model Chevrolet or Ford, Police Lt. Ronald Nelson said.

The man, wearing a red-ski-type mask, grabbed the woman as she entered the lobby of her apartment building, about 12:05 a.m. police said. He reportedly held a six-inch knife to her throat and told her to cooperate.

Police said the attacker put a stocking hat over his victim's face and then led her outside to his automobile. The attacker then drove the woman to a construction site which police believe was at Tahoe Village, Buffalo Grove Road north of Hintz road.

Police said the woman was raped there and then returned to her own street. She ran to a neighbor's apartment and called police. This was about 12:35 a.m., police said.

Nelson said the name of the apartment complex was being withheld so as not to panic the residents. He said he would not want the residents to form any kind of vigilante group to try and find the attacker.

stand under large open areas with wide free-span roofs, he added.

The National Weather Service reported a record total of 1,102 tornadoes during 1973. The previous full year record was 929, set in 1967.

"Yet the large death toll that usually accompanied these powerful storms was dramatically lowered in 1973," said Lerum.

At year's end, there was a total of 87 deaths from tornadoes compared with an annual average of 114 over a period of two decades," said Lerum.

"I credit the decrease in the death rate to the better warning system, one we have in Elk Grove Village," said Lerum.

SATURDAY NIGHT? Reading is fun, especially when you read in the tub. First-graders at the Dist. 59 school, Juliette Low in Arlington Heights are encouraged to read a new way — in a waterless tub. Students Susie Nebel, left, David Grigsby and Debbie Hewitt take their turn in "the tub."

Class fixture

Juliette Low first graders can curl up with a book in their favorite bathtub

by BOB GALLAS

Students in Pat Armgard's first-grade class at Juliette Low school in Dist. 59 have a special place to go when they'd like to be alone and curl up with a good book.

Spurning the library or a comfortable chair, the students have their own approach — they take a bath.

Indeed the classroom bathtub is very popular with Mrs. Armgard's students at the Arlington Heights School, especially because there's never any water in it. Gaily decorated and outfitted with comfortable pillows, the tub has been transformed into a "special place" in an effort to encourage the first graders to read.

When they're through with their regular classwork, the children are allowed to choose a favorite book and crawl into the tub, which has a limit of three by order of Mrs. Armgard.

"THE FIRST DAY we got the tub, three students rushed over as soon as they could," Mrs. Armgard said. "A few minutes later, I looked up and there were 18 others, book in hand, all waiting for their turn."

"With the openness here, the tub gives the child a place of his own, sort of his own territory which he can identify with," she said.

Fortunately, the newness of the tub has started to wear off, according to Mrs. Armgard. "Nobody did much reading at first," she said. "The three in the tub just sat there with a book, enjoying their notoriety and watching everybody who was staring at them from the other classes."

The tub has other advantages, too.

"A little boy was sick the other day, so we put him in the tub and let him stretch out on the pillows," Mrs. Armgard said.

EVEN THOUGH THE tub has proven a tremendous success for teaching reading, Mrs. Armgard uses other devices to encourage reading and has others planned. Some children use clay when working with reading.

They use the clay to spell out certain words from a prepared list.

Mysterious "monster" footprints decorate the one wall the first grade has in the "open classroom" type school. The footprints led to a sealed packing crate which supposedly holds the make believe "monster."

"Tomorrow, we're going to be writing about the monster, what he looks like, etc.," said Mrs. Armgard. "Then I expect they'll be footprints one morning leading from the box or his 'cave' when the monster escapes."

PLANS THEN CALL for the abandoned cave to be decorated and painted with bats and other decorations as the cave is transformed into another special reading area. "It will be a place where the child can be alone, when he wants to be," said Mrs. Armgard. "It will provide a place where they can get their thoughts together."

The cave might also have another function, according to Mrs. Armgard. Students acting up or getting a little too rambunctious in class can't "go sit in the corner" since corners are few and far between at Juliette Low.

"Instead, a disorderly child might be instructed to 'go sit in the cave.'"

Gas on Sundays? Nixon may have to man the pumps

A Herald-staff report
Few gasoline dealers in the Northwest suburbs plan to return to a seven-day-a-week operation, as indicated in a spot check of local dealers. This, despite President Nixon's announcement Tuesday that he's withdrawing the request for voluntary Sunday closings by dealers. The request for Sunday closings had been effective since last Nov. 25.

A sampling of 37 dealers turned up the following results: 21 do not plan to open their stations on Sunday; 13 said

"maybe" they will do so, and 3 said they will open their station Sundays.
The American Automobile Assn., said 17 per cent of the nation's service stations were open last Sunday, compared with 11 per cent in January and 12 per cent in February.

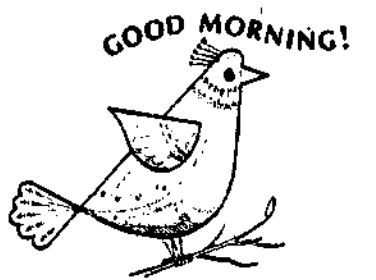

A resounding "no" to questions about Sunday sales is indicated in these comments from Northwest suburban dealers:
• John Molick of Molick's Standard Service in Des Plaines: "No. I found out what it's like to be home with my wife and family after 12 years in this business, and I like it."

• At Frank's Gas for Less in Des Plaines, a spokesman said "Ask Nixon, where do I get the gas? If I could get more gas, I would be glad to stay open on Sunday to accommodate my customers."
• "The hell with what the President says. What does he know? He flies," said an attendant at John's Super Shell in Palatine.
• "I'm taking advantage of a good thing," said an attendant at Al's Enco in Rolling Meadows. Taking Sunday off is like getting away from "a big headache," he said.

• Jim Weber, day manager at Walden Mobil station in Schaumburg said "No we're not. Sunday is a bad day and we feel we have a day off coming, too."
• At the Arlington Heights Citgo station, 1001 S. Arlington Heights Rd., a spokesman said he doesn't have enough gas to open Sundays.
• "Hell no, I won't open," said Jack

Parker, operator of Arlington Park Arco in Arlington Heights. "People who need gas for Sundays can get it Saturday night or during the day."
• "When the banks are open Sundays, then I'll open on Sundays," said Jack Berndt at Jack's Marathon station in Prospect Heights. He's been closed for a year on Sundays.
AMONG THE "maybe" responses are the following comments:
• "We still don't know yet, because the allocation isn't high enough," said

Harry Howland, owner of the South Point Shell station in Wheeling.
• "I don't know anything about it. The company informs me what to do and I do it," said Elmer Waskosky of Pay Less Stations in Wheeling.
• At the Montgomery Ward station in Mount Prospect, assistant manager Joe Urbansky said, "I don't know yet. We haven't gotten anything from our corporate office yet."

Bill's opponents among leading candidates

5 already in running for suburb RTA post

Jack Walsh

Robert Atcher

by KURT BAER
The last ballot had not been counted before speculation sprang up Wednesday on the possibility of a Northwest suburban appointee to the governing board of the new Regional Transportation Authority.
Among the names mentioned were Arlington Heights Village Pres. Jack Walsh, former Elk Grove Village Mayor Jack Pahl, Mount Prospect Mayor Robert D. Teichert and Schaumburg Mayor Robert O. Atcher.
Joseph A. Tecson, Riverside Township Republican committeeman and unsuccessful aspirant last fall for the GOP's county board slate, also is regarded as a likely candidate.

Floyd Fulle, influential Cook County commissioner who will help select two representatives from suburban Cook County to sit on the RTA board, said Wednesday he had a file of applicants "two inches thick."
"We started this thing a long time ago," Fulle said. "We'll set up some selection process. I'm not going to do this myself."
FULLE AND THREE other suburban commissioners must select two RTA board members within the next 28 days, (continued on page 2)

Mugalian will face fight to keep legislative seat

by TONI GINETTI
Incumbent 2nd District Democratic State Rep. Richard A. Mugalian may be fighting hard to retain his legislative seat in November.
With official votes in from three of the four counties encompassed by the sprawling district, Democratic challenger David Carey of Elgin apparently outpolled Mugalian by almost 1,700 votes. Running a distant third in the race was James Moats of Glendale Heights. The totals entitle both Carey and Mugalian to positions on the November ballot.
Mugalian indicated Wednesday, however, that he is confident of defeating Carey for the Democratic seat in the all-important November contest.
"I feel I will win in November," he said. "I'm really very confident." The Palatine Democrat said he ran almost no campaign for the legislative seat and concentrated instead on what was expected to be a close race to retain his committeeman post in Palatine Township against the challenge of Peter Gerling.
Mugalian beat Gerling by some 600 votes in an easy victory.
UNOFFICIAL TOTALS Wednesday gave Carey a total of 10,417½ votes to 8,720 for Mugalian and 3,084 for Moats. Final figures from Kane, Lake and DuPage Counties showed Carey a big victor in DuPage and Kane counties, while Mugalian out-tallied Carey by some 300 votes in Lake County and by some 1,000 votes in Palatine Township.

In Cook County overall, however, unofficial figures Wednesday showed Carey taking 4,561½ votes to only 4,052 for Mugalian. Carey ran particularly well in Hanover Township where he reportedly had received strong support from the regular Democratic organization.
The victory will mean Carey's name will be listed above Mugalian's on the November Democratic ballot. The top position is regarded as a vote-getting advantage and may be a factor in a close race.
Only one Democrat is likely to be elected to represent the district along with Republican incumbents Leo LaFleur of Bloomingdale and John Friedland of South Elgin.
"I'm surprised he did so well," Mugalian said of Carey's vote total. "I didn't know how much he was spending on media campaigning. I was running pretty much just on my record. We were more concerned with the committeeman race."
CAREY, HOWEVER, called the upset a declaration from the voters. "I went out and worked the precincts. I thank everyone who supported me. It's the people that did this. I just presented my views."
The 35-year-old Carey, who is a member of State School Supt. Michael J. Bakalis' staff, would not predict the outcome of his November fight with Mugalian but conceded the contest "will be a tough race."
"November is a long way off," he said.

Richard Mugalian

David Carey

"All I can say is I'll do my best."
Moats was unavailable for comment Wednesday. Both Carey and Mugalian said the 42-year-old committeeman called to congratulate them on their vic-

Downtown plan may hurt some

by JOANN VAN WYE
Several downtown merchants whose business hinges on the availability of on-street parking, have voiced concern they would be forced to relocate if the proposed downtown redevelopment plan is carried out.
The proposed land use plan for Palatine's downtown area, which was reviewed by 17 merchants representing 13 businesses for the first time yesterday, eliminates on-street parking. The plan calls for replacing on-street parking with pedestrian malls and multi-story parking structures on the fringes of the commercial area.
Owners of a bakery and grocery store both said they would be forced to move out of the downtown area if on-street parking is eliminated. Other merchants said their stores are geared to one-stop shopping and it is advantageous for them to have parking available directly in front of the stores. These businesses included a bike shop and hardware store.
LEE MORRISON, president of the Palatine National Bank, said both of Palatine's financial institutions are committed to the economic rejuvenation of the downtown area and would provide the necessary financing to help businesses relocate.
The proposed multi-story parking lots would be municipally owned and operated.

Three parking structures are proposed in the tentative plans drawn up by the New Palatine Committee, a group of 11 businessmen. The first one proposed for construction would be located in the vicinity of Slade and Greeley streets. The other parking structures would be located on the south side of Palatine Road at Brockway Street and at the intersection of Wilson and Plum Grove roads.
Merchants expressed concern that commercial shoppers would not be willing to park south of Palatine Road because they would have to cross four or possibly six lanes of traffic to get into the commercial area.
Wilton Battles, of Planning Horizons Inc., who prepared the proposed land use plan, agreed and said an underpass or overpass was being considered along with alternative parking locations.
BATTLES SAID he felt people would be willing to walk into the commercial area and the elimination of on-street parking would give a stronger identity and help enhance the esthetics of the commercial area.
Changes directly affecting the commercial area were estimated as being at least three years away by Battles. He said the first phase, if the land use plan

Believe it—it's spring!

Today is the first full day of spring.
It officially began Wednesday at 7:07 p.m., when the sun made its yearly appearance over the equator, which is known as the vernal equinox.
In California Tuesday, specifically at San Juan Capistrano, the swallows returned, as they have for at least 175 years. They made the 3,000-mile flight from Argentina to the cheers of thousands of townspeople.
Local residents call it "Swallows Homecoming Day" ever since the birds began coming back to the same spot every year on the date since March 19, 1793.

Locally, area park districts and golf courses are preparing their grounds for the increase in outdoor sports and other activities.
Gardeners are preparing for better days ahead, culminated in the warm summer months when plants and flowers take full bloom.
But some people are wondering why anyone would even talk about spring.
"It's 35 degrees outside! What do you mean, spring?"

School district not at top of list for state funding

The Palatine-Rolling Meadows Dist. 15 School Board has lost the first round in its attempts to obtain state funding for over half the cost of a new school in the Winston Knolls area.

State officials, visiting the schools that have the first priority on the $100 million allocated for school construction next year, are not visiting Dist. 15, Assistant Supt. for Business William Colburn told a committee of the whole meeting last night.

But the board will still go ahead with plans for a new school on the west side of the district, the committee agreed. "The kids are going to be here," Colburn said, adding that the district should start planning for an influx of youngsters from new developments in the west.

COLBURN ADDED that the district may still receive the funding. He said that several of the districts with high-priority ratings still have to pass binding referendums, convincing their voters to pay part of the cost for a new school.

If these referendums fail, the money will be allocated to other districts with a lower priority, Colburn said. He added that he does not know where Dist. 15 stands on the priority list in relation to other schools.

Priority is based on the amount of students over and above what a district's existing facilities can handle.

DIST. 15 HAS already passed a $3.5 million referendum for the construction of two schools. With the extra money from the state funding program, the district could have built three schools instead of two, according to Colburn.

Dist. 15 administrators say all three schools will be needed in the near future. Present estimates, based on existing plans for housing developments, predict a student expansion of over 4,700 in the southwest area alone within the next decade.

The possible $159,631 the district may receive for money paid out this year on existing construction debts, is not affected, Colburn said. He added that, at present, it looks as if the district may receive the full amount. A final decision on the refund is expected sometime in April, he said.

Zoners to study request for contractor's office, shop

Application for a contractor's office and shop will be discussed April 5 by the Cook County Zoning Board of Appeals for 4½ acres at the northwest corner of Quentin Road and Wood Street.

The rezoning request by David J. Griffin and Frank Gehard was originally submitted for a November hearing, but that request was withdrawn and returned with a different rezoning classification.

Owners of the project are now asking for zoning for a restricted manufacturing district, instead of the general district in their previous petition. The project is expected to receive heavy criticism by neighboring homeowners.

The public hearing will be in the Palatine Village Hall, 54 S. Brockway St., Palatine, at 3 p.m.

Other applicants scheduled for presentations on that date are:

- Rezoning for nearly 10 acres on the west side of Ill. Rte. 53, 2,000 feet north of Dundee Road, for R-6 apartment units by Charles Berke.

- Request for a catering business on the north side of Palatine Road, west of Ela Road. The property, owned by Gus Lykos and Mike Bousis, is 4.3 acres. Applicant for the rezoning is Elliot Heidelberg.

Parking shortages may cause relocations

(Continued from Page 1) is adopted, would be construction of high-density office buildings south of the Chicago and North Western Ry. tracks and east of Smith Street. Ground could be broken for this phase in 12 to 18 months, according to Batties. The next phase would be construction of mid-and high-rise apartment and condominium units proposed for the north side of the railroad tracks. Then changes would probably start in the commercial area.

"We want to get the people in here to create a demand and desire for you (the merchants) to do things better," said Batties.

Wheeling woman, 24, raped

A Wheeling woman, 24, was abducted from the lobby of her apartment building and taken to a deserted construction site where she was raped early Wednesday, Wheling police said.

Police are looking for a man about six feet tall, 170 pounds, white and between age 22 and 25. He was driving a red or maroon older model Chevrolet or Ford, Police Lt. Ronald Nelson said.

The man, wearing a red-ski-type mask, grabbed the woman as she entered the lobby of her apartment building, about 12:05 a.m. police said. He reportedly held a six-inch knife to her throat and told her to cooperate.

Police said the attacker put a stocking hat over his victim's face and then led her outside to his automobile. The attacker then drove the woman to a construction site which police believe was at Tahoe Village, Buffalo Grove Road north of Hintz road.

Police said the woman was raped there and then returned to her own street. She ran to a neighbor's apartment and called police. This was about 12:35 a.m., police said.

Nelson said the name of the apartment complex was being withheld so as not to panic the residents. He said he would not want the residents to form any kind of vigilante group to try and find the attacker.

Newsletter may have new look

Palatine's quarterly newsletter to residents may have a new look in the future.

The Palatine Village Board's communications and public relations committee is expected to recommend awarding a contract to Strickland and Associates of Chicago for the writing, editing and printing of the newsletter.

Strickland's bid of $257 for the printing of 21,000 copies of the newsletter was the lowest of three received. No other firm bid on the writing and editing which will cost $440 per issue.

In the past the village employees have written the newsletter. The newsletter is used by the village board to inform residents of services, policies and other information in the village.

Village board wrapup

Another restaurant here?

Palatine may be getting another restaurant and banquet facility.

William Samatas owner of the Brown Derby Restaurant, 45 W. Slade St., has asked the Palatine Village Board for a special use permit to operate a restaurant and banquet facility in the former National Store in the Palatine Plaza. Samatas tentative agreement to lease the former grocery store at 321 E. Northwest Hwy is contingent on the special use permit and his ability to obtain a liquor license.

The board referred the matter to the Zoning Board of Appeals for a recommendation.

Also referred to the zoning board for a recommendation was a request from Blume Construction Co. for the annexation of three vacant lots on W. Kenilworth Street.

Subdivision to be reviewed

The subdivision of an eight-acre parcel on the corner of Golf and Algonquin roads will be reviewed by the plan commission. The owner of the property, John Kretschmar, told the committee Monday he is seeking the subdivision because it is required by law.

Statutes require any parcel more than five acres to be subdivided before it can be sold either in parts or as a whole. Kretschmar said he is currently negotiating sale of the corner parcel of the site to a company.

Park district merger looms in 1975

April 1, 1975, is the target date for the possible merger of the Palatine Rural Park District and Palatine Park District.

At a meeting of rural commissioners this week, three of the five board members formed a committee to discuss the merger of the two districts with Palatine Park representatives.

The one-year date marks the beginning of both districts' next fiscal years, the ideal time for the merger, according to rural park president Thomas Patten.

In the meantime, rural park commissioners are proceeding with plans to buy park land and possibly construct recreational buildings in the northern or southern areas of the undeveloped park district.

PATTEN, JOHN Pinter and Eugene Dorsch, all residents of unincorporated subdivisions north of Palatine, took control of the rural district last year in a write-in campaign. Until that election, the district had served primarily as a tax shelter for farmers and unincorporated residents who wanted to stay out of higher-taxing active park districts.

Questionnaires have been prepared by rural park planner Alan Caskey and will be mailed to rural district homeowners within 10 days to get feedback on residents' recreational needs, Patten said Wednesday.

Results of that questionnaire will be reviewed at the rural district's April 22 meeting. Park land may be purchased

Seventh candidate in school race

Another person has entered the race for the three seats on the Palatine-Rolling Meadows Dist. 15 school board election April 13.

Margie Kutz, who unsuccessfully ran for the board last year, recently took out a petition to run for election this spring. Mrs. Kutz said Wednesday that she plans to file her petition before the deadline date of 4 p.m. Friday.

Mrs. Kutz, 43, who has two children at Lincoln School, said she is running for the same reasons she ran last year.

Last year, Mrs. Kutz said every school board needs a mother's point of view. Since mothers are home most of the day, she said, they have greater access to other parent's ideas and opinions on education. She added that she receives feedback from parents that never reaches the board.

Mrs. Kutz is a member of Kiwi Club, the Lincoln PTA and Christ Lutheran Noise study to delay road work

Noise tests and proposed realignment of Butterfield Creek tributary will hold up the widening of Hicks Road from Baldwin to Rand roads this summer, state officials said Wednesday.

"We submitted an environmental assessment to the federal highway administration, and they wanted additional information related to noise and the Butterfield Creek tributary," said Illinois Highway Department spokesman Henry Yamanaka.

The additional testing information and a statement of the department's reasons for changing the creek will be sent to the federal government within the next week, according to Yamanaka.

"We're still hopeful of proceeding with this particular job in this fiscal year," Yamanaka said. An optimistic estimate for federal clearance for the project is within the next 30 days, he said.

The project was being prepared for bidding at the end of June, but delays in federal approval could hold up the bidding and subsequent construction until last summer.

HICKS ROAD widening is one of the highway department's top priorities for this year. The road will be widened from two to four lanes from Baldwin to Rand roads, with left turn lanes, median divider and a closed drainage system.

Cost of the widening is estimated at $1.9 million, with 70 per cent paid by the federal government and 30 per cent by the state.

Yamanaka said the federal officials required additional noise tests to assess what the noise level along the highway would be without the widening, from stop and go traffic.

Plans to realign Butterfield Creek when the road construction begins were drawn up at the request of the Cook County Forest Preserve District. Yamanaka said, adding that the creek "had a bad bend in it" where it crosses Hicks.

Widening of other portions of Hicks Road, from Euclid Avenue to Baldwin Road, are being planned but no firm dates for the construction have been set.

Gas on Sundays? Nixon may have to man the pumps

A Herald staff report
Few gasoline dealers in the Northwest suburbs plan to return to a seven-day-a-week operation, as indicated in a spot check of local dealers. This, despite President Nixon's announcement Tuesday that he's withdrawing the request for voluntary Sunday closings by dealers. The request for Sunday closings had been effective since last Nov. 25.

A sampling of 37 dealers turned up the following results: 21 do not plan to open their stations on Sunday; 13 said "maybe" they will do so, and 3 said they will open their station Sundays.

The American Automobile Assn., said 17 per cent of the nation's service stations were open last Sunday, compared with 11 per cent in January and 12 per cent in February.

A resounding "no" to questions about Sunday sales is indicated in these comments from Northwest suburban dealers:

• John Molick of Molick's Standard Service in Des Plaines: "No. I found out what it's like to be home with my wife and family after 12 years in this business, and I like it."

• At Frank's Gas for Less in Des Plaines, a spokesman said "Ask Nixon, where do I get the gas? If I could get more gas, I would be glad to stay open on Sunday to accommodate my customers."

• "The hell with what the President says. What does he know? He flies," said an attendant at John's Super Shell in Palatine.

• "I'm taking advantage of a good thing," said an attendant at Al's Enco in Rolling Meadows. Taking Sunday off is like getting away from "a big headache," he said.

• Jim Weber, day manager at Walden Mobil station in Schaumburg said "No we're not. Sunday is a bad day and we feel we have a day off coming, too."

• At the Arlington Heights Citgo station, 1001 S. Arlington Heights Rd., a spokesman said he doesn't have enough gas to open Sundays.

• "Hell no, I won't open," said Jack Parker, operator of Arlington Park Arco in Arlington Heights. "People who need gas for Sundays can get it Saturday night or during the day."

• "When the banks are open Sundays, then I'll open on Sundays," said Jack Berndt at Jack's Marathon station in Prospect Heights. He's been closed for a year on Sundays.

AMONG THE "maybe" responses are the following comments:

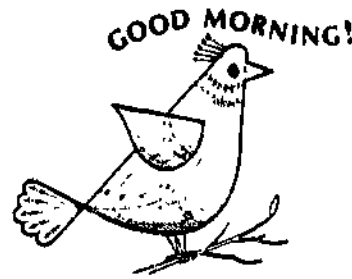

• "We still don't know yet, because the allocation isn't high enough," said

Harry Howland, owner of the South Point Shell station in Wheeling.

• "I don't know anything about it. The company informs me what to do and I do it," said Elmer Waskosky of Pay Less Stations in Wheeling.

• At the Montgomery Ward station in Mount Prospect, assistant manager Joe Urbansky said, "I don't know yet. We haven't gotten anything from our corporate office yet."

Bill's opponents among leading candidates

5 already in running for suburb RTA post

Jack Walsh

Robert Atcher

by KURT BAER

The last ballot had not been counted before speculation sprang up Wednesday on the possibility of a Northwest suburban appointee to the governing board of the new Regional Transportation Authority.

Among the names mentioned were Arlington Heights Village Pres. Jack Walsh, former Elk Grove Village Mayor Jack Pahl, Mount Prospect Mayor Robert D. Teichert and Schaumburg Mayor Robert O. Atcher.

Joseph A. Tecson, Riverside Township Republican committeeman and unsuccessful aspirant last fall for the GOP's county board slate, also is regarded as a likely candidate.

Floyd Fulle, influential Cook County commissioner who will help select two representatives from suburban Cook County to sit on the RTA board, said Wednesday he had a file of applicants "two inches thick."

"We started this thing a long time ago," Fulle said. "We'll set up some selection process. I'm not going to do this myself."

FULLE AND THREE other suburban commissioners must select two RTA board members within the next 28 days. (continued on page 2)

City considers zoning site for recycling center

Purchase of a site in the northern Rolling Meadows industrial park is being considered by city officials to establish a recycling center. The site would be rezoned along with another parcel sought by the Diamond Scrap Metal Co. for a scrap metal processing center.

Both plans, presented jointly for common rezoning, were to have been discussed for the first time last night during a special zoning commission hearing, but the presentation was postponed for 30 days at the request of the company and the city.

An exact date for the hearing has yet to be set.

Mayor Roland Meyer, representing the city, said last night purchase contracts for the approximate nine-acre site west of Rohlwing Road and south of Northwest Highway have yet to be finalized by the company. He said until final soil tests are made on the property and the purchase is confirmed the company would prefer to delay the hearing.

THE SITE IS presently zoned for single-family use and would require a zoning change to permit the recycling center and scrap metal processing center. The company and city are seeking a manufacturing zoning classification.

The special zoning commission will hear the proposals and forward a recommendation on the rezoning petition to the city council. The council will make the final decision on the rezoning.

Recycling presently takes place on the first and third Saturday of each month at the public works building.

In other action at the meeting, the commission also deferred until April 3, a recommendation to approve changes proposed in the Meadow Edge condominium project planned near Plum Grove School. The commission members, who are members of the Plan Commission, had scheduled a decision last night to recommend approval of several proposed land changes in the Meadow Edge project, being developed by Ed Zale.

Plans outlining the changes were not submitted until Tuesday, however, and members voted to defer the matter until the regular April 3 Plan Commission meeting in order to have time to review the changes.

Public works lists sidewalks to be repaired

The Rolling Meadows public works department has issued its list of city sidewalks areas tentatively scheduled for repairs this year.

Approximately 3,577.5 square feet of sidewalk has been proposed for repair by the department. That figure may increase, however, since the department will likely revise the list as city officials review and add to it.

No cost estimate has been made on the work, but City Engineer James Muldowney estimated Monday the figure will likely be in the neighborhood of $8,000. The cost would be included in the 1974-75 fiscal budget, which is still being prepared by city officials. The fiscal year begins May 1.

Sidewalks tentatively scheduled for repairs include:

- 4205 Linden Lane.
- Cardinal Drive School.
- 3508 Fremont St.
- 3625 Fremont St.
- 3604 Fremont St.
- 2904 Rohlwing Rd.

7th hopeful joins school board race

Another person has entered the race for the three seats on the Palatine-Rolling Meadows Dist. 15 school board election April 13.

Margie Kutz, who unsuccessfully ran for the board last year, recently took out a petition to run for election this spring. Mrs. Kutz said Wednesday that she plans to file her petition before the deadline date of 4 p.m. Friday.

Mrs. Kutz, 43, who has two children at

Margie Kutz

Lincoln School, said she is running for the same reasons she ran last year.

Last year, Mrs. Kutz said every school board needs a mother's point of view. Since mothers are home most of the day, she said, they have greater access to other parent's ideas and opinions on education. She added that she receives feedback from parents that never reaches the board.

Mrs. Kutz is a member of Kiwi Club, the Lincoln PTA and Christ Lutheran Church. She is a graduate of Valjejo College—American Airlines stewardess college.

THE OTHER SIX candidates who have filed their petitions include the three incumbents Everett Charlier, J. Leslie Ehringer and Howard Meadows. Newcomers are Palatine residents Mrs. Rosamond Von Mayr, 2160 S. Elm Rd.; Robert Bliss, 533 Echo Lane, and Warren Franczyk, 1059 Old Mill Dr.

Charlier, who has been on the board for three years, is an assistant principal in Arlington Heights School Dist. 25. Ehringer, a 10-year veteran of the board, is manager of Interline and International Sales for United Air Lines. Meadows, running for his seventh three-year term, is partner in Hewitt Associates of Libertyville, a firm of actuaries.

Believe it—it's spring!

Today is the first full day of spring.

It officially began Wednesday at 7:07 p.m., when the sun made its yearly appearance over the equator, which is known as the vernal equinox.

In California Tuesday, specifically at San Juan Capistrano, the swallows returned, as they have for at least 175 years. They made the 3,000-mile flight from Argentina to the cheers of thousands of townspeople.

Local residents call it "Swallows Homecoming Day" ever since the birds began coming back to the same spot every year on the date since March 18, 1793.

Locally, area park districts and golf courses are preparing their grounds for the increase in outdoor sports and other activities.

Gardeners are preparing for better days ahead, culminated in the warm summer months when plants and flowers take full bloom.

But some people are wondering why anyone would even talk about spring.

"It's 35 degrees outside! What do you mean, spring?"

School district not at top of list for state funding

The Palatine-Rolling Meadows Dist. 15 School Board has lost the first round in its attempts to obtain state funding for over half the cost of a new school in the Winston Knolls area.

State officials, visiting the schools that have the first priority on the $100 million allocated for school construction next year, are not visiting Dist. 15. Assistant Supt. for Business William Colburn told a committee of the whole meeting last night.

But the board will still go ahead with plans for a new school on the west side of the district, the committee agreed. "The kids are going to be here," Colburn said, adding that the district should start planning for an influx of youngsters from new developments in the west.

COLBURN ADDED that the district may still receive the funding. He said that several of the districts with high-priority ratings still have to pass building referendums, convincing their voters to pay part of the cost for a new school.

If these referendums fail, the money will be allocated to other districts with a lower priority, Colburn said. He added that he does not know where Dist. 15 stands on the priority list in relation to other schools.

Priority is based on the amount of students over and above what a district's existing facilities can handle.

DIST. 15 HAS already passed a $3.5 million referendum for the construction of two schools. With the extra money from the state funding program, the district could have built three schools instead of two, according to Colburn.

Dist. 15 administrators say all three schools will be needed in the near future. Present estimates, based on existing plans for housing developments, predict a student expansion of over 4,700 in the southwest area alone within the next decade.

The possible $150,631 the district may receive for money paid out this year on existing construction debts, is not affected, Colburn said. He added that, at present, it looks as if the district may receive the full amount. A final decision on the refund is expected sometime in April, he said.

'For a limited time'

Arlington leans to bus firm subsidy

by KURT BAER

A majority of the Arlington Heights Village Board apparently is ready to subsidize the Metron System Co.—at least for a limited time and in limited amounts.

Trustees, contacted by The Herald yesterday, generally said they still believe that a commuter bus service is a good idea, and should be tested a little while longer before it is dropped.

Each board member, however, said he would withhold final judgment until Metron's books are reviewed by the village administration. The financially-troubled company has asked for a $2,000 monthly operating subsidy in order to continue running in Arlington Heights.

"I find myself to be at least open-minded about a subsidy on a short-term basis, with the assumption that the State of Illinois is going to come through with a subsidy of its own," said Arlington Heights Village Pres. Jack Walsh.

METRON PRESIDENT Claude Luisada says he expects a $15,000 subsidy from the Illinois Department of Transportation. However, actual payment has been held up since the end of February.

"I think it would be very harmful to have a break in the bus service, where it is dropped and then started up again if the state comes through," Walsh said.

Within a month to six weeks, Metron should know whether the state money is going to be available, Walsh said. If it is, the funds almost certainly would be used to reimburse the village for its subsidy.

"You never feel too good about something like this. However, I think I'm inclined to go along with a subsidy, but not for too long a period," said Trustee David Griffin.

He suggested that the subsidy money might be drawn from Arlington Heights' revenue sharing — federal funds given to municipalities for use locally. "I think this is an area of expanded service where revenue sharing might really be long."

GRIFIN SAID HE would be against a permanent operating subsidy "for a couple hundred riders, especially since some of them come from areas outside the village."

In addition to three routes between the train station and subdivisions in Arlington Heights, Metron picks up riders from Buffalo Grove and Wheeling.

"I don't think a subsidy is anything that should be unexpected," said Trustee Richard Durava.

"The Village of Arlington Heights has no reason to expect it can do what virtually no one else in the country has been able to do, that is, run a bus company that makes money."

He also pointed to the high cost of providing additional commuter parking near the train station.

"I'm not totally opposed to the idea of a subsidy, but I think we have to take a hard look at it," said Trustee Frank Palmatier, chairman of the village board's finance committee.

HE SAID THAT revenue sharing probably could be used for the subsidy, adding however that he was "not enamored" with that prospect.

Mugalian to face contest in November

by TONI GINETTI

Incumbent 2nd District Democratic State Rep. Richard A. Mugalian may be fighting hard to retain his legislative seat in November.

With official votes in from three of the four counties encompassed by the sprawling district, Democratic challenger David Carey of Elgin apparently outpolled Mugalian by almost 1,700 votes. Running a distant third in the race was James Moats of Glendale Heights. The totals entitle both Carey and Mugalian to positions on the November ballot.

Mugalian indicated Wednesday, however, that he is confident of defeating Carey for the Democratic seat in the all-important November contest.

"I feel I will win in November," he said. "I'm really very confident." The Palatine Democrat said he ran almost no campaign for the legislative seat and concentrated instead on what was expected to be a close race to retain his committeeman post in Palatine Township against the challenge of Peter Gerling.

Mugalian beat Gerling by some 600 votes in an easy victory.

UNOFFICIAL TOTALS Wednesday gave Carey a total of 10,417½ votes to 8,720 for Mugalian and 3,084 for Moats. Final figures from Kane, Lake and DuPage Counties showed Carey a big victor in DuPage and Kane counties, while Mugalian out-tallied Carey by some 300 votes in Lake County and by some 1,000 votes in Palatine Township.

In Cook County overall, however, unofficial figures Wednesday showed Carey taking 4,561½ votes to only 4,062 for Mugalian. Carey ran particularly well in Hanover Township where he reportedly had received strong support from the regular Democratic organization.

The victory will mean Carey's name will be listed above Mugalian's on the November Democratic ballot. The top position is regarded as a vote-getting advantage and may be a factor in a close race.

Only one Democrat is likely to be elected to represent the district along with Republican incumbents Leo LaFleur of Bloomingdale and John Friedland of South Elgin.

"I'm surprised he did so well," Mugalian said of Carey's vote total. "I didn't know how much he was spending on media campaigning. I was running pretty much just on my record. We were more concerned with the committeeman race."

CAREY, HOWEVER, called the upset a declaration from the voters. "I went out and worked the precincts. I think everyone who supported me. It's the people that did this. I just presented my views."

The 35-year-old Carey, who is a member of State School Supt. Michael J. Bakalis' staff, would not predict the outcome of his November fight with Mugalian but conceded the contest "will be a tough race."

"November is a long way off," he said. "All I can say is I'll do my best."

Moats was unavailable for comment

Flood plain building change?

An amendment to the city ordinances regarding building on flood plain land may be proposed at the next city council meeting to close a loophole in the ordinance.

The public works building and zoning committee this week indicated it may recommend the amendment to stop developers from filling in low elevation land on and near flood plain areas before building. The loophole allows developers to obtain a permit from the city to fill low land and then develop it at a later time without meeting otherwise required restrictions.

The loophole came to light this week when developer Friedrich Walter requested a permit from the city to fill land on East Frontage Road and Central Road. Walter had proposed to build a nursing home on the same site but was turned down last month after residents from the area protested that the development would increase serious flood problems on their lots.

Walter has indicated to city officials he may petition again to build the nursing home there.

City Engineer James Muldowney said Monday filling the land to raise the elevation would not change the drainage pattern on the site, but an official from the North Cook County Soil and Conservation Department has told the city it is looking into the legality of the action.

IN OTHER ACTION a recommendation to amend the city building code to eliminate the use of masonry brick foundations in single family home construction will be made by the committee to the city council.

Building inspector Donald McDade requested the move saying the masonry foundation is not as good as the cement foundation, which is more widely used. He added plans to use the cheaper masonry foundation in the Rywick Village subdivision, to be built on Kirchoff and East Frontage Roads, have been proposed.

The recommendation will be made to the council Tuesday.

Alan Douglas to entertain parish festival

Professional entertainer Alan Douglas of Rolling Meadows will perform at St. Colette's first parish festival this weekend.

Five plays will start at 7:30 p.m. Friday and Saturday in the church basement, 3900 Meadow Dr., Tickets at $5 each are available at the door.

Douglas will be joined by his son, Gary, and Keith Phillips of the group Deliverance.

Douglas, one of the original Three Twins from 1946, has been touring the country since that time and performed on several radio shows. He has also performed in Las Vegas and Florida Localities. Douglas has been on stage at All-gauer's and Arlington Park Towers.

Phillips and Gary Douglas, both graduates of Forest View High School, formed their group four years ago, and since then have been on television, cut records and performed in Florida, Colorado and locally.

Zoners to study contractor's office request

Application for a contractor's office and shop will be discussed April 5 by the Cook County Zoning Board of Appeals for 4½ acres at the northwest corner of Quentin Road and Wood Street.

The rezoning request by David J. Griffin and Frank Gehard was originally submitted for a November hearing, but that request was withdrawn and returned with a different rezoning classification.

Owners of the project are now asking for zoning for a restricted manufacturing district, instead of the general district in their previous petition. The project is expected to receive heavy criticism by neighboring homeowners.

The public hearing will be in the Palatine Village Hall, 54 S. Brockway St., Palatine, at 3 p.m.

Other applicants scheduled for presentations on that date are:

Wheeling woman raped at knife point

A Wheeling woman, 24, was abducted from the lobby of her apartment building and taken to a deserted construction site where she was raped early Wednesday, Wheeling police said.

Police are looking for a man about six feet tall, 170 pounds, white and between age 22 and 25. He was driving a red or maroon older model Chevrolet or Ford, Police Lt. Ronald Nelson said.

The man, wearing a red-ski-type mask, grabbed the woman as she entered the lobby of her apartment building, about 12:05 a.m. police said. He reportedly held a six-inch knife to her throat and told her to cooperate.

Police said the attacker put a stocking hat over his victim's face and then led her outside to his automobile. The attacker then drove the woman to a construction site which police believe was at Tahoe Village, Buffalo Grove Road north of Hintz road.

Police said the woman was raped there and then returned to her own street. She ran to a neighbor's apartment and called police. This was about 12:35 a.m., police said.

Nelson said the name of the apartment complex was being withheld so as not to panic the residents. He said he would want the residents to form any kind of vigilante group to try and find the attacker.

City's chipping program to start

The city chipping program will officially begin April 1. The city chipper will then begin a regular route picking up twigs and branches for removal.

The new program will cover the city by sections, with four designated areas to be outlined. Each area will be covered for a two-week period.

The four areas have yet to be specifically outlined by public works officials.

Residents should collect twigs and branches and tie them in bundles to be left on the parkway. Branches should be no greater than four feet in length.

Parks to limit hockey school

The Rolling Meadows Park Board will limit the park district's annual Ubrico Hockey School to two weeks this summer because of competition from neighboring rinks.

The board has agreed to hold two sessions, one for 8 to 10 year olds and the other for 11 to 14 year olds. Each session will run the full two weeks, from June 17 to June 22 and from June 24 to June 29.

Cost is $50 per week per resident. Non-resident fees are $60 per person per week. However, nonresidents who were members of the Rolling Meadows Park District hockey teams this season will be charged the regular resident fees.

Rudy Nelson, sports complex coordinator, said that there were too many ice rinks in the area for the park district to fill more than two sessions. However, if enough youngsters sign up for hockey lessons, more sessions can be added, he said.

Last year, the park district offered three six week sessions. Several of these were dropped and others were not filled completely, Nelson said.

Decorator to plan lounge at library

The Rolling Meadows Library Board has asked an area interior decorator to develop plans for the library's planned student lounge.

Dolores Augustine of Augustine Home Interiors, 2206 Algonquin Rd., Rolling Meadows, said Wednesday that she hopes to have a presentation finished by the April 2 board meeting at 8 p.m., in the library, 3110 Martin Lane.

After the presentation, the board will probably make a decision on whether to engage Mrs. Augustine as their decorator, board members said.

Library board president Rodney Dahlin said the board agreed to talk to Mrs. Augustine because she had been recommended by several persons and was the only interior decorator located in Rolling Meadows.

"We like to work as local as possible," Dahlin said.

THE PROPOSED lounge area will follow architectural drawings made about a year and a half ago, Dahlin said. It will be in the central portion of the upper level of the library, between the entrance and the reference room.

A total of $25,000 is slated for the project, which includes furniture for the trustees board room and cabinets and shelving for the children's section.

The lounge will consist of a magazine rack, comfortable chairs and couches and some audio visual equipment, Dahlin said. No decision has been made on the type of audio visual equipment to be installed. The board is considering phonographs, cassette players, tape decks and films, among others.

The lounge is being developed especially for high school age youths, Dahlin said. He added that children had a special wing downstairs and the adults had their wing on the east side of the building, but there was no special place for teenagers.

"Now we'll have something for everybody," Dahlin said.

Gas on Sundays? Nixon may have to man the pumps

A Herald staff report
Few gasoline dealers in the Northwest suburbs plan to return to a seven-day-a-week operation as indicated in a spot check of local dealers. This despite President Nixon's announcement Tuesday that he is withdrawing the request for voluntary Sunday closings by dealers. The request for Sunday closings had been effective since last Nov. 25.

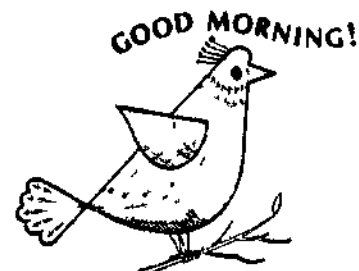

A sampling of 37 dealers turned up the following results: 21 do not plan to open their stations on Sunday, 13 said 'maybe' they will do so, and 3 said they will open their stations Sunday.

The American Automobile Assn., said 17 per cent of the nation's service stations were open last Sunday, compared with 11 per cent in January and 12 per cent in February.

A resounding 'no' to questions about Sunday sales is indicated in these comments from Northwest suburban dealers:

• John Molick of Molick's Standard Service in Des Plaines: "No. I found out what it's like to be home with my wife and family after 12 years in this business, and I like it."

• At Frank's Gas for Less in Des Plaines, a spokesman said: "Ask Nixon, where do I get the gas? If I could get more gas, I would be glad to stay open on Sunday to accommodate my customers."

Park director charged with showing favoritism

About 15 angry members of the Hoffman Estates Athletic Assn. (HEAA) confronted the Hoffman Estates Park Board of Commissioners Tuesday night and accused Director Al Binder of favoritism toward another community athletic organization and lack of cooperation with the HEAA.

receiving a written permit for use of fields at the Hillcrest park-school site for soccer fields. But once the soccer field usage for Sundays was assured, the HEAA members turned to lambasting shortcomings of various parks and alleged favoritism by Binder, who is the secretary of the board for the Hoffman Estates Community Baseball Assn. (HECBA).

who also sits on the board of the HECBA, denied that there was a feud brewing between the two athletic associations, but said the HEAA members had attended the meeting to clarify the park board's policy of field assignments.

Double payoff in zone scandal?

by NANCY COWGER

Former Hoffman Estates officials may have been paid off twice for rezoning the same parcels of land, Edward B. Stulberg revealed yesterday, testifying in the federal trial of Bernard M. Peskin in the Kaufman and Broad Homes Inc., zoning bribery scandal.

Stulberg, K&B's former vice president for land acquisition and zoning, said yesterday Peskin told him the village officials had already collected bribes to zone the land for a retirement community.

Peskin, former attorney for K&B, is on trial before U.S. District Court Judge Frank J. McGarr on bribery, conspiracy and tax evasion charges. He was indicted Oct. 26 along with six past village officials and K&B. The village personnel pleaded guilty and McGarr sentenced them to federal prisons. K&B pleaded no contest to paying $100,000 in bribes, and was fined $50,000.

Peskin allegedly told Stulberg in April 1968 that Ross Cortese, owner of Rossmore Corp., paid a bribe to obtain zoning for a Leisure World, similar to Rohnmoor's west coast developments.

Cortese held more than 3,000 acres, most of which was condemned for Cook County forest preserve. K&B bought the rest. While Stulberg testified he thought at the time Peskin had handled Cortese's zoning petition, he said he later learned Peskin had not. He then attributed Peskin's statement to rumor, he said.

Peskin's alleged Cortese bribe when he told Stulberg the village officials wanted $25,000 to grant K&B high-density multiple-family zoning for 320 acres of Barrington Square, said Stulberg. The K&B bribe request was linked to $100,000 by fall of 1968 because of public opposition to K&B's plan, Stulberg has said. Another $25,000 was sought later for a second part of Barrington Square, a 90-acre tract.

Kickback indictments expected

A Cook County Grand Jury is expected to return indictments against two Schaumburg village employees, a district worker and as many as 21 other suburban officials from at least 10 communities at 11 a.m. today before Chief Criminal Court Judge Joseph E. Power.

One village employee could face 11 charges of bribery, official misconduct and conflict of interest in connection with kickbacks from municipal chemical purchases, according to a source in the Cook County State's Atty's office.

A four-month investigation has identified numerous suburban officials alleged to have accepted merchandise certificates cash or U.S. Savings Bonds in return for influencing chemical purchases from eight firms whose records have been subpoenaed, the source said.

Believe it—it's spring!

Today is the first full day of spring.

It officially began Wednesday at 7:07 p.m., when the sun made its yearly appearance over the equator, which is known as the vernal equinox.

In California Tuesday, specifically at San Juan Capistrano, the swallows returned, as they have for at least 175 years. They made the 3,000-mile flight from Argentina to the cheers of thousands of townspeople.

Local residents call it "Swallows Homecoming Day" ever since the birds began coming back to the same spot every year on the date since March 19, 1799.

Locally, area park districts and golf courses are preparing their grounds for the increase in outdoor sports and other activities.

Gardeners are preparing for better days ahead, culminated in the warm summer months when plants and flowers take full bloom.

But some people are wondering why anyone would even talk about spring.

"It's 35 degrees outside! What do you mean, spring?"

SCHAUMBURG FIREFIGHTERS SHOVEL up the remaining ashes from a garbage can fire yesterday in the kitchen of the Lancer Steak House, 50 E. Algonquin Rd. Chief Lloyd Abrahamson said the fire was apparently contained by an overhead sprinkler. Firemen were summoned about 7 a.m. The fire was evidently caused by a cigaret.

Zoners weigh project

Schaumburg Zoning Board of Appeals members were deliberating the merits at press time last night of a new Campanelli Brothers development, calling for 26 per cent three-bedroom units.

Approval of the project would set a precedent, since present planned unit development guidelines now allow for a maximum 15 per cent three-bedroom units.

Planned for 133 acres on the north side of Wise Road near Braintree Drive in the south end of the village, plans for the development call for 359 two-bedroom units, 148 three-bedroom units and 134 single-family homes.

Multiple units, consisting of townhouse condominiums, would be offered in three styles; single family homes are planned for construction in eight existing Camp-anelli styles, using a minimum lot size of 6,500 square feet. Condominiums are planned to sell from $38,000 to $50,000; single-family homes would range in price from $39,000 to $60,000.

ACCORDING TO John Brenner, a Campanelli engineer, Schaumburg Township Dist. 54 has expressed tentative approval of a builder-donated school site which would accommodate 414 children.

A Wheeling woman, 24, was abducted from the lobby of her apartment building and taken to a deserted construction site where she was raped early Wednesday, Wheeling police said.

cussed, said Stulberg, and took place in a back room of Jenkins hardware store. Stulberg said he told Jenkins general plans for the project and information on K&B's background, including financial statements. The second was a lunch date at which Peskin's former law partner, Earl Deutsch, joined Stulberg and Peskin. The meeting was in about August, 1966, in a Hinsdale restaurant. Stulberg said bribes were not discussed in his presence then, but Deutsch and Peskin asked him to leave them alone for about 15 minutes and then called him back.

Stulberg also clarified the procedure chosen to pay the bribes. First, he said, $30,000 was given to Peskin, disguised as attorney fees, with half to go to the trustees and half to pay Peskin's income tax on the total. Then, said Stulberg, the remaining $75,000 due on the 320-acre parcel was to be paid as occupancy permits were issued for the project, at the rate of $100 per permit. Peskin would receive the money as attorney fees, and distribute half to the village officials, again using the other half to pay his taxes.

Stulberg said only $100,000 ever was paid to Peskin, and $50,000 of that was justifiable legal fees. Only $25,000 ever reached village officials, said Stulberg.

However, the indictment charges that Peskin kept $50,000 and gave $50,000 to the village officials.

Park director charged

HEAA was attacking him, but added, "Some people still feel that Al Binder and the park district are trying to slowly take over the HEAA." Binder referred to the instrumental role played by him and the park district in the merger to form the HECBA.

The HEAA was also angry about sharing the community sign with a HECBA message, Binder said. Binder added that the sign-up book for the sign showed that the HECBA had applied for usage about three weeks ago for this week, but that on Monday, HECBA had been mysteriously scratched from the book, and HEAA put in its place. The cost for weekly rental of both sides is $20. He said the HECBA has not paid for usage, but intends to pay after the next board meeting.

THE HEAA MEMBERS complained that park district employees on park district time were used to help register youngsters for the HECBA summer baseball program. However, the HEAA never requested assistance, and the HECBA did, park commissioners said.

"How can you condemn the fact that we conduct registration for a group that requested it, when you didn't?" queried Board Pres. Fred Weaver, noting that the park district would assist any community organization requesting help.

Binder said the HEAA group was indirectly attacking Comr. George Rush, president of the HECBA who sits on the board of the HEAA.

"We've given nothing but complete cooperation in the past to directly assist the HECBA just as we would assist any organization requesting assistance," Binder said, adding that the role of the park district was to meet the leisure needs of the community.

"IT WAS THE first time the HEAA said I failed to cooperate with them. I was amazed and shocked."

Binder, who volunteered some spare time as an umpire for the HEAA and has a son who will compete in the association said his role as HECBA secretary is to as a communicator with the park board to enhance cooperation.

The park director added that it would do no good for Rush and himself to disassociate themselves from the HECBA.

Binder said he was accused of telling park district employees they cannot attend park board meetings. He denied the allegation. Hagen's wife, Josephine, is Binder's executive secretary, and she did not attend Tuesday's meeting.

"WHEN WE FIRST hired her (Mrs. Hagen), she said she did not want to be in a middle situation between the HEAA and the park district and that she would avoid this by not attending meetings," Binder noted. "I have had a perfect staff — at least I thought so. Apparently, some employees are dissatisfied with the operation of the park district."

Concerning the assignment of fields for athletic usage, park commissioners said the number of fields was very limited because of a lack of developed sites and a delay in park construction by a contractor.

Comr. George Seaver told the HEAA group: "There is only so many fields. Someone has to cut the pie. We're a small park district with baseball diamonds on school grounds. This is all we have to work with."

Members of the group complained about having "to come begging" for suitable athletic fields.

Evelyn O'Shea, 137 Valley Ln., said, "I wanted to buy a home in this area, but when I see all this garbage, I don't want to buy a home here."

JACK SCIALAEBE, a football coach for the HEAA, said one of his players needed knee surgery because "he stepped in a chuckhole." "With these fields we were pretty lucky we didn't have any serious injuries."

George Webber, athletic trainer for the HEAA and part-time trainer for Conant High School and DePaul University, said there were many twisted ankles and cuts during the football season. He added that because of sparse grass at the sites, the youngsters played in "cold mud" which resulted in many colds.

Hagen said, "Every year they promise the fields will be done, and they're not. They've (park commissioners) been promising fields since the year one."

Binder explained that the athletic fields take a constant pounding once fair weather arrives until the first snowfall. The grass wears out, and there is no time to really care for the fields, he said.

Comr. Tom Barber told the HEAA group that the park board was aware of the group's problems. "Yes, we know the condition of the fields. Yes, we have failed in the construction of fields."

Sticky problem

Frank Lloyd Wright's photo becomes collector's item when it's on 2-cent stamp

by JUDY JOBBITT

Frank Lloyd Wright's photo has become precious overnight, at least as seen on two-cent stamps, because of a shortage of the stamps in Hoffman Estates and Schaumburg post offices.

With the postal rate increase for first class mail from eight cents to 10 cents on March 2, post offices have been hit with increased purchases of two-cent stamps to fill out eight-cent stamps left over after the increase.

Because of the increased buying, the Hoffman Estates and Schaumburg post offices have had a shortage of one, two and three-cent stamps this month. At one point the offices even posted an "out of stamps" sign in the window to warn customers who wanted to buy the lower denominations.

Merrill Packard of Hoffman Estates said he has had problems getting the stamps he needs. "I've been to the Hoffman Estates post office about three times and can't get any one, two or even three-cent stamps."

The secretary at Dr. A. de Ramos' office in Hoffman Estates has had the same problem. "There's not a single one or two-cent stamp at the post office. I have about 100 envelopes with eight-cent stamps left over," she said. "I'm just letting my postman check for me now."

ACCORDING TO Postmaster E. A. Budzyn in Roselle, an additional 200,000 two-cent stamps and 50,000 one-cent stamps were ordered for the two offices in anticipation of increased buying. Budzyn is in charge of the Hoffman Estates and Schaumburg offices as well as Roselle.

An additional 150,000 two-cent stamps were then ordered which were purchased almost as soon as they arrived, he said. Rather than buying the amount needed, he noted customers would buy one and two-cent stamps by the sheet. "Now they are buying eight-cent stamps because they overbought two-cent stamps," he said.

Other post offices have avoided the shortage. According to Postmaster Frank Fredro in Wheeling, he ordered an extra 250,000 two-cent stamps for March. Now he only has 30,000 left but he noted that sales for the lower denominations have dropped off within the past week.

"Normally, 4,000 two-cent stamps last us six weeks," he said. "The last time the rates increased, the postmaster at that time only ordered 50,000 extra two-cent stamps. This time we were prepared."

POSTMASTER Robert Proebstle in Arlington Heights ordered 800,000 additional two-cent stamps and has 150,000 left, while Postmaster Raphael J. Palubicki in Mount Prospect has only 13,000 left of the additional 200,000 he ordered.

Parks to end landscaper's contract

Park officials in Hoffman Estates hope to speed up overdue park improvement projects by dismissing a landscape contractor for non-performance.

The Hoffman Estates Park District Board of Commissioners Tuesday night voted 4-1 to terminate the contracts with Avondale Landscaping Co. of Lombard by April 3. Comr. Shirley Gibbons casted the dissenting vote, commenting that the termination should be made immediately.

Two major contracts were awarded to Avondale in 1972 for landscaping following the last park district referendum. Playground apparatus and other construction work at 17 park sites was included. About $15,000 worth of work remains of the contract total of $126,000.

AL BINDER, park district director, noted that the completion date of all construction had been tentatively set for last November and that equipment, employees and weather problems pushed back construction.

"The company has had days last month to work, but it didn't," Binder added.

Board Pres. Fred Weaver, who has been thoroughly disappointed with the long delays in park construction, said,

"We fully intend to go through with this unless there is a complete show of good faith. It has to be more than just start shaping up."

Weaver admitted that the termination might cost the park district more money than originally intended under Avondale's contract. Bids will be solicited, but it is anticipated that construction costs may have risen since the contracts were signed. Park district officials had no idea how much the increase might be.

When asked if the rebidding procedure and having a new contractor on the job would delay improvements even more, Weaver replied, "It may, or it may not speed things up."

BILL VAULKNER of the landscaping company assured the park board about two months ago he could have the entire project done by June 1. However, the company did not finish minor details at some parks during the last month, Weaver said.

Work periods ranging from one to three days for each of 14 parks is all that is probably needed for completion, Binder said.

Howard Kessler, park district architect, said adjustments were needed for playground apparatus and that shelters and a bridge over Cottonwood Creek needed to be completed. Major construction remains at Hillcrest and Fairview park-school sites, Kessler said.

Binder noted that the company had laid some drainage tile at Hillcrest and that tile was sticking out of the ground, putting the fields in poor shape.

Park district officials said a lot of pressure has been levied on Vaulkner to complete the work, but apparently not enough because Vaulkner had reportedly been working at other sites outside the community. Vaulkner was not available for comment.

The commissioners said the contract termination had been coming for a long time and that it did not result because about 20 irate members of Hoffman Estates Athletic Assn. at the meeting angrily complained about athletic field conditions at the various parks.

VAULKNER, WHO has been in regular attendance at board meetings, did not attend Tuesday night's session.

Vaulkner's company acted speedily last September when extreme pressure was applied by Winston Knolls subdivision residents who complained that lack of proper grading near Popular Creek created a rat problem for the neighborhood.

Gas on Sundays? Nixon may have to man the pumps

A Herald staff report
Few gasoline dealers in the Northwest suburbs plan to return to a seven-day-a-week operation, as indicated in a spot check of local dealers. This, despite President Nixon's announcement Tuesday that he's withdrawing the request for voluntary Sunday closings by dealers. The request for Sunday closings had been effective since last Nov. 25.
A sampling of 37 dealers turned up the following results: 21 do not plan to open their stations on Sunday; 13 said

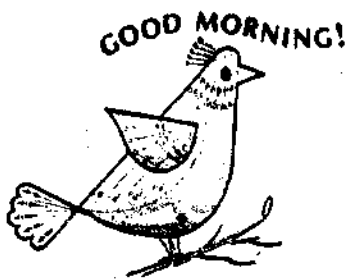

"maybe" they will do so, and 3 said they will open their station Sundays.
The American Automobile Assn., said 17 per cent of the nation's service stations were open last Sunday, compared with 11 per cent in January and 12 per cent in February.
A resounding "no" to questions about Sunday sales is indicated in these comments from Northwest suburban dealers:
• John Molick of Molick's Standard Service in Des Plaines: "No. I found out what it's like to be home with my wife and family after 12 years in this business, and I like it."

• At Frank's Gas for Less in Des Plaines, a spokesman said "Ask Nixon, where do I get the gas? If I could get more gas, I would be glad to stay open on Sunday to accommodate my customers."
• "The hell with what the President says. What does he know? He flies," said an attendant at John's Super Shell in Palatine.
• "I'm taking advantage of a good thing," said an attendant at Al's Enco in Rolling Meadows. Taking Sunday off is like getting away from "a big headache," he said.

• Jim Weber, day manager at Walden Mobil station in Schaumburg said "No we're not. Sunday is a bad day and we feel we have a day off coming, too."
• At the Arlington Heights Citgo station, 1001 S. Arlington Heights Rd., a spokesman said he doesn't have enough gas to open Sundays.
• "Hell no, I won't open," said Jack

Parker, operator of Arlington Park Arco in Arlington Heights. "People who need gas for Sundays can get it Saturday night or during the day."
• "When the banks are open Sundays, then I'll open on Sundays," said Jack Berndt at Jack's Marathon station in Prospect Heights. He's been closed for a year on Sundays.
AMONG THE "maybe" responses are the following comments:
• "We still don't know yet, because the allocation isn't high enough," said

Harry Howland, owner of the South Point Shell station in Wheeling.
• "I don't know anything about it. The company informs me what to do and I do it," said Elmer Waskosky of Pay Less Stations in Wheeling.
• At the Montgomery Ward station in Mount Prospect, assistant manager Joe Urbanus said, "I don't know yet. We haven't gotten anything from our corporate office yet."

Bill's opponents among leading candidates

5 already in running for suburb RTA post

Jack Walsh

Robert Atcher

by KURT BAER
The last ballot had not been counted before speculation sprang up Wednesday on the possibility of a Northwest suburban appointee to the governing board of the new Regional Transportation Authority.
Among the names mentioned were Arlington Heights Village Pres. Jack Walsh, former Elk Grove Village Mayor Jack Pahl, Mount Prospect Mayor Robert D. Teichert and Schaumburg Mayor Robert O. Atcher.
Joseph A. Tecson, Riverside Township Republican committeeman and unsuccessful aspirant last fall for the GOP's county board slate, also is regarded as a likely candidate.

Floyd Fulle, influential Cook County commissioner who will help select two representatives from suburban Cook County to sit on the RTA board, said Wednesday he had a file of applicants "two inches thick."
"We started this thing a long time ago," Fulle said. "We'll set up some selection process. I'm not going to do this myself."
FULLE AND THREE other suburban commissioners must select two RTA board members within the next 28 days, (continued on page 2)

Restaurant proposed for former grocery store

by MARCIA KRAMER
Plans are being formulated to open a major restaurant, specializing in banquets, in downtown Mount Prospect.
A father-son team has proposed remodeling the former A&P grocery store at the southwest corner of Central Road and Main Street for a 500-seat banquet hall, tentatively called Palais Versailles.
The move would join the Mount Prospect State Bank in leading the revitalization of downtown Mount Prospect. The A&P store has been vacant for several weeks.
Paul and Chris Samatas, who formerly owned Novak and Charlies (now the Evans) restaurant in downtown Mount Prospect and One Hoss Shay (now the Brown Derby) restaurant in downtown Palatine, were given a somewhat favorable response when they approached the finance committee of the Mount Prospect Village Board for a liquor license for the proposed banquet hall.
Trustee Kenneth V. Scholten, chairman of the committee, said he is "not adverse to the idea, but I would like to see specific plans." Trustee E. F. Richardson said he "would look favorably upon this," and Trustee Patrick J. Link said "the concept sounds acceptable," but both also said they wanted to see further plans.
The property is already zoned for business use, so no rezoning is necessary. The plans will be scrutinized, however, for building and health requirements.

Greek night club planned

A former figure salon in Golf Plaza at Golf and Busse roads in Mount Prospect may be converted to a night club.
Arthur Kare of Chicago, has suggested that the former Eleanor Stevens Figure Salon at 1717 W. Golf Rd. be remodeled for a night club, featuring Greek cuisine.
Kare has been in the food business since 1957, and has been associated with the Athens Restaurant on Rush Street in Chicago.
PAUL SAMATAS currently lives in Addison and his son, Chris, in Palatine, but the younger Samatas indicated he would move to Mount Prospect if a liquor license is granted. The license holder must live in the village.
As described by the Samatases, the restaurant would be open for lunch and for Sunday brunch, but would specialize in banquets and catering. Up to 500 could be seated for a banquet. Some 155 parking spaces are currently provided north of the site.
Chris Samatas said the A&P site was chosen because "it's an ideal location — easy accessibility, parking, population . .

Kare applied to the finance committee of the Mount Prospect Village Board for a license to dispense beer and wine. The discussion was continued until April 15.
Village Trustee Kenneth V. Scholten, chairman of the finance committee, said, "I have one hangup with that location: a parking problem. At times, there is no place to park."
The property is in the shopping center at the southwest corner of Golf and Busse. It is owned by Salvatore DiMucci.
Robert Bennett, chairman of the central business district planning committee, said the new restaurant "sounds like a good idea. My gut feeling is that it wouldn't necessarily help anyone in Mount Prospect — people would come for the banquet and leave. But it shouldn't hurt anything either," he added.
The restaurant would be the second major new structure in downtown Mount Prospect. The Mount Prospect State Bank has announced plans to relocate a block east of its present site at 15 E. Busse Ave., with groundbreaking scheduled for this spring.

Municipal bus service may be reality

Have you ever wanted to take a bus to the train station in the morning? To Randhurst for shopping? To Aunt Minnie's for lunch? Municipal bus service may become a reality in Mount Prospect.
Metron Systems Corp., which has its office in Mount Prospect but is based primarily in Arlington Heights, has offered to analyze Mount Prospect's bus needs and to design a system to meet those needs.
Metron's request has been turned over to the village board's fire and police committee for discussion April 3.
Claude Luisada, president of Metron, told the Herald yesterday the consultant work, if contracted by the village, would be the first of three phases.
THE SECOND WOULD be to implement a bus system — obtaining equipment and setting up routes. The final step would be to draw up a contract for Metron to operate the system.
"The system would be Mount Prospect's," Luisada said. "Metron simply would be retained to manage it."
Luisada said, "I don't think there's any question" that a bus system is needed in the village. "We would have to determine what the specific needs are and design a system to meet those needs, then sell the system to the people," he said.
Various alternatives include operating a bus to and from the railroad station; a "dial-a-bus" that makes pickups on request; or a regular route system. Luisada said he would also consider a bus route connecting Mount Prospect and Arlington Heights, where Metron has been operating routes since last September.
The bus company has encountered financial difficulties, and has told Arlington Heights officials it may go bankrupt without an estimated $2,000 a month subsidy. Metron recently approached Rolling Meadows officials about setting up a bus operation in that city, but no decision has been reached.

Believe it—it's spring!

Today is the first full day of spring.
It officially began Wednesday at 7:07 p.m., when the sun made its yearly appearance over the equator, which is known as the vernal equinox.
In California Tuesday, specifically at San Juan Capistrano, the swallows returned, as they have for at least 175 years. They made the 3,000-mile flight from Argentina to the cheers of thousands of townspeople.
Local residents call it "Swallows Homecoming Day" ever since the birds began coming back to the same spot every year on the date since March 18, 1799.

Locally, area park districts and golf courses are preparing their grounds for the increase in outdoor sports and other activities.
Gardeners are preparing for better days ahead, culminated in the warm summer months when plants and flowers take full bloom.
But some people are wondering why anyone would even talk about spring.
"It's 35 degrees outside! What do you mean, spring?"

Village board wrapup

Downtown study by Kenroy off

Kenroy Inc., Skokie, has been withdrawn from consideration for conducting a study of downtown Mount Prospect. Mayor Robert D. Teichert announced Tuesday night at a meeting of the village board that he has decided to withdraw his suggestion that Kenroy be hired to study the revitalization of the central business district because of "adverse publicity."

Some village trustees and numerous residents raised questions concerning a possible conflict of interest over the hiring of Kenroy because the developer is engaged in several projects in the village. Kenroy developed the Huntington Commons development, as well as an industrial park in the south part of town, and is attempting to get permission from the village to develop the Rob Roy Golf Course in the northern sector.

THE FIRM WAS turned down by the village in an effort to convert the abandoned Central School in downtown Mount Prospect to high-rise housing for the elderly.

Questions also were raised about Kenroy's offering to conduct the study for about $10,000, far below the standard $25,000 fee for such studies.

More recently, Kenroy has been named as being under investigation by a federal grand jury in connection with the rezoning of the multi-million-dollar Edgewater Golf Course in Chicago.

The firm had been expected to be engaged by Mount Prospect for its downtown study, but Teichert encountered resistance to his suggestion to hire Kenroy at a planning meeting March 7. The village planning commission has been asked to recommend a firm to conduct a downtown study. With Kenroy out of the picture, Rolf C. Campbell and Associates, Lake Bluff, is expected to be given the task.

Street work to be studied

A list of $490,000 proposed street improvements has been referred to the village board's public works committee for study.

One trustee, George B. Anderson, voiced an objection to a $250,000 allotment to improve the intersection of S. Elmhurst Road and Lincoln Street. Anderson, an engineer, said the cost to the village should not exceed $75,000, with federal funds picking up the rest of the tab. The village plans to apply for a federal grant to improve the intersection.

The other major improvement proposed for this year is for installation of a pedestrian-activated traffic signal by Westbrook School on Busse Road, just south of Central Road. That cost is estimated at $40,000.

Other proposed improvements, mostly in the Hatlen Heights subdivision, to widen Lincoln Street, from Busse Road to Meier Road, and to repave Busse Avenue, from Main Street to Elm Street (downtown), Hatlen Avenue, from Central Road to Lincoln Street; Audrey Lane, from Central Road to Lincoln Street, and Bonita Avenue, from Lincoln Street to Busse Road. Estimated cost of the five projects is $200,000.

All of the road improvements would be paid from the village's motor fuel taxes, which the village receives from the state, based on gas sales and population.

100 new spaces at depot

The 100 new parking spaces at the Chicago and North Western Ry. depot in Mount Prospect are expected to be available by the end of May. Village Mgr. Robert J. Eppley told village trustees a new lease has been drawn up with the railroad, in which the railroad will foot part of the bill for expanding the parking lot.

Drainage position filled

James Soyka, 1757 Carlin Ln., has been appointed by Mayor Robert D. Teichert to fill a vacancy on the drainage and clean streams commission. Soyka succeeds William R. Demmert, 105 Hi-Lusi Ave., who resigned because of ill health.

Zoning board member named

In another appointment, Teichert named Robert Sherman, of 203 Stevenson Dr., to the zoning board of appeals, succeeding John Martino, who resigned.

Construction variations OKd

The village board has agreed to grant a variation to allow construction of the National Fraternal Society of the Deaf headquarters at 1300 W. Northwest Hwy., and a house at the northwest corner of George and Evergreen streets. No objections to either request for a variation were voiced at earlier public hearings.

Subdivision plans approved

The board also approved engineer plans and specifications for two subdivisions: Kaplan and Braun's Lincoln Square subdivision and Callero and Catino's Haven Gardens.

WORKMEN MOVED the Christine Busse house yesterday in downtown Mount Prospect. The house was the second to be moved to make way for the new, six-story Mount Prospect State Bank building. Groundbreaking for the building to be located block east of the present one, will be this spring.

Girls' athletics program may get a larger budget

Girls' interscholastic athletics may be getting a shot in the arm in the coming years in Elk Grove Township School District 59.

An eighth grade student at Grove Junior High School in Elk Grove Village, Karen Hauser, appeared before the school board Monday night, asking for funds which would make girls' athletics more equal to boys' athletics in the district.

Following Miss Hauser's presentation, the board directed the administration to consider upgrading girls' athletics when preparing the 1974-75 school budget. Work on the preliminary budget for next school year is nearing completion. No estimate was given on how much more money, if any, would go for girls' athletic activities.

MISS HAUSER cited a national magazine's survey which said only 5 per cent of the money in athletics is used for girls' sports. District Supt. James Ertvi said that figure was "probably true of our district, maybe more so."

"We're not asking to be on boys' teams," said Miss Hauser. "We want equal recognition of sports programs for girls."

In other action at Monday's board meeting, the board approved a grant of $4,165 towards renovation of a summer camp for special education youngsters.

The camp, located near Bartlett, was given to the Northwest Suburban Special Education Organization by the Illinois Department of Children and Family Services.

and is presently being renovated hopefully to be open this summer.

MUCH OF THE renovation is being accomplished through material and work donations. Supt. James Ertvi said it was estimated that no more than $50,000 would be needed to renovate the camp, due to the donations.

The district's share, based on its attendance in comparison with other school districts in a four township area which will use the camp, was estimated to be $4,165.

About $1,700 of the money will come from money left in the district's special education building fund, according to Ertvi. The rest will be made up by charging children a fee of $5 for attending the camp.

The board approved the allocation by a 6-0 vote. Board member Charles Knaup did not attend the meeting.

Hersey

No school Friday due to basketball

There will be no school tomorrow at Hersey High School.

Students will be dismissed for the day so they will be able to watch their team vie for the championship in the Illinois State High School Basketball Tournament. School officials said yesterday two bus loads of students have already signed up to travel to Champaign tomorrow morning. Eight more buses have been requested.

The Huskies will compete in quarter-finals at 12:15 p.m. tomorrow against the Bloom Township High School team from Chicago Heights. The winner will go on to semi-finals Saturday at noon. Finals will be held Saturday at 8 p.m.

Hersey principal Roland Gons said students will not make up the school day during spring vacation or at the end of the school year. A pep rally is planned for the team at noon, today and the players will leave for Champaign at 12:40 p.m. Gons said a homecoming celebration for the team is being planned for Sunday.

Village board gives cagers 'pat on back'

The Hersey High School basketball team was given a pat on the back by the Mount Prospect Village Board for the team's victorious showing in the state supersectionals Tuesday afternoon.

The trustees, meeting that night, unanimously approved a resolution wishing the team good luck in the Elite Eight tournament, which gets under way tomorrow in Champaign. About half of the Hersey student body lives in Mount Prospect.

Dist. 26 wrapup

Summer school signup May 8-11

Registration for summer school in Dist. 26 will be May 8 through May 11. The registration timetable as well as the summer school calendar were approved by the school board Tuesday.

Summer school classes will begin June 24 and run through July 30 with no classes held July 4 and 5.

Classes will be held at Bond School and River Trails Junior High. Program offerings will depend on registration but a tentative list of classes includes Scrambled Letters and Sounds, Lights, Camera, Action, Stop the Presses, Mini Courses in Arts and Crafts, Ecological Discoveries, and Get Ready for First Grade.

Libraries stay open

The board overruled an administration recommendation to limit the times for summer library hours. Instead, board members said all six school libraries should remain open throughout the summer schedule which runs from June 25 through Aug. 1.

The administration had suggested limiting the days and hours for opening school libraries in the summer because of declining use. The board thought, however, that school facilities exist for the public's use and should therefore not be limited in any way.

Sabbatical leaves OKd

The board approved two requests for sabbatical leaves for the 1974-75 school year. The approvals mark the first time in the district's history that sabbatical leaves have been requested and granted.

LeRoy Schenke will be attending the University of Western Colorado to obtain a Master's degree in industrial arts. Schenke has taught industrial arts at River Trails Junior High School for six years.

Jeanette Bucher, kindergarten teacher at Park View School for the past six years, will also be doing graduate work next year.

Both teachers will return to the district at the end of their leaves.

Dist. 57 wrapup

District 'very good'

Supt. Earl Sutter said the district has received a "very good" rating as a result of a recent visitation by a team from the Office of the Superintendent of Public Instruction.

Sutter said a scale of 1 to 5 was used to score the district with 5 being the highest score. The district averaged higher than 4 in its over-all rating on programs and facilities.

Sutter said a scale of 1 to 5 was used to score the district with 5 being the highest score. The district averaged higher than 4 in its over-all rating on programs and facilities.

Some recommendations on ways to improve programs included calling for the installation of an exhaust system in the industrial arts wood shop at Lincoln Junior High, reducing foreign language class sizes and adding more material aids for the math program.

Some of the OSPI recommendations have already been enacted. Among these has been the hiring of an art consultant and a counselor for the junior high.

NEC camp funded

The board approved a forward funding plan for the Sunrise Lake Camp operated by the Northwest Educational Cooperative (NEC).

NEC requested member districts to contribute funds to renovate the camp so it will be ready for use this summer. Dist. 57 voted to forward $2,250 toward the estimated $50,000 renovation cost. The money will be credited to the district at a rate of $5 per student as students use the camp.

Miss Mount Prospect entries being taken

Entries are being accepted for the 1974 Miss Mount Prospect pageant.

Participants must be at least 18 years of age by Sept. 2, and are not required to live in the village. The pageant will be conducted along the lines of the Miss America contest with judging based on appearance, talent, bathing suit and evening gown competition.

The winner will receive a scholarship and be eligible to compete in the Miss Illinois pageant. Last year's Miss Mount Prospect, Susan Bush, was second runner-up in the state competition.

The local pageant is being sponsored by the Mount Prospect Jaycees with the ceremony planned for June 22 at Prospect High School. Additional information on entering is available from Dennis L. Kinzel at 437-3730.

Canned food drive

St. James Catholic Church in Arlington Heights will sponsor a canned food drive this weekend to benefit the southside Chicago community of Englewood.

Canned goods will be collected at the church during the weekend Masses, and up until 3 p.m. Sunday.

PTA notes

Candidates for the Dist. 57 school board will speak at the Lincoln Junior High School PTA meeting Thursday at 7:30 p.m. at the school, 700 W. Lincoln, Mount Prospect.

The candidates include Edith Freund, Robert Novy, both incumbents and Arthur Vogelgesang. All have been endorsed by the Dist. 57 Caucus.

Exhibits of student work in art, home economics and industrial arts will be displayed. Refreshments will be served.

This will be the last meeting of the year.

Meeting slated to find answer in annex battle

A meeting to attempt an out-of-court settlement in the Liebling-Wheeling annexation battle has been scheduled for 2 p.m. April 4 at the State's Atty's office in Chicago's Civic Center.

Arnold Liebling, owner of the disputed 40 acres, has offered to only build apartments on half of his property and single-family homes on the remainder. Liebling had obtained apartment zoning for the whole 40 acres from Wheeling, but then a group of homeowners challenged Wheeling's annexation of the property.

An earlier court ruling stated that Wheeling's annexation of the property, east of Wheeling Road and north of Camp McDonald Road, was improper because the property was only only contiguous to Wheeling at one point.

HOWEVER, LIEBLING'S attorney has asked the court to rule on whether the objector, the Wheeling Road Zoning Committee, filed its objection too late.

The ruling on this legal point is expected April 19. However, Liebling made his compromise offer last month. Since then, Asst. State's Attorney Paul P. Biebel Jr. has been attempting to set up the meeting which will be held April 4.

Representatives from the Wheeling Road Zoning Committee and Liebling's attorney will attend the meeting.

Homeowners' petition opposes development

5 trustees must back Rob Roy plan

Five of seven Mount Prospect Village Board members would have to favor plans to develop the Rob Roy Golf Course before any plans could be approved.

A two-thirds majority vote of the board was necessitated this week when homeowners whose property is contiguous to the golf course submitted petitions opposing development of the course.

Some 81 Mount Prospect residents and an additional 65 Prospect Heights residents signed the petitions, which were presented to the board by Richard N. Hendricks, a village trustee, and Richard Wolf, of the Prospect Heights Improvement Association.

Generally, a simple majority — four of the seven board members — would have to vote in favor of a proposition to assure passage. When at least 20 per cent of the adjacent property owners object to a rezoning, however, an extraordinary two-thirds vote — five of the seven board members — is required for passage.

KENROY INC., Skokie, is asking the village to annex and rezone the 200-acre Rob Roy property, which is east of Wheeling road between Camp McDonald Road and Euclid Avenue, for 4,500 apartment and condominium units. The property is currently in unincorporated Wheeling Township.

The petitions opposing the development said the project "would not be in the public interest," citing "increased traffic, flooding and increased burden on local school districts" as reasons.

The village's zoning board of appeals, in a surprisingly close 3 to 2 vote, recommended March 7 that the village board reject the Kenroy plans. The submission of petitions signed by contiguous property owners presents an additional hurdle for the developer.

A vote on the project by the village board is not anticipated for awhile, as the board is proceeding with plans to conduct a referendum on whether residents would be willing to pay extra taxes to buy the golf course, in order to block development.

AT THEIR MEETING Tuesday night, the trustees hired two firms to appraise Rob Roy, which has been estimated at being worth between $4 and $10 million, with most estimates around $8 to $9 million.

The appraisals will be conducted by Muriello-Meyer and Associates, Elk Grove Village, and J. G. Hoppe Real Property Consultants, Oak Park, at a cost of $5,500. The studies will be done separately, said Mayor Robert D. Teichert, to give the trustees two independent views of the value of the golf course.

Teichert has indicated he believes purchase of the golf course by the village would cost homeowners around $30 a year for 20 years, or a total of $600 per household.

A RANDOM SAMPLING by The Herald has shown that property owners who live in the immediate vicinity of the golf course are anxious for the village to buy the course, and that property owners further from the course also are willing to chip in for the purchase.

If a referendum to buy the course is successful, the village would have the go-ahead to begin negotiations with the owners of the golf course, the McDonald family trust, and with the contract purchaser, Kenroy. If negotiations fail, the village would likely condemn the property and go to court in order to obtain the parcel.

In the event a referendum to buy the course is unsuccessful, the Kenroy development plans would be reviewed by the village board's building committee and eventually by the full board. If approved by five members of the board, construction would proceed. If rejected by the board, Kenroy would likely go to Cook County in an effort to rezone the golf course. If turned down by the county, Kenroy officials have stated, they would sue the county for the rezoning change.

$250,095 township budget asked; no tax hike seen

A budget of $250,095 for fiscal 1974-75 was proposed last night by the Wheeling Township Board of Auditors.

The proposed budget, subject to board approval next month after a public hearing, includes $191,245 for the town fund and $58,850 for the general assistance fund.

If approved, the budget will be an increase of $35,635 over last year's total budget of $214,460.

Township Assessor Marshall Theroux indicated that the tax rate on the proposed budget will "probably not change."

Last year residents of the township paid .028 per $100 assessed valuation.

The board also approved a $4,020 allocation to its cemetery budget or a 16 per cent increase in last year's figure of $3,475.

"The increases are due to the rising cost of living and expenses," said Ethel Kolerus, township supervisor.

A township assessor's budget of $21,072 was also approved by the board. This represents an increase of $5,390 or a 36 per cent increase over last year's allocation of $15,482. This category does not include the assessor's salary.

Theroux, in his presentation of the budget, told board members that there has been an increase of Wheeling Township residents who come in for information on assessments.

"There's an average of 40 people a day who come to the assessor's office," he said. "We need a higher knowledge on the tax structure." He added that with the increase in the assessor's budget, a full-time deputy assessor could be hired.

Mrs. Kolerus recommended to the board that funding for youth programs be increased from $5,000 to $25,000 next fiscal year.

Gas on Sundays? Nixon may have to man the pumps

A Herald staff report
Few gasoline dealers in the Northwest suburbs plan to return to a seven-day-a-week operation, as indicated in a spot check of local dealers. This, despite President Nixon's announcement Tuesday that he's withdrawing the request for voluntary Sunday closings by dealers. The request for Sunday closings had been effective since last Nov. 25.

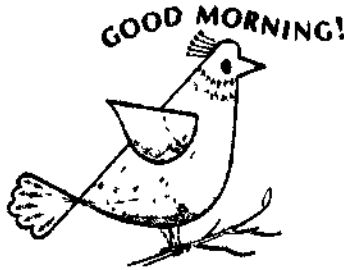

A sampling of 37 dealers turned up the following results: 21 do not plan to open their stations on Sunday; 13 said "maybe" they will do so, and 3 said they will open their station Sundays.

The American Automobile Assn., said 17 per cent of the nation's service stations were open last Sunday, compared with 11 per cent in January and 12 per cent in February.

A resounding "no" to questions about Sunday sales is indicated in these comments from Northwest suburban dealers.

John Molick of Molick's Standard Service in Des Plaines: "No. I found out what it's like to be home with my wife and family after 12 years in this business, and I like it."

At Frank's Gas, for Less in Des Plaines, a spokesman said "Ask Nixon, where do I get the gas? If I could get more gas, I would be glad to stay open on Sunday to accommodate my customers."

Village leans to subsidy for Metron bus company

A majority of the Arlington Heights Village Board apparently is ready to subsidize the Metron System Co.—at least for a limited time and in limited amounts.

clined to go along with a subsidy, but not for too long a period," said Trustee David Griffin.
He suggested that the subsidy money might be drawn from Arlington Heights' revenue sharing — federal funds given to municipalities for use locally. "I think this is an area of expanded service where revenue sharing might really belong."

"I think we have to take a good look at Mr. Luisada to see if he's the guy who should be running the bus company. I'm in favor of a bus company in town and I don't think it should be run by the village," said Trustee Ralph Claborn.
Trustee J. Burton Thompson said that, in general, he "favored a subsidy on a limited basis."

Park site study may be scrapped

A preliminary study of 21 possible park sites may have to be scrapped before it is considered by either the Arlington Heights Park Commission or the Arlington Heights Park District.
The study, prepared by village planner Joe Kesler, outlined a land acquisition policy for the park district in conjunction with the village. Kesler's proposal called for an additional 832 acres to be set aside for development of parks by 1995.

GEORGE GRULKE, chairman of the subcommittee studying future park sites, said Village Atty Jack Segel gave an opinion that general sites, rather than specific designations, had no legal standing.

Once a portion of land has been designated as a reserve park site, the park district has a one-year option to purchase the land should it come on the market for development.

The park district originally asked that 12 sites, including the Magnus Farm, Rolling Green Country Club and the Lutheran Home, be designated as future parks. The Kesler study enlarged upon the original request to encompass projected growth areas of the village until 1995.

Kesler said of the park district's original presentation, "It seems almost accidental where they placed them... they saw just the vacant land."

THE NEW PROPOSAL calls for the acquisition of new parks and enlargement of existing parks to be done in stages every five years until the park-population ratio is attained. He said, "Ideally, this should be updated annually. It should be a living document."

Grulke said he would consult further with Segel about specific designation requirements and set a meeting of park district representatives and affected landowners with the plan commission subcommittee for March 28.

Believe it—it's spring!

Today is the first full day of spring.

It officially began Wednesday at 7:07 p.m., when the sun made its yearly appearance over the equator, which is known as the vernal equinox.

In California Tuesday, specifically at San Juan Capistrano, the swallows returned, as they have for at least 175 years. They made the 3,000-mile flight from Argentina to the cheers of thousands of townspeople.

Local residents call it "Swallows Homecoming Day" ever since the birds began coming back to the same spot every year on the date since March 19, 1799.

Locally, area park districts and golf courses are preparing their grounds for the increase in outdoor sports and other activities.

Gardeners are preparing for better days ahead, culminated in the warm summer months when plants and flowers take full bloom.

But some people are wondering why anyone would even talk about spring.

"It's 35 degrees outside! What do you mean, spring?"

It's a business doing pleasure at Cooper Junior High

The new $2200 milkshake machine is a popular addition to the Cooper lunchroom.

Principal Larry Weaver hawks his wares, and school gets profits

by JILL BETTNER

"Step right up! Get'cher tasty ice cream bars, dee-licious chocolate milkshakes or wet yer whistle with a can of pop!"

The Barker could be Larry Weaver and the scene the cafeteria of Cooper Junior High School any day at noontime. Actually, the principal doesn't hawk the wares in the lunchroom, the students do. But Weaver is the brains behind a money-making scheme that is benefiting everybody at the Dist. 21 Buffalo Grove school.

Ice cream and other goodies are sold in most Dist. 21 lunchrooms to obtain extra revenue for activities and projects not covered by district funds. But at Cooper, the enterprising Weaver has expanded on the idea to offer students a variety of items and raise funds for many school improvements at the same time.

Cooper students are required to stay at school for the noon hour, either eating a hot lunch sold each day or bringing a bag lunch. Weaver said he felt the students should have a greater choice of menu and decided shortly after the school opened four years ago to check into selling items in the cafeteria.

MILK IS SOLD at all Dist. 21 schools, but to that Weaver added first ice cream bars, then fruit punch, and when the kids told him they'd like to have music in the lunchroom, a jukebox was installed.

When it became legal last December to sell "pop" in school cafeterias, a pop machine went in at Cooper. With revenue from the sale of the other items, the school purchased a $2,200 milkshake machine in January.

The pop and milkshake machines put the fruit punch stand out of business, Weaver said. The competition from the sale of the extra items also forced the company that supplies hot lunches recently to begin offering two entrees instead of one, he added.

Selling ice cream bars at 15 cents each, cans of pop at 15 cents, milkshakes at 30 cents and operating the jukebox at a cost of 10 cents per record, the school takes in about $500 per week. About 40 per cent is clear profit, according to Weaver.

IN THE PAST four years, "ice cream money," as Weaver calls it, has paid for carpeting the school's learning center ($3,000), the large sign in front of the school ($1,000), and landscaping ($800).

Goody revenue also provided the funds two years ago that allowed Cooper to offer vocational education way ahead of the other two junior high schools in the district. Home arts will not be offered at London and Holmes junior high schools until next fall when a district-wide program is to be implemented.

Cooper purchased almost $500 in shop materials and $400 in home economics equipment to set up vocational education classes as part of an elective program at the school.

In addition, the fund has paid for trophies and plaques, is used for entrance fees for cheerleaders and the drill teams when they enter contests and to partially defray the cost of uniforms.

The fund also paid the cost of providing athletic officials at sports events and transporting Cooper teams to other schools for two years, which Weaver estimated at about $3,000.

THE "ICE CREAM ACCOUNT" also functions as a sort of emergency fund, the principal said. If, for example, a student is unable to afford the cost of participating in a field trip, his way is paid out of the fund.

Weaver said parents have not objected to selling goodies in the lunchroom and don't appear worried that their children will blow their lunch money everyday.

"It just offers kids a greater variety of things they can purchase and the profits go back into things they would normally not have," he said. "I think junior high kids are pretty well able to make decisions about what they should eat, too. It gets old to have a milkshake and a Coke everyday. I think the parents like it that they have the variety more than they fear their kids aren't eating right."

Right now, there's a balance of nearly $5,000 in the account for ice cream sales alone. Revenue from pop sales now stands at $400 and the new milkshake machine is breaking even, Weaver said.

"Ice cream money" sign.

What's next? The principal is saving to install central air conditioning in the school or maybe purchase a small van to transport athletic teams.

Hersey

No school Friday due to basketball

There will be no school tomorrow at Hersey High School.

Students will be dismissed for the day so they will be able to watch their team vie for the championship in the Illinois State High School Basketball Tournament. School officials said yesterday two bus loads of students have already signed up to travel to Champaign tomorrow morning. Eight more buses have been requested.

The Huskies will compete in quarter-finals at 12:15 p.m. tomorrow against the Bloom Township High School team from Chicago Heights. The winner will go on to semi-finals Saturday at noon. Finals will be held Saturday at 8 p.m.

Hersey principal Roland Goins said students will not make up the school day during spring vacation or at the end of the school year. A pep rally is planned for the team at noon today and the players will leave for Champaign at 12:30 p.m. Goins said a homecoming celebration for the team is being planned for Sunday.

Village board gives cagers 'put on back'

The Hersey High School basketball team was given a pat on the back by the Mount Prospect Village Board for the team's victorious showing in the state superregionals Tuesday afternoon.

The trustees, meeting that night, unanimously approved a resolution wishing the team good luck in the Elite Eight tournament, which gets under way tomorrow in Champaign. About half of the Hersey student body lives in Mount Prospect.

Wheeling woman, 24, raped

A Wheeling woman, 24, was abducted from the lobby of her apartment building and taken to a deserted construction site where she was raped early Wednesday, Wheeling police said.

Police are looking for a man about six feet tall, 170 pounds, white and between age 22 and 25. He was driving a red or maroon older model Chevrolet or Ford, Police Lt. Ronald Nelson said.

The man, wearing a red-ski-type mask, grabbed the woman as she entered the lobby of her apartment building, about 12:05 a.m. police said. He reportedly held a six-inch knife to her throat and told her to cooperate.

Police said the attacker put a stocking hat over his victim's face and then led her outside to his automobile. The attacker then drove the woman to a construction site which police believe was at Tahoe Village, Buffalo Grove Road north of Hintz road.

Police said the woman was raped there and then returned to her own street. She ran to a neighbor's apartment and called police. This was about 12:35 a.m., police said.

Nelson said the name of the apartment complex was being withheld so as not to panic the residents. He said he would want the residents to form any kind of vigilante group to try and find the attacker.

$250,000 budget proposed by township officials

A budget of $250,095 for fiscal 1974-75 was proposed last night by the Wheeling Township Board of Auditors.

The proposed budget, subject to board approval next month after a public hearing, includes $191,245 for the town fund and $58,850 for the general assistance fund.

If approved, the budget will be an increase of $35,635 over last year's total budget of $214,460.

Township Assessor Marshall Theroux indicated that the tax rate on the proposed budget will "probably not change."

Last year residents of the township paid .028 per $100 assessed valuation. The board also approved a $4,020 allocation to its cemetery budget or a 16 per cent increase in last year's figure of $3,475.

"The increases are due to the rising cost of living and expenses," said Ethel Kolerus, township supervisor.

A township assessor's budget of $21,072 was also approved by the board. This represents an increase of $5,590 or a 36 per cent increase over last year's allocation of $15,482. This category does not include the assessor's salary.

Theroux, in his presentation of the budget, told board members that there has been an increase of Wheeling Township residents who come in for information on assessments.

"There's an average of 40 people a day who come to the assessor's office," he said. "We need a higher knowledge on the tax structure." He added that with the increase in the assessor's budget, a full-time deputy assessor could be hired.

Mrs. Kolerus recommended to the board that funding for youth programs be increased from $5,000 to $25,000 next fiscal year.

She also suggested an increase of $7,500 for office help to enable the township to hire a social worker to provide information and referral services.

The general assistance fund of $58,850 will be increased from last year's $51,300 because of skyrocketing costs of living and expenses, said Mrs. Kolerus. The township will have to pay more for food, rent, clothing, medical care and other services it provides for the needy.

Music meeting

Music for Youth, a non-profit parents organization which sponsors the string instrument program in Arlington Heights School Dist. 25, will hold its monthly board meeting at 8 p.m. Thursday at South Junior High School.

The meeting will be held in Room 162 at the school, 301 W. South.

Deadline Friday for school filing

Friday will be the last day to submit nominating petitions for the Arlington Heights School Dist. 25 election.

To date three candidates have filed petitions for the April 13 election. They are incumbents Joan Klusmann and Robert Kazlowski and independent Richard Hammerli.

Petitions are available for those who wish to file candidacy at the business office of the administration building, 301 W. South St. or at any School Dist. 25 school.

The local scene

Lenten program

"All With the Family" is the theme for the 1974 Lenten program series currently being held at the Southminster United Presbyterian Church of Arlington Heights, E. Central Road and S. Dryden Place.

The series features Sunday evening family potluck dinners and a variety of programs for adults and children.

Richard Poethig, a former Presbyterian missionary to the Philippines, will talk Sunday at 6:30 p.m. on the social, economical, political and religious issues of that country. Poethig is affiliated with the Presbyterian Institute for Industrial Relations in Chicago.

The final Lenten program will feature John Burkhardt who will present "Special Meals and Sacred People" on March 31 at 6:30 p.m.

Burkhardt is a professor of systemic theology at McCormick Seminary in Chicago. He served as the Southminster's minister before Rev. Robert W. Gish was installed earlier this year.

Separate film programs will be presented to children on both March 24 and 31. Potluck dinners will begin at 5:30 p.m. on both dates.

Paper drive

Arlington Heights Girl Scout Troop 193 will conduct a paper drive Saturday from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. at the Miner Junior High School parking lot, 1101 E. Miner.

Magazines and books must be tied separately from newspapers. For curbside pick-up call 259-3342 for further arrangements.

Girl Scout cookies also may be ordered at this time for $1 a box.

St. James Parish will sponsor a series of lectures on transactional analysis by psychotherapist Larry Kokkelenberg.

The first lecture is scheduled Friday April 5 in St. James Elementary School, 821 N. Arlington Heights Rd. Other sessions are planned April 19 and May 3.

Suburb library system to seek $178,000

The North Suburban Library System (NSLS), of which the Arlington Heights Memorial Library is a member, will apply for a federal grant of approximately $178,000 through the federal Library Service and Construction Act.

Of that amount, the 34 individual libraries in the system will receive 5 cents per capita or $54,000 and the system itself will receive 10 cents per capita or $124,000 based on a population of 1,240,000 which NSLS serves.

The Arlington Heights Memorial Library will receive more than $3,500 on the 5 cents per capita rate.

Robert McClarren, director of NSLS, said Wednesday that funds will be used primarily for augmenting adult and children nonfiction collections, a regulation imposed by the state.

"THE STATE FEELS that this money is additional to local library budgets and should be used for strengthening those areas," said McClarren. "Many libraries are tempted to just buy what's in popular demand when there should be strong serious collections."

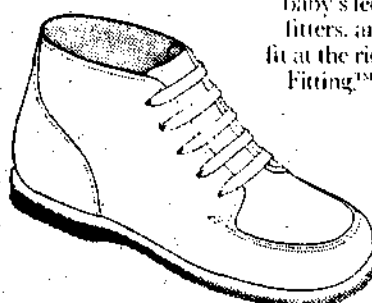

The regulation also states that no duplicates of materials may be purchased and not more than 20 per cent of the money should be spent on children's materials.

Funding also will go to the system's

Suburban Audio Visual Service, which provides social or service agencies with movie films and the Central Serials Service which provides access to all periodicals published.

Member libraries of NSLS profited from a similar federal grant in 1972, receiving about the same amount, $178,000, as this year. McClarren said he did not know when the money will be released.

Village leans toward subsidy for bus firm

Trustee Alice Harms, said she hadn't had time to think about the subsidy question.

The village board is scheduled to meet Monday night to formally consider financial aid for Metron.

Without an operating subsidy, Lulsada says the service will end almost immediately.
